ALWAYS USE OUR

DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION. If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT. Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE. The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or, if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

B. HOLLINS

"G. E. H., Esq., June 28th, 1910, to B.H. Dear Sir,—Birds to hand, with thanks. I have tried well over 20 firms of bird dealers, and yours is but the second from whom I have had complete satisfaction, and also businesslike methods of answering per return. The other dealer whom I trusted kept his birds in such warm quarters, that I did not like to get them from him. Your prices are strictly moderate. I am very pleased with the birds you sent to-day also. H. J., Esq., London, to B. H.,—I received the birds at 10 o'clock this morning, and are none the worse for journey. I did not expect to get such a specimen pair of birds for the price; it is quite evident you know how to keep customers. I am sending you another order shortly. I went to a large firm in London, and they asked me 4/6 for a pair that were in a fearful state. I may say a friend of mine in London recommended me to send to you as he is very pleased." Meeting of committee held on July 2nd, at the Northgate Hotel, Rawson Place, Bradford, Mr. A. Hirst in the chair. The following new members were elected:—Messrs. W. H. Ball (Halifax), G. R. Pawson (Leeds), F. Rhodes (Bradford). Result of ballot re rescinding additions to Rule 15: 29 for rescinding, 9 against. Patronage of the O.N.P.C. for season 1910-11 granted to the following:—Oct. 1st, City of Bradford (Mr. J. Robson, judge); Oct. 8th, Morecambe (Mr. Trengove); Oct. 15th, Leeds (Mr. J. C. Barnes); Oct. 21st, 22nd, Newcastle (Mr. J. H. Roe); Oct. 29th, Huddersfield, Nov. 12th, Barnsley (Mr. A. Hirst); Nov. 18, Hull (Mr. J. Robson); Dec. 9th, 10th, Halifax (Mr. H. W. Battye). Other applications were left over for further particulars. "That members (whom secretary will notify) whose subscriptions are in arrears for 1909-10, be struck off the list of membership, if no reply to secretary's communication." Decided to leave allotting of prizes and printing of rule-books to next meeting. A grant of £1 1s. was made to secretary for services rendered during the past year.—O. MITCHELL, Hon. Sec.

LONDON FEDERATION OF C.B.S.

Meeting of the Council held June 17th. Present Mr. R. L. Crisp (in the chair), Messrs. Tyson, H. W. Tomsett, J. C. Birch, W. Penton, R. P. Harper, H. E. Tringham, J. Bray, W. G. Sanders, W. Clark, H. W. Cook, F. W. Thorpe, W. H. Mugford, F. Boxall, J. Turner, H. Smith, W. J. Honeysett, J. Dewhurst, B. B. Allen, A. W. Curtis, and P. Adamthwaite, Sec.—The Chairman (Mr. R. L. Crisp) said he wished to thank the societies for the honour they had done him in electing him as chairman for the current year. He hoped that the same courtesy which his predecessor, Mr. Tringham, had enjoyed at the hands of the Council would be extended to him. He felt he could not let the occasion go by without reference to the splendid manner in which Mr. Tringham had always met them, and he hoped nothing would stand in the way of his enjoying the confidence of the Council; and in turn he would do all he could to carry out the duties of the chair to the satisfaction of all. (Loud applause.)

Mr. F. W. Thorpe (treasurer) presented his balance-sheet and report for the year 1909. He called the attention of the Council to the fact that the balance sheet had been referred back from the March Council in order that the signature of the second auditor might be obtained. The balance sheet, he said, with the exception of one item, stood exactly as presented in March, the difference being the transfer of the bill for general printing (which on December 31st, 1909, remained unpaid) to a liability. He thought the Council was to be congratulated on the fact that on a twelve months' actual working as an executive body, they could show a balance sheet with only a loss of some 32s. No one knew better than he, and he was sure the auditors would testify to the fact, that there was an enormous amount of clerical labour involved in the first year's working of the Council, and he hoped the Council would agree with him that everything had been done to keep the expenses down to the minimum. Mr. Thorpe caused a ripple of merriment to run down the Council when he remarked, "It is the old old story, gentlemen, postage and printing, that are the bugbears." But he was satisfied that even this had been done as economically as was consistent with proper working. In conclusion, Mr. Thorpe said he could promise the Council that now the working of the Federation had passed through its birth, the expenses would not be so heavy. (Applause.)

Mr. Cook, in supporting Mr. Thorpe, said that he, as one of the auditors, cordially endorsed all Mr. Thorpe had said in regard to the expenses being kept as low as possible.—Mr. Mugford also concurred.—After discussion, the balance sheet and report, as presented, were adopted, and the Secretary was instructed to send a copy to each delegate when summoning the next meeting of the Council.

Election of Treasurer: Mr. F. W. Thorpe was again unanimously elected to fill the position of treasurer for the year 1910.

The Secretary reported that in connection with the insurance scheme of the Federation he had received some 40 or 50 requests for books of certificates, and hoped that as the scheme got more widely known the members would take advantage of the benefits extended to them.—The Chairman asked the co-operation of all the secretaries of societies to help the scheme.

Mr. Crisp reported that the sub-committee appointed to consider railway matters had met, and recommended to the Council that so far as they were able to gather from information supplied to them, the best means of inducing the railways to grant the concessions desired would be by way of petitions to be signed by as many individual fanciers as possible. Experience had shown, he said, that the mere presenting of a petition from single governing bodies had been of little avail, and that the course now suggested seemed to be the only one possible. It was agreed, nem. con., that the secretary should get into touch with the Cage Bird and Yorkshire Unions, with a view to getting the petitions circulated.

Defaulting Members: Mr. Harper, on behalf of the North London C.B.A., brought several names before the Council for non-payment of subscriptions.—An animated discussion followed, but in the end the Council found that as the society in question had under its rules struck the names off the list of members, it could not see its way to proceed further against the defaulters.

The motion standing in the Chairman's name, "That the Federation grant specials for competition," was well received by the Council. As the matters involved were likely to take some time in discussing, on the motion of Mr. Curtis, seconded by Mr. Dewhurst, it was resolved that a sub-committee, consisting of the following, should consider the best means of granting the specials, and report to the Council: Messrs. Tyson, Curtis, Dewhurst, Smith, and Tringham.—It was further moved by Mr. Harper, seconded by Mr. Cook, and resolved, "That the sub-committee also consider the question of holding a Federation show.—The levy per member was again fixed at one penny.—P. ADAMTHWAITE, Hon. Sec.

GLASGOW (West End) C.B.C.

Usual monthly meeting, held in Clarendon Hall, July 9th. Two new members were enrolled, Messrs. David Linn and James McMeekin. The President asked for specials for F.F. show, when seven were kindly handed in by Messrs. A. Crawford, G. G. Henderson, C. Campbell, A. Bibby, A. Miller, W. Proudfoot, and Mr. Carlyle. Mr. Carlyle is greatly interested in the Fancy.—W. PROUDFOOT, Sec.

PLUMSTEAD & WOOLWICH C.B.S

General meeting, held at headquarters, Trinity Schools, Beresford Street, Woolwich, on July 2nd. Mr. Best having resigned the chair through pressure of business, Mr. Hartland was elected chairman and Mr. Hazell vice-chairman, and Messrs. Allen, McLellan, and Miller committeemen, in place of Messrs. Meades, Hawkes, and Tibley. It was decided to hold another young stock show on July 30th, Mr. Hazell being appointed judge. Mr. C. A. House has promised to give his lecture on inbreeding on July 16th.—DIBLEY AND MEADES, Hon. Secs.

DERBY C.B.S.

Meeting, held at the Derwent Hotel, June 28th. It was decided to hold a special meeting on July 23rd, at 7 p.m., to arrange a series of interesting and instructive meetings for the autumn and winter session. We give a hearty and cordial invitation to all bird-lovers in this town and district to attend. Members please note that specimens of the two new challenge cups for their approval will be submitted at this meeting. We are pleased to say that we are steadily making new members. Derby was voted by us as the place selected for the Cage Bird Union meeting, and we thank our Sheffield friends for their selection of our town. It is a capital railway centre, and easily reached by delegates from the remotest districts. We have been visiting some of the prominent breeders in this district, but there does not seem to be much success. Some have a few smart youngsters out though, especially a rattling good Cinnamon, bred by Judge Bexson; we hear it is the best he has ever bred. We have excellent prospects now of our society forging ahead. So fanciers please rally round us; we have cleared the mud from our feet, so help us to put Derby in its old place as one of the premier societies.—WHARAM AND STEVENS, Secs.

CITY AND SUBURBAN A.C.B.

Meeting at headquarters, 60, Paddington Street, July 11th, with Mr. A. W. Curtis in the chair. Letters were read from the Secretary Queen's Park C.B.S., asking permission for the use of our design for staging, and the Secretary of the Institute, in connection with the future of the hall. Miss Knott (Streatham) and Mr. L. H. Drnett were nominated for membership. Prize money, etc., amounting to £7 11s. 4d., and special prizes won at the recent Young Bird Show were paid over. A tie taking place for a special prize between Mrs. Weston and W. Francis (which in this case was not covered by the rules), resulted in Mrs. Weston giving way to Mr. Francis. A silver-plated cup, and a silver-plated Irish rose bowl on plinths, presented by the Hon. Mrs. Bourke, for competition at the annual show, and to be won outright, were on view, the same eliciting the admiration of the members. A vote of thanks was accorded to Messrs. A. W. Curtis, G. E. Weston, G. Sayteh, B. Parkhurst, A. W. Hart, and Master Pickard for services rendered at the Y.B. Show, also to Mrs. Wyse, Miss Gracie Shepherd, and Mrs. Maher, and to Miss Rose Shephard for her gift for so many years of lunches and teas. At this stage Mr. A. W. Curtis rose to mention the services rendered by Mr. Weston as acting secretary in the absence of Mr. Wynn. This gave Mr. Wynn a long-looked-for opportunity of exploding the fallacy that the position of this Association was due to any individual effort; they neither relied upon any single member for entries for their shows, nor for any individual to "captain" their ship, as he was certain that 50 per cent of the membership were well qualified for that position. In their great collective ability alone lay their secret. An interesting draw of questions then took place. At the conclusion, a vote of thanks was accorded to Mr. J. Burton for his generosity in supplying the show-room with choice and suitable flowers. A vote of thanks to the Chairman closed the meeting.—VICTOR WYNN, Hon. Sec.

BORDER CITY (Carlisle) O.S.

Monthly meeting, held at headquarters, July 6th. Correspondence was read. Young bird show schedule was drawn up, show on August 1st. The following are the classes: Border Fancy 5, Norwich 4, Yorkshire 1, Mules or Hybrids 1, British 3, and Foreign 2. The chairman reminded members that subscriptions were due next month, and also that to make our open show (on Oct. 26th and 27th) a bigger success, we must all work together, and not leave it to a few. Next rumble July 24th. Route again left in hands of Mr. Davidson. The secretary will notify members through the Fancy Press.—JOHN C. BELL, Sec.

CITY OF WAKEFIELD O.S.

Meeting held July 9th, at Crown and Anchor Hotel, Mr. J. Isherwood in the chair. It was proposed and carried that the minute relating to classes for first feather show be rescinded, and classes be revised as the following: Yorks. cl. yell., Yorks. tkd. yell., Yorks. mkd. or variegated yell., Yorks. cl. buff, Yorks. tkd. buff, Yorks. mkd. or variegated buff, Norwich cl. yell., Nor. tkd. yell., Nor. mkd. or variegated yell., Nor. cl. buff, Nor. tkd. buff, and Nor. mkd. or variegated. The show is to be held on July 23rd, when Mr. Farrar, of Leeds, will judge. It was proposed that a special meeting be called on July 16th, at 7.30, to consider the proposed revised classes.—C. T. PARKES, Assist Sec.

ROCHDALE (Good Intent) C.B.S.

Half-yearly meeting held at Temperance Club. A good muster of members turned up. Having received a letter from Mr. Lythgoe as regards the Cage Bird Union making suitable arrangements with the Yorkshire Union, and this being mainly the reason that we resigned, it was unanimously agreed that we rejoin the Cage Bird Union, and that we hold our open show on Nov. 5th with Messrs. Roe and W. Hardy as judges. The show will be held in the old place—the Parish Church Schools. All visitors know there is not a better adapted or better lighted place in England. Now we are starting to work hard to beat last year's record—511 entries for a one-day show. Will societies please note this date and avoid clashing.—WM. ADAMS, Sec.

SHETTLESTON AND DIS. C.B.S.

Usual monthly meeting held in Houston's Restaurant, 11th June. Mr. Marr presided over a good turn-out of members. It was agreed, owing to the holidays, to postpone the July meeting and table show of young birds and British birds till August 13th. Classes for table show: Young Scotch Fancy, Crest or Crest-bred, Plainhead, Border Fancy, Mule, or Hybrid, British birds, any variety Finch, and any other variety British. A handsome silver medal is to be given by the society for most points in young birds, and a handsome silver medal (given by Mr. Heudrie) for most points in British birds. It was agreed to make August 13th the closing date for accepting new members. I hope this report will meet the eyes of all. The fanciers in the district wishing to join us must send in names on or before that date.—ANDREW BURY, 36, Balgair-terr., Shettleston.

CINNAMON-MARKED YORKS.C.C.

Committee meeting, held July 9th, at Market Tavern, Bradford, the president, Mr. J. Hartley, in the chair. The business of allotting patronage presented considerable difficulty, owing to the clashing of dates. Sincere regret was expressed when three of the leading Yorkshire clubs had to be omitted, but this proceeding has its advantages as well as its disadvantages, in the present case at any rates. Our patronage has been granted 'twixt Tyne and Thames, which covers a very considerable part of old England, and will no doubt help to bring more to the front this charming and elusive variety of the Yorkshire Canary. The clubs receiving our patronage took the following rotation:—Oct. 8, Shipley, judge Mr. W. Cruise; Oct. 15, Laisterdyke, Mr. A. Hirst; Oct. 21 and 22, Newcastle-on-Tyne, Mr. J. Bailey; Oct. 28 and 29, Manchester and Northern Counties, Mr. H. W. Battye; Nov. 19, Great Horton, Mr. J. Greaves; Nov. 25, 26, 28, London C.B.A.; Dec. 2, 3, Brighouse, Mr. J. Hartley; Dec. 9, 10, Halifax, Mr. T. Bennett; and Jan. 7, Queensbury, Mr. R. Sutcliffe. The next part of the business consisted in the committee gratefully acknowledging the generous support to the special prizes fund by the following gentlemen: Messrs. T. Sandiford (silver cup), H. H. Towers, A. Cooper, P. Drake and Son, F. Allen, W. Crabtree, R. Garnett, R. Halliday, J. Hartley, T. Bentley, A. Hirst, W. Richmond, and Mr. J. W. Ramsden (who has promised two silver-plated cruets—one for the champion exhibitors, and the other for the novice members, points to count only with birds moulted solely on Mr. Ramsden's peppers). Mr. P. Mason (Windhill) has given a prize, value £1 1s., for most points gained by unflighted Cinnamon marked birds, bred by exhibitor. The following gentlemen were admitted as new members (which is very good evidence of the widening influence of our special variety) Messrs. T. C. Crawhall (Newcastle-on-Tyne), G. Hall (Dewsbury), E. Whittaker (Dewsbury), T. P. Baxter (Runcorn), R. N. Williams (Chester), W. Rothery (Cleckheaton), and E. Murrell (Morton). Will any other fanciers desiring to join our club apply at once in order to have their names and addresses in the Year-book, which is in course of preparation?—GRAYSHON AND ALLEN, Secs.

NEWCASTLE C.B.S.

Monthly meeting, held July 7th, Mr. Currah in the chair. We had a splendid attendance of members, and an excellent meeting. The secretary announced that we had been granted the patronage of the Open Norwich P.C., the Yorks C.C., and National Green Marked Y.C.C., also of the Border Fancy Club. The chairman then called upon Mr. Cobb to give his lecture upon the Belgian and Scotch Fancy Canaries of to-day. Mr. Cobb dealt with the subject as only one could who was in intimate touch with the varieties. The lecturer attributed the falling off in the Belgian Fancy to the good birds of this variety being used for improving the Scotch Fancy. He hoped that it would regain some of its lost position, and advised breeders to breed them and not use the Belgian-Scotch cross. He told us he had found them as good breeders as any other variety, and gave us the standard by which they are judged. He treated the Scotch Fancy in the same way, and compared it with the old "Glasgow Dou," from which he said it had parted company. Several questions were asked, and answered. The chairman stated that the lecture would not be complete without a few words from our old friend Mr. Little; so Jimmy told us that the Scotch Fancy was as hardy as any variety to take up, and advised the members to do so. We next had a most instructive lecture from Mr. T. Taylor (Gateshead) on the breeding of Crests and crest-breds. Mr. Taylor dealt with his subject as only a master hand could do. He advised patience and perseverance and a study of the birds as the sure road to success in the breeding of exhibition Crests and crest-breds. Taking each separately he told of the faults and good points, and specially emphasised neatness and the judicious use of yellow blood in one's strain. At the conclusion an interesting debate centred round the question of double-cresting, the chairman and secretary taking part, also Mr. T. Robson and others. A hearty vote of thanks was passed to both lecturers and everyone went home delighted. At our next monthly meeting we expect another treat—Mr. Alfred Grey, of Morpeth, is to give us a lecture on "My experiences with the Norwich Canary." Now, members, be sure you have no other appointment for that night or you will regret it ever after.—T. E. CRAWHALL, Sec.

BRISTOL C.B.S.

Monthly meeting, held at headquarters, July 6th, Mr W. H. Manley presiding over another splendid attendance. Two new members were elected, Messrs. Phillips (Portishead), and G. Rogers (Kingswood). After considerable discussion the members passed an unanimous vote on the Norwich Cup dispute, which I hope will be received in good grace by those interested. Will members kindly note that our next meeting will be held on Aug. 10th, and not the 3rd, and that all birds to compete for the British Cup will have to be nominated then. A lecture on Colour Feeding is also promised for that evening.—A. R. A. CARTER, Assistant Sec.

SHEFFIELD C.B.S.

Usual monthly meeting held July 7th, in the Wentworth Cafe, Mr. A. Bradshaw in the chair. There was very little business to transact. The secretary read a letter from Mr. P. Walsh, re the reporting of our shows in the local papers. It was decided that we send the local papers a syllabus and bill of all our shows, with a view to our shows being reported, also to send Mr. Walsh a report of our decision. We regret to announce the resignation of Mr. W. H. Spencer, his reason for resigning being his objection to rule 22 of the Cage Bird Union, which he finds of no benefit to him. His resignation was accepted with regret. Mr. Kelly was elected on the committee in his place. After some discussion on our rules, it was decided that the whole subject matter of the rules and shows be left to the committee to report to the September meeting. The next meeting is on "Breeding experiences of members." Mr. J. Solesbury was elected a new member.—J. WOOLHOUSE, Sec.

SOME BREEDING RESULTS OF THE 1910 SEASON.

Notes on the results of the present breeding season, or of any interesting happenings, are invited from the secretaries of societies and others, and must be accompanied by the sender's name and address in every case.

Oxford and District C.B.S.

The following are some of the breeding results of our members ascertained during the show. Mr. Lees has about 20 and another round to hatch; Mr. Lewin, about 50, and a round to hatch; Mr. Oliffe, about 60; Mr. Cripps, about 40; Mr. George about 30; Mr. Wren 28, and a round to hatch; Mr. Holliday, about 20; Mr. Gough, about 25; and myself, 15 and another round to hatch. Mr. White, with his Hybrid pairs, has had several fertile eggs, but has not reared any birds. The general complaints seem to be bad feeding hens and the "dead in shell" trouble.—A. F. FIFIELD, acting secretary.

THE BIRD-LOVER'S LIBRARY.

"BRITISH NESTING BIRDS." W. Percival Westell, F.L.S., M.B.O.U. Messrs. J. M. Dent and Sons, London. Price, 1s. net.

Mr. Westell's latest book on birds—"British Nesting Birds"—purports to be "a complete record of every species which nests in the British Isles"; and this it undoubtedly is. Here is an inexpensive and handy book that should prove especially useful to those whose interest in wild and other bird life leads them out into the country in search of the nests, and for the purpose of studying the habits, of the many different species breeding in our isles. The author finds, he says, that there are many people interested in birds who rarely have an opportunity, or the necessary knowledge, or enthusiasm, for studying them; and it is primarily for such, and for young people generally, that the book has been written.

Each species of bird dealt with is considered on a set plan. First, local names are given; then the haunts, nesting periods, sites of nests, and materials used; and the eggs, food, and chief features of the birds are described. Several useful matters have been introduced in the forepart of the work from the author's other books, such as "a list of summer migrants ranged somewhat in the order in which they appear"; "where our summer migrants spend the winter," etc. The value of the work is considerably enhanced by the illustrations, coloured and half-tone, which are well done.

Use our Picture Postcards.

The Young Naturalist.

Prizes of 1s. and two of 6d. each will be given weekly for the best three anecdotes about birds written on postcards. Competitors must be under sixteen years of age, and state whence stories are taken. Two stars indicate the Winning Contribution; one star the runners up.

A Tragedy in Birdland.

A day or two ago I noticed a peculiar appearance about one of the innumerable Martins' nests under the eaves of a barn in a farmyard. Upon obtaining a ladder I climbed up to see what could be the matter, and there found the owners quite dead. Apparently they were both in the nest, and, being startled in some way, made a rush for the exit together. Here they became tightly wedged.—J. F. HUCKVALE (aged 14), 35, Rother Street, Stratford-upon-Avon.

*A Knowing Hen.

Last year, when our birds were breeding, we had a hen named "Judy." This bird knew its name very well. When they were making their nest they kept on fighting because the hen thought it was done wrongly. As soon as it was done "Judy" pulled it to pieces. They made it again, but this time the cock bird pulled it to pieces. This went on for three days; they then settled down, and we had some good youngsters.—B. BRUNO (aged 13½), 22, Bertram Road, Bush Hill Park, Enfield.

*A Blackbird's Epitaph.

A neighbour of ours has a very fine cherry-tree, from which the fruit was sometimes stolen by birds. He borrowed a gun to shoot them. He killed a fine Blackbird, and sorry for what he had done, our neighbour had the bird stuffed, and under it the following lines:—

The world was mine, and free to range,
My life and songs were merry;
But world, and songs, and life are gone,
Because I stole a cherry.

Ah! mortal man! my folly blame,
But be not over merry;
Eve's apple once your ruin proved,
While mine was but a cherry.

God feeds the Ravens when they cry,
His birds are blithe and merry,
But man has such an envious eye,
He shoots us for a cherry.

Sent by Mary Ford (age 12), 15, Elms Avenue, Eastbourne.

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. It kills all insects, harmless to everything else.

We are still forging ahead, writes Mr. W. R. King, hon. sec. of the Portsmouth C.B.S. Our membership exceeds 50, up to the time of writing, which is not so bad, considering we have only two meetings as yet to our credit.

Mr. J. F. Dewar, the popular judge, writes: "I am duly in receipt of sample of your pure Tasteless Pepper. After comparing it with samples I have by me, I can compliment you on having the richest coloured and finest pepper I ever saw, while the fact that it is guaranteed pure ought to commend its use to all fanciers who value their birds' health. I have used none other than your feed for many years, and the results have always been satisfactory. I wish for none better." Ramsden's pure peppers are the only peppers advertised with a full guarantee under Food and Merchandise Acts. They are the finest that money can buy. Birds thrive on Ramsden's Tasteless Pepper. Sold only in canisters, and full weight guaranteed. Insist on having Ramsden's Peppers, and refuse substitutes offered by traders in order to secure a large profit. Owing to purity and depth of colour, Ramsden's Peppers prove to be the cheapest in use of any peppers on the market. (Advt.)

Our membership is still increasing, which is very gratifying, writes Mr. Robt. Leitch, secretary of the Belmont and Dis. C.B.S. Young birds, I regret to state, are very scarce here, owing to the hens failing to feed their young.

Will secretaries and fanciers in general in future kindly communicate with Mr. Jas. Cope at 28, Monmouth Street, Werneth, Oldham, on behalf of the Oldham and Dis. C.B.S., as I have resigned the position of secretary, writes Mr. Fred. Steeple.

The young bird show of the South Shields C.B.S. will be held on July 23, at the Eureka Hotel, Frederick Street, writes Mr. Jas. Barrass, secretary. Mr. Joseph Turner will not be able to judge; probably we will be able to have Mr. Sanderson, of Jarrow.

I saw with peculiar pleasure the picture of my young yellow Norwich which appeared upon the front page of the current issue of CAGE BIRDS writes Mr. F. J. Martin (Battersea, London, S.W.). I tender my appreciation to you and to your able artist, Mr. Norman.

At our last meeting it was decided to hold a table show for members' young birds on July 23, birds to be staged by 5 o'clock, writes Mr. B. Peake, secretary of the Hanley and Dis. C.B.S. There will be no entry fee. A meeting will be held after judging. Mr. W. Mundell will judge our open show.

The Bath Twitterers, Cooers, and Chanticleers will be visiting Bournemouth on July 21st, writes Mr. W. H. Knowles, of the Bath and District F.A., and will be pleased to fraternise with any Bournemouth or visiting "Twitterers" on that occasion. They take tea at the Derby Hotel, Triangle.

The secretaryship of the London and Provincial O.S. (now held pro. tem. by Mr. J. W. Ramsden) is likely to be filled in the near future, we understand, the present secretary of one of the most flourishing of the younger metropolitan societies having expressed his willingness to undertake the duties.

The rules and a list of the names and addresses of the members are contained in the handbook of the Midland Roller Canary Club. The balance-sheet of the club and the judging standard are also included. Particulars as to membership may be had of the Sec., Mr. J. H. Willows, Lindum House, Wednesbury.

Owing to the unavoidable absence of Mr. Walton, Mr. Noakes, the partner in the firm of the well-known exhibitors, Messrs. Walton and Noakes, very kindly acted as judge at our annual First Feather show of the Coventry O.S., writes Mr. J. Shaddock, the secretary. This was omitted in my last week's report.

Kindly note for the benefit of secretaries and readers of CAGE BIRDS in general, that I am reluctantly compelled to relinquish the secretaryship of the Rochdale O.C., owing to my taking up another position, writes Mr. J. Butterworth. My successor is Mr. R. Blincoe, 154, Drake Street, Rochdale, who I have no doubt will be well able to follow me.

As I am tendering my resignation to the Nelson C.B.S. as its hon. secretary on Tuesday evening next, July 19, writes Mr. John England, I request that all communications be sent to the assistant secretary, Mr. John Gregson, 99, Vernon Street, Nelson, until a successor in the secretarial office is appointed, when readers of CAGE BIRDS will be duly notified.

Kindly thank for me Mr. E. Fox (Long Eaton) for his words of sympathy in CAGE BIRDS of June 25th, also Mr. W. Cottingham (secretary) and the members of Hyson Green C.B.S., Mr. Taylor (secretary) and the members of the Huthwaite C.B.S., and other cage bird fanciers and friends, for their kind letters of sympathy in my recent sad bereavement, writes Mr. J. Bertie (Mapperley).

At our next meeting, to be held July 19th, writes Mr. H. Foden, secretary of the Ashton-under-Lyne and Dis. C.B.S., there will be a table show for Yorkshires; judge, Mr. J. Sharples, of Oldham. It has also been decided to have an outing to Glossop on Sunday, July 17th. The train will leave Guide Bridge station at 1.56 (excursion). We shall be pleased to see any friends wishing to go.

Mr. J. Holroyd (Great Horton) will judge our young bird show this Saturday, July 16, writes Mr. J. Lewis, hon. secretary, Spen Valley C.B.S. On Sunday, July 17, we are having a ramble via Nob Wood and Bingley. The train leaves L. and Y. station 1 o'clock. On Monday 18th, at our meeting, Mr. E. Clegg (Dewsbury) will give a practical demonstration on cage making, when we hope all members and friends will try to be present.

Mr. Mabey won most points, writes Mr. G. Harwood, hon. secretary of the Metropolitan C.B.A., in the champion cup section at our show on June 23; Mrs. Macgregor won most points for the ladies' teapot; Mrs. Lovegrove was the runner-up in both sections. Mr. Ward was the winner in the novices, and Mr. King the runner-up. The show was a great success, and there was a good "gate," which we attribute to our advertising in CAGE BIRDS, which brought us out a financial profit.

Will members of the Leicester Hand-in-Hand C.B.S. please endeavour to attend our next meeting on July 19, when Mr. Noakes will give his lecture entitled "The Norwich Plainhead"? writes Mr. J. E. Wood, the secretary. This lecture has been postponed twice through members failing to turn up, but in fairness to them I must say that on both nights the weather has been wretched. Now let us have a good attendance this time, and show the lecturer that we appreciate his efforts.

Mr. H. J. Hawes, well known in metropolitan birdy circles, has decided to leave England, and informs us that his house 153, Lansdowne Road, Forest Gate), will shortly be vacant, and that any fancier desiring a change of residence, will find in the garden there a really good, well planned bird-house. This is something seldom met with free of charge.

I find that many of my correspondents forward their birds by parcel post, writes Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., so that it often happens at the end of the week that I receive their letters on the Saturday, and the bird on the Monday morning, generally in an unfit state for examination. I would like to suggest to them that both letter and bird be sent by letter post. The difference in cost of postage would be practically nil for small birds, and at the same time it will prevent disappointment.

Yorkshire men, don't you use any colour-feed but Sandiford's. Supplied this week: Mr. W. H. Shackleton, 56lbs.; Mr. W. Binns, Crystal Palace winner, and who had hottest Yorkshires alive, 30lbs.; Mr. A. Ambler, another big champion, 14lbs.; Mr. W. Wilcock, 56lbs.; Messrs. Thomas, Amblerthorne, 160lbs.; Edmondson and Son, 56lbs.; Mallinson and Son, 30lbs.; Norwich and Cinnamon champions, J. E. Davies, N.P.C. cup winner, and winner over 60 firsts, 60lbs.; E. Baker, 120lbs.; Sam Cook, 60lbs.; W. Vardy, 70lbs.; E. Fox, Beardall and Walker, Cleminson and Taylor, J. Howard, W. Dormer, 130lbs.; Mrs. Deacon, who took all prizes in Cinnamons last Palace Show. Big Scotch winners; Mr. Smeaton, 60lbs.; Mr. Watson, 14lbs.; A. G. Cameron, Scaife, Howie, Jarvis, etc.; all above had large quantities. These are just a few I can remember. I could fill this paper with large breeders' and exhibitors' names I have supplied this year, all sending grand testimonials. See advert. columns for prices. Can be had in tins, ½d. lb. extra. (Advt.)

Southern Yorkshire C.C.

Will societies desirous of having the Southern Yorkshire Canary Club's patronage make application for same at once, stating dates and judges, also whether they are applying for champion or novice patronage or both?—J. W. RENNIE, hon. secretary, The Junction Hotel, Andover, Hants.

Readers intending to compete in the competition for which we offer £20 cash and other prizes, should make their final effort at once, and send in the coupons at an early date; the final closing day is Wednesday, July 27 next. Full particulars will be found on page 11 of this week's issue.

The O.N.P.C.

The secretary of the Open Norwich Plainhead Club will be pleased to receive applications from societies desirous of the club's patronage, whose shows are held on the following dates:—November 26, December 3, or any date after December 10, 1910.—O. MITCHELL, hon. secretary, 13, Lodge Terrace, Bowling, Bradford.

The Norwich Plainhead Club.

Will members of the committee kindly note that owing to the holidays in various districts it will be impossible to hold a representative meeting until the third Saturday in August, and that I will let them know time and place in due course? May I also remind members that subscriptions are now due?—JNO. HOPKINS, hon. secretary, Norwich Plainhead Club.

Northern Yorkshire C.C.

We are shortly about to allot our patronage, and I shall be glad to have applications from all societies within the four northern counties who give five open champion classes, or two novice classes for Yorkshires, writes Mr. T. C. Crawhall, hon secretary of the Northern Yorkshire C.C. With one exception last season the shows were well patronised by our members, and interest is keener this year than ever, as several novices have gone up into champion section. We have a cup for most points over six selected shows, and silver medals at each show. The patronage will repay societies who put our classes on.

The Love-birds.

A Bradford young lady, recently out on her honeymoon, tells the following story against herself: We tried to keep the railway carriage to ourselves, but at Shipley the guard opened the door, and, in spite of Fred's scowls, lifted a small girl into our compartment. She was a little girl of about seven, and she sat on the edge of the seat and stared all about her. "What is the matter?" asked Fred. "I don't see the birds," piped the little creature, plaintively. "Birds! What birds?" queried Fred. "When I came from the other train your guard said to my guard, 'I'll shove her along with the love-birds.'"

The Feeding and Treatment of British Birds for Exhibition.

A Lecture delivered by Mr. GEO. MORTLOCK before the North London C.B A. on June 16.

Our Secretary, Mr. Harper, has requested me to give you a paper on British Birds and Mule Breeding. Now, this is a tall order for one evening, as well as a task for anyone to try to tell you (or most of you) something you do not already know about this particular branch of the Fancy. I am sure there are a number of members of this society present who are better versed with, and could do greater justice to, this subject than I; I will, therefore, endeavour to enlighten those who are not so advanced in this class of cage birds. I also wish to say that I do not intend to deal with Mule breeding, but will, if it is your wish, relate to you at some future time my experiences with this; but if there are any questions I can answer later on that may help any of you who may be trying your luck this season, I shall be pleased to do so.

Condition Goes a Long Way.

I do not wish to convey to you that my treatment of the various British birds I have kep. is the best, but I will try to explain to you the manner in which I treat my birds, and I am sure that any of you who have seen my birds on the show bench will admit that they compare favourably with others that are shown with regard to condition.

Here let me say that in showing birds condition goes a long way towards success. I have noticed many times that birds which are low down when the awards are shown would have stood higher if more care had been taken with them. Then again, there are some fanciers who do not take enough trouble in getting their birds used to the show-cage; which is a very important thing, for when the occupants come before the judge they do not show themselves off to the best advantage, and when you see them some hours later (when the bird has become more used to his cage and the surroundings) you blame the poor judge. I have had the privilege, as well as the honour, of assisting some of our most eminent judges at various shows, including the National Show at the Crystal Palace, and I can assure you that they would like to have judged some of the birds again the second day; but, of course, they have to take the birds as they first see them. If you think you should have stood higher in the awards, get hold of the judge and ask him where your bird fails; most of our judges are only too pleased to tell you, at least this is my experience, I am pleased to say. Do not run about saying bad things of the judge, for it shows bad sportsmanship.

Selection and Treatment.

Now, I will tell you the way I select and treat my stock. For years I caught all my British birds myself, and have all my tackle at home now; but as there is so much restriction in most counties with regard to catching, I have not chanced it for three or four years, and I am afraid that as the result of the recent appeal case it will be more difficult than ever to get birds.

In selecting fresh-caught birds I have always gone in for size and steadiness. If you are lucky enough to get in touch with a catcher, and can pay him a bit extra for the pick of his pack, you have a greater chance than by picking one out of a shop window, although I have picked up some good specimens in this way.

In selecting likely Goldfinches for show, always go for size and distinct markings. I would sooner have a dozen good greys and moult them out, as I find they are easier steadied; but don't get them too young or you will lose them. I remember buying some very young greys in the early part of July some years ago from an old catcher, more out of pity for the birds than for the benefit of the catcher, as I could see they were what we call "yelpers." I took them home and put them in a store-cage with an old cock that I had used as a brace-bird, and as soon as I put him in with them they chased him all over the cage to be fed. Well, the old chap adopted them, and literally rammed hemp seed and egg food down their necks, and thus saved the three. Two were cocks, and turned out to be two of the smartest Goldies I ever had.

In feeding the fresh-caught Goldfinches I always give a mixture of hemp (crushed at first), flax, niger, teazle, and (a little) Canary seeds. As they get accustomed to the cage life, reduce the hemp and niger. Some are easier to wean off the hemp and niger than others, but, of course, you must watch and find out their likes and dislikes. I always put them in a good-sized cage with water inside at first, so that they can have a dip if they fancy it, and as soon as they start bathing I reckon they are likely to live. I also put an old bird in with them, as he makes them feel more at home

Linnets are treated somewhat similarly, but give them less hemp, and when they are steadied down drop the niger and hemp, and feed on German and English rape, flax, and canary.

Bullfinches I feed on canary seed and German rape. Give them a little hemp and sunflower seed, but not too much; if you do give too much they will get very fat and lumpy. Then you must look well to their feet or you will lose their toes if they get clogged up.

What Kindness Will Do.

The Chaffinch and Bramblefinch I feed on a mixture of canary, German and English rape, with a little linseed, and a few hemp and cracked sunflower seeds. These birds are very fond of a meal-worm; also ants' eggs, blow-flies, and small beetles are very acceptable. Give them some occasionally, as they tend to keep them in good health and plumage. I have brought a Chaffinch with me this evening to show you what proper feeding and cleanliness combined with kindness will do. I bought him from a poor lad some time ago; the bird was in one of the small back cages, and was in a very filthy condition. He had a few stumps of feathers in the tail, and his general appearance showed what a rough time he had had. I might tell you that proper feeding, and comfort in a larger cage, made such a difference when he went into moult, that if the lad could now see him he would not know him. He also has his run in the garden without making any attempt to fly away. Of course, the wife or one of my sons watches so as to keep the stray cats from taking him off. My fox-terrier had him in his mouth one day, but the bird does not seem any the worse for it. It is very nice to see him catching the various small insects which seem very tasty to him.

The Greenfinch is another very kind bird. I usually feed him on canary seed, German and English rape, with a fair supply of sunflower and (a little) hemp seeds. These birds are very easy to hand-rear, and with patience can be got very tame. They are also very ready mulers, but want watching.

Then there are the various Buntings. These I feed principally on canary seed, with a little hemp and cracked sunflower seeds, also ants' eggs and meal-worms, flies, beetles, etc. These birds, I find, are not so easy to steady as others, but with care you can soon get them to take a mealworm from your fingers.

The Redpoll, Siskin, and Twite are also very interesting birds. The Redpoll and Siskin are very easily tamed. You must not let either of them have too much hemp, for they put on fat in an alarming manner, and spoil themselves for show and breeding purposes. I give the Redpoll Canary seed only, with a little flax, rape and hemp in a separate pan. The Siskin I give canary, teazle flax, niger, maw, and a few hemp seeds in a separate pan. The more liberty these birds have the better they keep themselves. The Twite I feed as I do the Linnet.

With regard to Soft-bills, I have not kept any since I was a boy, and the only food we gave them was crushed hemp and soaked bread, with any kind of small caterpillar and insect we could find. But the hardest time was the winter. We had never heard of dried ants' eggs or flies, or even gentles or meal-worms. I believe it is possible to get gentles all the year round from some of the dealers, and, as I said before, it is possible to keep some of the most delicate Soft-bills in perfect condition all the year.

Preparing for Exhibition.

When I have any birds that are likely to be useful for show, I always cage them off in a good-sized cage, one that you can hang a bath on. And here I may say that you will never get a bird into the essential show condition (which I spoke about a short time ago) unless it bathes. Some birds do not take very readily to the bath, and in that case I keep their water on (without changing it for three or four days), and then I hang on a bath of nice fresh water; it is then ten to one they will turn in, and after that you will have no trouble. Some birds will not go into the bath, but stand on the side and dip their beads in. If you get one like this, you must use the spray, for a bathe they must have.

There is another important thing in getting your birds into condition. When you fanciers who live in London get a day in the country (when there are plenty of wild seeds about), don't forget to bring as much of it as you can home, and thresh it out. If I am out seed-gathering I take a sack, and if the seed wants harvesting, I lay it in the sun and then thresh it out. You will be surprised how much your birds will repay you for this little extra trouble. But don't overdo the wild seed diet, or when your stock of it runs out you will find that you will have a job to get your birds back on to the stock mixture. Again, don't be afraid of a bit of green stuff in season. In the winter sweet apple is very much appreciated by all kinds of Britishers.

The Moult.

Now, as regards moulting birds. I have moulted them in the dark, and in the open, in small cages and in large flights, and of the lot I favour the large flight. If you do not overcrowd the birds they come out harder, and come into bloom quicker, than the bird that is moulted in the dark, as he comes out softer and has to be hardened off after.

No doubt some of you have had a bird that has become "stuck in the moult." The reason of this is, I believe, either that the bird has been in a draught or its system is a weak one. I have found that, by giving the birds a dose of Epsom salts, putting them away wrapped up in a dark, warm cupboard in the kitchen, or a box in some warm corner, adding a bit of saffron to the water, and giving them a good spray until you see they are dropping feathers, you will be doing the best thing. Do not worry about cleaning them out, as the excrement has a tendency to increase heat. I have found one of the small cages best for this, as the bird has no difficulty in finding his seed and water.

Before your birds go into moult, see that their nails and beaks are trimmed. Then, again, some fanciers agree with having a bit of colour feeding for Britishers. I don't. I believe British birds moulted in the open, with a good supply of various wild seeds and the all-essential bath are the best.

I remember talking with a gentleman at one of the Crystal Palace shows with reference to colour-food for British birds, and his opinion was, that if colour fed birds were allowed to compete and win, why should not stained birds also compete and win, the only difference being that one had the colour inside and the other out? And I might here say that this gentleman was the owner of a first prize bird.

Fifty Years in the Fancy.

An interview with Mr. William Shakespeare, of Kentish Town (a descendant of "the Bard of Avon") who relates interesting reminiscences concerning the "good old days" of the hobby, and the men who then played leading parts in the Fancy.

You will remember the introduction of K.N. feeding?

"I should think I do. It was quite a craze, and fairly set the Fancy alight. I soon got on fire. I bought the recipt from Mr. Fairbrass, of Canterbury, who was at that time one of our well-known and successful Lizard breeders. I paid him 5s. for it, and whilst the craze was at its height I made a few pounds out of it. At last it was exposed, and then everybody got to know the great secret for nothing.

"I believe you started nest feather shows in the Birmingham district?"

"Yes; it was in 1880. I was then manager of a large Pet Stores, dealing in birds and all kinds of live stock. This naturally brought me into contact with the local fanciers, and when I suggested a first feather show it was enthusiastically taken up, and attracted 137 centre. Mr. G. E. Russell acted as judge, and it came off at my own house on July 1st and 2nd."

"Speaking of Mr. Russell, were you not at one time connected with him?"

"The Pet Stores I have mentioned were closed, and I then took on with Mr. Russell, making cages, tending the birds, and travelling with him to the shows. What birds they were, too! You will remember that in those days Mr. Russell was the only exhibitor who could put down a team of birds equal to beating the renowned Mackley Bros., but there was this difference between the two: Mackley Bros. were the largest dealers in the world, with all the resources of Norwich at their backs, and this at a time when Norwich was really a metropolis of the Canary Fancy, whilst Mr. Russell was only an amateur fancier, he being in business in the little black country town of Brierley Hill, giving only his spare time to the Fancy."

"Do you remember Mr. Thompson, of Preston, who was great on Crests about the time you mention?"

"Yes, I remember Mr. Thompson very well. He was a very wealthy colliery proprietor, and on one occasion the late R. L. Wallace, acting on behalf of Mr. Thompson, came to Mr. Russell's room and offered him £80 for three Crests. Mr. Russell replied that if he made it £100 he could not have them. Mr. Russell was not one who ever tried to be making all he could out of his hobby."

"Many years ago Mr. Bastock bought a most sensational bird from Mr. Russell, did he not? I think you will remember the circumstances, and the commotion created"

"You mean Sunshine. I remember the incident perfectly. It was just at the time when the Lancashire blood was first introduced into the Crests. Mr. Bastock had come over from Birmingham, and he saw this bird in the room. It was the produce of a first cross between a Crest and a Lancashire, the result of one of the first attempts to improve the Crested birds. It had a lovely headpiece, something quite beyond the ordinary run of birds in those days, but, of course, it showed the Coppy finish at the back of the crest, and had the Coppy shaped body. We looked upon it as a stock bird, and as such it would have been used had it remained with Mr. Russell. Mr. Bastock as soon as he saw it took a fancy to it, and would not leave it. In the end Mr. Russell sold it to him for the low figure of 30s. Mr. Bastock made no secret of his pleasure. He was simply delighted at getting it, and soon trotted it out to the shows. Its first venture was at Nottingham, where it won, and created quite a sensation, and at the time, it must be remembered, some of the most expert Crest breeders in the kingdom resided in the vicinity of the great lace-making city. In fact, for a little while Sunshine was all the talk of the Fancy, and it went on winning, carrying all before it wherever it was shown. It was indeed a most handsome bird; its appearance created quite a revolution amongst Crest fanciers, and there was a big demand for Lancashires by breeders of Norwich Crests. Its show career, however, was not a long one. Certain exhibitors objected to such a bird winning in Crested Norwich classes, and at last it got put down. Still, it served its purpose. It drew attention to the possibilities that lay behind a correct admixture of the Lancashire and Norwich Crest blood, and from then onwards the little daisy Crests, neat and pretty though they were, lost their hold on the public favour. Still, Mr. Bastock made a real good thing out of Sunshine, as after it was 'passed' he sold it at a big figure to a well-known Crest breeder. After that, however, birds of the stamp of Sunshine did a lot of winning, and this went on for a long time, until there arose another agitation over them, and it was proposed that as they differed so much from the old-fashioned Norwich Crest, they should be called British Crests. They were fine, massive birds, with splendid crests, and carrying a wealth of feather. The idea, however, did not catch on. I think if it had we should by now have seen birds which to all intents and purposes would be self-green Lancashires, and handsome birds they would be, too."

"If Birmingham and district had the best of your early years in the Fancy, you have given London a good few, too."

"Yes it's a long time now since I came to London, nearly thirty years I should think, and I have seen some ups and downs amongst the London fanciers. Some time after I reached London I made the acquaintance of those good old fanciers, Messrs. G. Gardner, E. Pretty, J. Oldaker, Sam Smith, and others, and I got a few birds together again. I also joined some of the London clubs, and did a bit of showing now and then. Then I took to catering for the Fancy—cage-making, bird washing, bird dealing, etc. So far as I know, I am the only professional washer in the Canary Fancy. By 'professional bird washer' I mean a man who publicly advertises that he will wash teams of birds for fanciers. I have taught hundreds of fanciers how to wash, and have put thousands of birds 'through the mill.' There is scarcely a show of any account for which I have not washed birds."

"You surprise me. Do you really mean to say that there is a demand for a professional washer, and you find this washing business pays you?"

"Well, there is not a great deal got out of it, and it does not, unfortunately, last long enough. The season is too short. I may say, however, that I have washed as many as 200 birds in a week, and this on several occasions. Not only Canaries, but British birds and Mules, also all kinds of Foreign birds, from the delicate little Waxbills to the gigantic and not too gentle Macaws, Cockatoos, and Parrots."

"What made you take up this business of bird washing?"

"Well, years ago there were very few who could wash birds, and the majority of the exhibits seen at the shows were not shown in the spic and span condition in which you now see them, and if you wanted to learn how to wash you had to pay 5s. for a lesson. That was what I paid. Even after a lesson some cannot do much, and will gladly pay someone else to do it for them. That is how I came to be a professional bird washer."

Greenfoods and Wild Seeds: Their Values and Uses.

A Lecture delivered by Mr. J. HEIGHTON before the Leicester C.B.S. on May 25.

I have to say a few words on the most important question of green food. The Latin names of the various green foods I shall not touch upon. A great many evil things have been said about the use of green food, but when I come to the close of my remarks I think I shall have been able to convince you that green food is a very valuable food from the standpoint of keepers of birds of all kinds; and it is only through a laxity on the part of the bird keeper if he has any bowel complaints amongst his birds.

The reason for bowel complaints lies in not removing from the cage what I call the soft green foods that have decayed. By "soft" green foods, I mean chiefly lettuce, chickweed, and others of a like kind. Those of the shepherd's purse order will not decay; they can be left in the cage indefinitely, and will not do any harm to the youngest of birds.

The constituents vary under the different conditions under which you will find green foods growing. Those that are grown on soil close to iron stone will not have the same effect on the bowels of birds as those grown on a different class of soil. One old fancier I know, who gets his green food on soil that is permeated with iron, gives his birds quantities that would not be permissible otherwise; and bowel troubles are things unknown to him. So that, even in the giving of green food, conditions must be taken into consideration.

I will deal with the different kinds of green foods that are now in season.

"The Best Green Food for Young."

I think dandelion is the best green food to give young birds. I think so for several reasons. It will grow almost anywhere—on rough and waste ground, corn and grass fields, and garden paths; and if hoed up in the garden it will soon be through again. The best way is to cut the root off just under the soil; then you can keep it with the root in water and use as you require.

You may give the birds a handful, where there is a nest of young ones. You need not be afraid of giving them too much, as this food will not go bad like most other green foods; it will wither and dry up if left in the cage, but it will not hurt the young birds if it is withered. Of course, you will only give the young and tender leaves.

I have heard some say there are two sorts of dandelion, the white and the red. There is no such thing; it is only the conditions under which the plant is grown that bring the colour in the stalk of the leaf. If the plant be exposed to cold winds, or the sun, and is a long time in growing, it will be red; if grown quickly, or in a shady place, it will be white or green. This sample here—(the lecturer at various points showed specimens)—was got from where I had cut off an old plant about three weeks ago. All the leaves of the old plant were red in stalk. Now, you see this is every bit white. Here I have a plant with both colours—the old leaves are a little red, but the younger ones are quite white.

I see thousands of roots every day, and they are all alike under the conditions I have referred to, with a variation in the shape of the leaf. This one here is a dwarf kind. If grown in grass it does not run any longer in leaf, but grows quite close to the ground; the petals in the flower are smaller than the other kind. Those are the only two kinds I have noticed.

Some fanciers say that dandelion is too forcing after the birds have commenced to breed, but I do not think so. If it puts stamina into the old birds to make them breed, it will do the young ones good and make the parents feed well. It is other things that make the hens go off feeding—not the green food.

If you keep the dandelion roots in water you will find young leaves will grow up very quickly.

British birds are very fond of the white nobs. These contain the seed, when the flowers have dried off.

Watercress and Chickweed.

I have not very much to say with regard to watercress, but what I have to say is very important. It is very nice, and the birds are fond of it; but take a spray you gather out of a stream yourself, and compare it with one grown in the beds by the cress growers. The one you get yourself you will find is solid down the stalk (unless it has commenced to run to seed), while the other is quite hollow for a long way up the stem. The reason is, that it is forced for market purposes. When cut it is tied up, pressed down in baskets, and sent off to its destination. It gets bruised and soon starts to heat. If you clear off the bottom leaves and place it in water, you will soon see that it will go rotten, first, at the bottom of the stalk, and then higher up. If you put some in for your birds, and it lies in the cage for a few hours, it will do the same; and then the birds are upset by eating it.

There is not the substance in watercress that there is in dandelion; there is a deal more water in it. So if you give watercress, only give just the young end, and if any be left, clear it out of the cage quickly.

I have a sample of chickweed here. You will see that the pods are full of seed. This, I think, is a very good green food for young birds. You can give them a big bunch, as it is only the seed they care about, and it takes a lot for a feed round if you have a good nest.

The stalks should not be left in the cage, as they soon go bad; so you must clear the stalks out as soon as the birds have had their feed of the seed, or your pets will be very much upset, and then you may look out for bowel troubles.

Shepherd's Purse.

Shepherd's Purse is the very best seed for the birds I know of. It is of a rather hot nature, and is a very good herb for diarrhœa. It is very beneficial to both birds, animals and human beings. You can give a plentiful supply of this seed to your young birds after they commence feeding themselves, as it is not like other green food that is of a solid nature—it will not deteriorate if left in the cage. I believe in giving Canaries some of it through the moult, whether colour feeding them or not.

If you see a place where it is growing in abundance, gather the seed when it is ripe. Take a newspaper and lay it on the ground, then draw the stalk through your hand (holding it over the paper), and the seed will all drop out. This weed flowers by the country roadside and on waste land. There is plenty about at this time of the year, as the sample shown, and it will continue till the frost comes later on in the year. I cannot speak too highly of this weed.

Lettuce and Groundsel.

Lettuce is praised very much by some fanciers, but I do not use it myself till after May; then there should be plenty of the Spring-sown lettuce (that is, speaking of the English sown, the French being too expensive to give to birds). And even then only give the birds the young inside leaves. If any green fly is on it, do not try to get it off, as the birds will take that first when they have once tried it. You will, I may say, find plenty of green fly on shepherd's purse, especially later in the year.

Groundsel I do not think much of. It is eaten by the birds outside only at early Spring and late Autumn, the Greenfinch seeming to be most fond of it. I have seen other birds pecking the green fly off it. If you give it to your birds with other green food, too, you will see they will take the other first.

Various Seeds Coming in Season.

There is a plant which grows like a carnation—I call it the wild carnation. It has a yellow flower. And when the seed-pod is full it is the same shape as the bud of the carnation, only longer. This is just coming into bloom when the seed is full grown. The Greenfinch is after it more than any other bird, but Canaries and British Finches will all eat it.

The sorrel sour grass is just now showing for bloom; you can easily find it, as it grows in most meadows. The seed pods are three-corner shape, with a red tint. They are good for all birds.

Hard-heads and knapweed come in at the same time; the heads can be gathered and kept for the British birds during the winter.

Teazle, thistle and plantain come in late—towards the end of July or the beginning of August. Teazle mostly grows in damp places, by the side of a stream, etc. This seed being deep in the cone, can only be got at by birds with long beaks. If you catch a number of Goldfinches on these, you will find most of them cock birds, as they have longer beaks than the hens. On the end of every cell in the cone there is what looks like a little sharp thorn. The leaf when growing from the stalk is cup-shaped, and I have seen water in these for days; the birds will drink out of them. The plants sometimes grow eight feet high, some only two feet.

There are several kinds of thistles, and it is chiefly the Goldfinch that we find on these. The Linnets wait till the seed head opens, when they have a better chance.

Newcastle C.B.S. Annual Outing.

Although the majority of the members took the journey by train, some of us preferred to cycle, and thus add the very interesting sights of the countryside that lies between our fine old city and our venue to our pleasure; many were they, for almost as soon as we left the rush of town life and entered the suburbs, wild bird life was strongly in evidence. Along the road we found many handsome cock Yellow Buntings sunning themselves along the hedge-tops, frequently breaking into their curious yet not disagreeable song. Here and there were to be seen the various little Warblers, busy among the tree tops in search of insect life, the little Willow Wren and Chiff Chaff being particularly plentiful. More than once the "tee-zit-teezit" of the Pied Wagtail was audible. Being a little late in leaving Newcastle, we were obliged to hurry during the latter part of our journey, and as a consequence doubtless missed seeing many species that we otherwise should have noted. Arriving at Bothal, we quickly found our friends, and met with a hearty reception from that genial and courteous fancier, Mr. S. P. Lackey, who took an early opportunity to show us round his aviaries. Apparently Mr. L. has a weakness for Mule and Hybrid breeding, for we saw several pairs mated up in the open aviaries, and some at nest; among them were some very nice Goldies, Greenies, Bullies, etc., and one cock Canary. Enquiring as to the result of Mr. L.'s experiment, we found to our regret that so far this year, at any rate, no full eggs had been obtained; but we learned that he had succeeded in getting eggs from a Greenie hen and cock Canary, and Redpoll and Bullie. A very heavy storm broke over the neighbourhood, and we had to take shelter for a time. It was not long before we made our first find: a nest of young Willow Wrens, rather singularly placed in the branch of one of the young cyprus tree. Next we found a Blackbird sitting on a full clutch of eggs. Hard by was a hen Greenie in a like occupation, while her lord and master was just above her tendering his thankfulness in song. Next on the list was a Thrush's nest, and a little further on a hen Hedge Accentor very closely sitting on her newly-hatched young. So devoted was the latter to her charge that we were almost able to touch her before she beat a retreat. Presently the voices of several young Thrushes caught our ears, and scattered about on the lower branches of the young trees were a family of five giving vent to the complaints at not being better attended to by way of food. Our worthy guide pointed out a little lower down the site of a Golden-crested Wren's nest in a cedar tree, but the grass was far too wet and long to warrant our getting a better coign of vantage. Once again down came the rain, and we had so quickly retire to a hut close by. A very few moments and the rain gave way to sunshine, and we repaired to the front of the beautiful hall, and faced the camera, having before us a most gorgeous trio of peafowl, the male being a beautiful specimen of a beautiful family. Once again taking to our legs, we passed through a most ingeniously constructed pair of gates (leading from the lawn to the drive), those being worked by hydraulic pressure—the invention of the Rev. Mr. Ellis himself. We were then led to the botanical part of the estate, where most beautiful flowers, ferns, fruits, and vegetables were being cultivated under glass. Once again the weather became threatening, and it looked like a heavy storm, so we went homewards in a somewhat hurried way, finding firstly in our scanty searches, a nest of young Chaffinches apparently fit to fly. On the right a little further down we came across the nest—young and two eggs—of the Peggy Whitethroat. Just then we were enquiring of our guide if he had heard the Cuckoo, and hardly had he answered our query than there came from a tree to the left of us a constant calling from this bird. Getting nearer the little river again, our guide pointed out a spot where a pair of Kingfishers had built for many seasons, but apparently this year had taken up their residence elsewhere. A rush towards another nest: this time in charge of a devoted mother Greenie; so much so that she nearly defied our looking at her charges without removing her. A most pressing invitation was extended to all from our worthy guide, which we feel sure many will take an early opportunity of accepting in the near future.—J. Bertram.

RUNCORN C.B.S.

Very successful Nest Feather Table Show held on July 1, at headquarters, Lea's Temperance Hotel. Entries were not exactly abundant, being 30 in number; as regards quality, they were ahead of anything seen at Runcorn at a nest feather show. Mr. W. H. Cowley was appointed judge, but at the last moment important business prevented his appearance. We were fortunate in prevailing upon our respected treasurer, Mr. Peck, to take his place. The awards gave every satisfaction. Some very fine Buff Norwich were exhibited by Mr. Boote. The secretary, Mr. T. P. Baxter, put down a beautiful wing-marked yellow, which he hopes will have a successful moult. The Yorks were a good lot. Two of Mr. Boote's birds carried exceptional colour. The novices staged some fine specimens. Mr. T. Wood's Yell. Norwich was a good exhibit. Two very fine Mules were staged. A business meeting was held later in the evening.

BRIGHTON C.B.A.

First Feather Show, adult British and Mule Bird Show of this newly-formed society was held at the Crown Assembly Rooms, Jubilee-street. Mr. W. Swaysland judged an entry of eighty birds, his awards giving every satisfaction. The birds were of good average merit; in fact, it was the best show of young Canaries and British birds ever seen in Brighton, and it augurs well for the annual show, to be held on November 9th and 10th, when we hope to have the largest collection of cage birds ever seen at a show in the county. Mr. B. C. Comber took the special for the best bird in the show with a good feathered clear yellow Yorkie, and Mrs. W. Brown the special for the best Canary shown by a lady, with a fine clear Buff Yorkie. A special word of praise must be given to Mrs. J. Riddles for kindly decorating the staging and room with flowers and plants, also to those who kindly lent plants, which helped to make it one of the prettiest shows seen in Brighton. The management was first rate, and Mr. A. T. Riddles, the able secretary, is to be complimented, his efforts deserving a better reward.

CAPE TOWN (South Africa).

The third annual open show of the Cape Town C.B.S. was held in Fraser's Buildings, 91, Long-street, Cape Town, on June 10th and 11th. It was the largest in the annals of the society, and it certainly proved beyond all shadow of doubt that the cage bird Fancy is making great headway in South Africa. There was an entry of well over two hundred exhibits, most of them being of excellent quality. The show was opened by Mr. W. Duncan Baxter, accompanied by Mr. Jagger, the society's president. This record show owes much of its success to the untiring efforts of the secretary, Mr. R. Fulton (who, by the way, is the new secretary of the society). He was ably assisted by the committee, consisting of Messrs. W. B. Lawrence (chairman), J. McIntyre (vice-chairman), R. Walker, A. White, A. E. Mills, W. P. Stevens, J. M. Mathews, and A. E. Congdon. The judging was admirably carried out by Messrs. J. Templer, J.P. du Toit, A. E. Mills, and R. Walker.

I have been a reader of your paper, CAGE BIRDS, for this last three years, and I have found it a great help to me.—MR. PALMER (Withamstown).

Antwerp's annual show of young Belgian Canaries (bred 1910) bas been fixed for Sunday, August 14 next, and we note that Mr. J. F. Dewar, the well-known Edinburgh fancier and judge, has once again been honoured by being asked to officiate as one of tbe judges at this important continental fixture.

The Southern Yorksbire Canary Club's handbook of the 1910-11 season has just been issued, and a copy reaches us from the Sec., Mr. J. W. Rennie, The Junction Hotel, Andover, Hants. It comprises, among other matters, the rules, bye-laws and balance-sheet of tbe club, and a list of the members' names and addresses. Applications for membership sbould be addressed to Mr. Rennie.

The date for the young stock show of the Ilford F. and F.S. has been altered to October 15 (just one week earlier), owing to our being unable to procure the Hall on the date printed in our Manual, writes Mr. W. H. Drew, the hon. secretary: it will be held at Loxford Hall, Ilford Lane. A general meeting will be held at headquarters, White Horse Hotel, Ilford, July 19, to elect judges for that event. I trust members will do their best to be present, so that we can please everybody, if possible, in this matter. I should also be pleased to hear from anybody wishing to join

That enthusiastic Continental bird-lover and Canary breeder the Baron du Theil (Chateau de Lalande, par Razac-sur-Lisle, Dordogne, France) has recently establisbed a monthly magazine, designed as a "review of practical aviculture," the subscription to which is six francs per annum, or 1 fr. 50 cents for three months. This magazine is excellently produced, and plates in colours will be issued with it from time to time. It has been received with enthusiasm amongst the bird-keepers of the Continent. The contents of the number sent to us include "The German Singing Canaries," "The Linnet," "The Dutch Frill Canary," "Hints for the Month," etc., etc. Readers conversant with the French language will find much of interest in this magazine.

GREAT £20 CASH PRIZES COMPETITION FOR READERS OF "CAGE BIRDS."

In order to stimulate interest in "Cage Birds" between now and the first week in August we have decided to institute a competition on the undermentioned lines and offer £20 in cash prizes upon the following scale:—

First Prize	TEN POUNDS.
Second Prize	THREE POUNDS.
Third Prize	TWO POUNDS.
Fourth Prize	ONE POUND.
Fifth Prize	ONE POUND.
Sixth Prize	ONE POUND.
Seventh Prize	ONE POUND.
Eighth Prize	ONE POUND.

Also Twenty Consolation Prizes of a Bound Volume or a Framed Plate, at the Winner's option,

And a Framed Coloured Plate to the reader who sends in the greatest number of Coupons which have no names and addresses thereon (except, of course, the sender's).

In every copy of "Cage Birds" published from now till July 23rd next, we shall print a triangular coupon. This coupon (see below) is provided with a panel upon each side, each panel must be filled in with the name and address in full of a new reader of the paper. One panel, one name and address, three names and addresses complete each coupon. The prizes will be awarded to the readers who send in to us by July 27th at latest the largest number of coupons properly filled in.

For each coupon so sent in with three halfpence in stamps we will send free copies of "Cage Birds" to each of those whose names and addresses appear thereon. Each of these free copies will contain a coupon which in its turn will be available for competition purposes if sent to us properly filled in with three further names and addresses.

RULES.

It must be borne in mind by competitors that:
(1) Each coupon must be legibly and correctly filled up (pencil will do) with the full names and addresses of three new readers of "Cage Birds." (Either actual or possible new readers.)
(2) The prizes will go to the competitors who send in the largest number of properly filled in coupons.
(3) The competition will close finally on Wednesday, July 27th, and no coupons received after first post on that date will be allowed to count in the competition.
(4) The Editor's decision on any point in dispute will be final.

NOTES TO INTENDING COMPETITORS.

Competitors will not be slow to see that the possibilities of obtaining assistance from their friends in such a competition as this are many.

The payment of three halfpence with each coupon is not compulsory but optional. For the halfpenny expended by the possible new reader—that new reader obtains from us a free copy of "Cage Birds." The coupon in this free copy can then be utilised in its turn, either by the original competitor, or by the new reader.

It should be quite possible to persuade your bird-loving friends to entrust you with a halfpenny for a free copy of "Cage Birds." It should also be easy to obtain coupons from present readers—who do not contemplate entering this competition.

Thus it is possible for a competitor to obtain without any expense at all on his part a large number of coupons, which also in their turn may be the means of obtaining further supplies of coupons.

As a further reward to readers we will give a free advertisement in "Cage Birds" to the value of 1s. for every fifty (50) coupons sent in which are eligible for the competition, the said advertisement being available for any issue within three months of the date of the competition closing, viz., July 27th next.

No member of our staff will be allowed to compete.

Ask for coupons at your Club Meetings and at all gatherings of fanciers you may happen to attend.

Arrange with your friends to cut the coupons out of their copies and send them to you at intervals.

If you are a cyclist take a run round the neighbourhood and collect all the suitable names and addresses. Don't be afraid of asking your friends to assist you and send you the coupons to help you win the prize.

In any event the cult of Cage Bird Keeping should receive considerable impetus by any labour which in your spare time you may feel disposed to give this competition.

This week's Coupon will be found on page 17
The First Coupon appeared in our Issue of May 28th last.

White Starling Shot.

A white Starling has been shot (says the "Essex County Chronicle") by Mr. Ralph Moore near his residence at Woodrope Road, Tollesbury. (A great pity, as we feel sure readers of CAGE BIRDS will agree.)

A Linnet's Strange Abode.

According to the papers, a novel sight is to be seen in the grounds of the New Brighton Tower at present. A couple of Linnets have chosen a most remarkable place in which to build their nest. As is generally known, the grounds of the Tower are illuminated at various parts by tall arc lamps, and the globe in one of these, just outside the theatre, has in some way been damaged, enabling the birds to enter and build their nest inside. The other evening, after the current had been turned on, a spark from the carbon fell on to the nest and it was completely destroyed; but the daring birds, nothing daunted, promptly built another. In this there are now four eggs. The management have decided not to again light the lamp until the eggs are hatched, and the globe has been taken down and is being shown to visitors. The remarkable thing is that the birds have not been scared by the brilliant light which has shone every evening a few inches from their strange but comfortable-looking abode. (We hardly think these birds would be Linnets. Could some New Brighton reader verify this?—Ed.)

In the Courts.

A Defence that Failed.

A curious defence was raised by two men, named Walter Austin and Samuel Whitby, of Mortlake, at Kingston, on July 7 (says the "Daily Chronicle"), when they were charged with ill-treating and torturing two Linnets by pinioning them to the ground.

Constable Cheeseman said he found the defendants bird-catching on Ham Common that morning. They had two Linnets, acting as decoy birds, held by a short piece of string tied to a stake in the ground. The birds were able to fly only a few feet. The prisoners also had a net spread out for catching birds. The decoy birds, it was said, had been killed to prevent further cruelty.

Whitby: But if you go to the houses of ladies and gentlemen, not poor people like us, you will find Parrots, Redpolls, and other birds tied down to their cages just in the same way as these birds were. What is the difference, as far as the cruelty goes?

The Chairman: Look here, my man. It is a great pity that we can't put you in the same position as those two birds, just to see how you would like it.

Whitby: But we have little children to support, and not a loaf of bread in the house. This is the only means we have of getting a living. —Austin: And there is no law round our way to prevent us catching birds.

Both prisoners were fined 20s. or fourteen days' imprisonment.

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

Bare and Scurfy.

Anxious.—The cause of the trouble is probably a generally bad condition and lowered vitality. I suspect there is something radically wrong with your treatment. Give following a trial for a few weeks, and if the birds do not soon get all right write again and give full particulars of your management, and refer to this reply. Keep cages and perches clean, and well provided with clean gritty sand. See they are perfectly free from red mite or lice; if not, overhaul and make them so. Allow birds to bathe freely twice a week adding a few drops of essence of quassia. Feed on a staple of plain Canary only. Every second day give half a teaspoonful of summer rape per bird, and on the alternate days a piece of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, slightly dusted with flowers of sulphur, and sprinkled with maw seed. Give a spray of chickweed, plantain stalks, or dandelion head daily. In the drinking water give a pinch of Epsom salts and ten drops of lemon juice for two days, and afterwards a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea, a crystal of sulphate of iron about half as big, and six drops of dilute sulphuric acid in the water every third day for a month. Slightly smear bare places twice a week with a mixture of equal parts perchloride of iron and glycerine.

Leg Trouble.

Miss M. P.—Has the bird in question met with any accident, or been likely to have strained its back by over-vigorous exercise? It seems more than probable this may be the cause. Or an unfortunate squeeze, though apparently trifling, when catching it might have injured its back. Try following treatment, and if there is no improvement in, say, a fortnight, write again and report progress, giving all particulars. Feed on plain canary seed only as staple. Every second day give half a teaspoonful of summer rape, and on the alternate days give a piece of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut with three drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and sprinkled with maw seed. Give a green plantain stalk or a spray of chickweed daily. In the drinking water give twenty drops of whisky and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence daily for three days, and after that give twenty drops of chemical food in the water every second day, and on the alternate days give ten drops of a mixture of two parts tincture of gentian, one part aromatic sulphuric acid, plus twenty drops of tincture of nux vomica to the ounce of mixture. Any chemist will dispense this for you, ready to use. Continue this treatment for a fortnight. Keep a piece of cuttlefish in wires for it to peck at.

Yorkshire Cock Unwell.

E G.—I fear the bird is in an advanced stage of asthma, and nothing you can do will be of any lasting benefit. Only alleviation is possible. Do not let him out to fly about the room in his present condition; it is not a kindness to do so, and the bird might die instantly any time after flying across the room, or trying to do so. Keep him in a fair-sized box cage; hang it in a nice, bright and airy position where the air is pure and fresh, and not contaminated by fumes from burning lights in the evenings and, above all, perfectly free from draughts and chills. Feed on a staple of three parts canary to one part summer rape, and every second day for the next fortnight give a piece of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut, with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it and sprinkled with soft sugar. On the alternate days give a pinch of maw seed. Limit diet to this. In the drinking water give twenty drops of whisky, and a pinch of Epsom salts every second day for a week, and on the alternate days give fifteen drops of a mixture of equal parts glycerine, oxymel of squills, ipecacuanha wine, and chlorodyne. Any chemist will mix you a small quantity of this. Continue the latter on alternate days for a fortnight, then miss a week, and, if necessary, repeat for another fortnight.

An Auld Acquaintance.

Hunt.—The cause is doubtless to be found in your dietary. The way to avoid these losses has been given a number of times already this season, but here it is again for you and others. When the young are taken away from the parents, put them into a moderate sized cage for a week or so to gain a little strength and experience in getting about the perches before finally transferring them to a flight. Continue to give a little egg food in the egg drawer daily, adding about double the quantity of bread or biscuit, whichever you use, which you have been giving the old birds. Make the egg food perfectly fresh daily; see the eggs are fresh and laid by healthy, well-kept stock; do not add any other moisture than that naturally in the egg; and add a sprinkling of maw seed. Give an unlimited supply of plain canary seed, about half a teaspoonful of summer rape per bird every second day, and a small teaspoonful of slightly cracked hemp per bird daily. See that the hemp is of good quality and sound. As soon as the birds are cracking canary seed freely gradually reduce the egg food to one-half, and finally drop it to a small teaspoonful per bird twice a week. Decrease the hemp also to a similar quantity twice a week, and give the summer rape daily. Should birds show any signs of becoming thick give a little bread and milk sprinkled with soft sugar and maw seed daily for three or four days. Keep cages and perches perfectly clean and strewn with gritty sand. Do not give green food for first fortnight.

Brevities.

A Monogamist (J. Burrows).—Sorry I do not know "a remedy" for a cock who obstinately refuses to pay addresses to more than one hen. These idiosyncrasies of disposition do not admit of treatment, as you would do with a cold for instance. Besides, it is too late now to talk of trying to mate him again this year, so your best course, if you are particularly anxious to try him with another hen next year, is to remove the yellow hen with which he has been mated right away out of his sight and hearing permanently. Then run him with the hen you wish to mate with him for a few weeks after the moult, and afterwards keep them near together until time for mating next season, taking care at that time that the cock is not allowed to come near, or in full view of another yellow hen similar to his former mate. The latter bird you should rigidly exclude from the same room.

Much Better (Miss F. F.).—Glad to hear it is so much better. You can do no harm by continuing the treatment for a week at least. The chief point is to remove the cause altogether; quite possibly, as you suggest, the position of the cage is such that a cold draught blows through it when door and window are open. The occasional fits of wheeziness are indicative of a slight asthmatic condition, due to the same causes. It is doubtful if you will ever cure it. When the cause has been removed, you can best relieve it when it occurs by giving a mild aperient, such as a pinch of Epsom salts in the water for one day, and following this by giving twenty drops each of whisky and syrup of tolu, and ten drops each of sweet spirits of nitre and glycerine, in the drinking water for a few days until the wheezing has disappeared.

Abnormal Egg (N.K.J.).—There is nothing really practical you can do. If the sole cause of the abnormality is as you suggest there is just a chance nature may, without any interference, correct it by placing extra strain upon the other leg, and consequently causing a more rapid development of muscles. But if there is any dislocation of the joints, as may also be likely, it is extremely doubtful if any improvement will take place. If the bird has not left the nest you might try tying a circlet of soft wool yarn around both legs at the joints next above the junction of the claws, and another circlet immediately over the junction of the claws, in each case drawing the deformed leg as nearly as possible to a natural position, and leave these on as long as the bird will remain in the nest. When it seems bent on leaving the nest you must, of course, cut off these circlets, and it is probable, if they have been worn any appreciable time, the deformity will be materially corrected.

Drooping Wing (S. Osgathorpe).—It is quite possible for it to occur as you suggest. You should see that the perches are all so placed that the birds can travel from one to another quite briskly, without hesitation, or having to hesitate and "measure the jump," as it were, before taking it. When this occurs it is almost invariably a sign that the perches are badly arranged, and awkward for the birds to get about, which adds greatly to the risk of injuries to legs or wings when the birds are having a lively scamper around. The best thing you could have done as soon as you noticed the wing drooped would have been to place the bird by itself in a nursery cage, where the feeding would have gone on as usual, but the bird would have been compelled to rest the wing. It should have been kept there until the wing seemed quite sound and strong again. Now, however, if the wing keeps improving you should leave things as they are, with the exception of seeing that the perches are placed very conveniently, so as to avoid putting any tax upon the wing for a week or two. No other treatment will now be necessary.

Red Mites (No Nom-de-plume).—You should carefully examine cages to find out the principal hiding places. Except in the most extreme cases of infestation these harbours are generally very few, and may be limited to one or two cracks or open joints, or the joints of doors or ends of perches. Make a solution of one ounce of camphor in half a pint of methylated spirit. When this is ready take out perches one at a time, kill any mites exposed to view, scrape perch clean, and dip ends in the solution for a few moments, then replace in cage without wiping the ends. Scrape out all the known and likely harbours, and flush them with the solution by means of a small camel-hair pencil. Watch for a time and kill the escaping fugitives. Repeat the dressing about every third day for a fortnight. Keep cages as clean as possible, and let the birds bathe freely, twice a week adding a few drops of essence of quassia to the bathing water. Do not let the fluid run about the varnish on cages, or it will dissolve it. As soon as breeding is quite done with, you should thoroughly overhaul the cages all through, and thus be quite rid of the pest before the result begins.

Success Turned to Failure (Salix).—Sorry to hear your method has failed this year. It is, of course, no argument against the system. I cannot say what is the cause without more evidence to go upon. It may be the fault of the young as much as the hen. Does she try to feed them after the tenth day? And what seeds do you give? Read reply to another querist on feeding whilst rearing, and act on the advice there given. Do not give the bread and milk sloppy, but press it fairly dry, and from the fifth or sixth day sprinkle it with maw. Also begin to supply, in addition to this food, a separate dish of crushed puppy biscuit, without meat, soaked until soft, pressed nearly dry, and a little maw seed mixed with it. You might also try giving a little soaked rape daily, either separately or mixed, with the puppy biscuit. In either case be most careful to see it does not get sour. Begin with this when young are six days old. Add a little more variety to the green food—chickweed, flower heads of groundsel, plantain, and shepherd's purse. Adopt these suggestions, and if not at once successful, write again, giving full particulars of feeding.

Air Sac (W. Grewar).—It is a bad case of a complaint known as emphysema, and judging from its position and persistent recurrence it is most probably due to some obstruction in the larynx, and is most likely incurable. You did quite right to prick the bladder, but the cutting was quite unneeded. The pricking you should continue as often as necessary, but not more than once a day, until it ceases to recur. Feed on a nourishing and easily digested diet, giving a pinch of maw seed every second day, and a little egg food or bread and milk on the alternate days. For green food give only chickweed, plantain, or dandelion heads. In the drinking water give a pinch of Epsom salts and ten drops of lemon juice for two days, and afterwards give six drops each of tincture of lobelia and ipecacuanha wine every second day for a week, and on the alternate days give ten drops of the gentian mixture recommended to "Miss M. P." See that the bird is kept in a pure atmosphere, free from draughts, and fairly equable in temperature.

Young Dying (A Constant Reader).—You do not give me a scrap of information as regards your feeding and management. The way in which the birds have died is suggestive either of an infectious fever or an irritant poison. If you lose any more get a post-mortem on one without delay. I should not be surprised if you found the cause was poisoning by the birds pecking off soft bits of waste or superfluous galvanised material from wire-netting. The piece you sent was simply loaded with such waste, and quite a little heap dropped off in unfolding it. This, in most places, is quite soft, and young birds are very curious in pecking at and swallowing all kinds of little odds and ends. If you cannot move the birds to another place pending having a post-mortem report, give this wire netting a good brushing all over with a stiff wire brush, to remove as much as possible of the soft waste, and thoroughly clean the wire. Then well clean out the flights and carefully sweep up all the material brushed off the wire.

Mixing Paint and Enamel (A.G.S.).—You would be ill-advised to mix any ordinary paint with the enamel, as you could not tell until it had been actually tried whether the two would combine properly and dry hard, and if they did not the result would be worse than using common paint, and the enamel would be wasted. The enamel you name is an excellent one. Provided you have not tampered with the tin or tins, could you not get the vendor to exchange for another colour. If you could do this, ask for the electric green, which I think you will be pleased with. I have some cages done with it myself, and prefer this colour to any other stocked in the brand in question. If you cannot make the exchange then I would advise you to get a tin, or more, if required, of the same brand of white, and mix a sufficiency of this with the dark green, to bring it to the desired shade. This would be far more satisfactory than diluting with common paints.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

A Young Bird Problem.

Ivelcon.—I do not find much of a problem here. You yourself were quite correct; the body sent me was most certainly that of a young Linnet about a month old. Why your friend should say that the two youngsters are not Linnets is the real problem. You ought to experience little difficulty in rearing them, for at this age they will be able to feed themselves, and be needing very little, if any, soft food, providing they get plenty of ripe seeding shepherd's purse (not the leaves) and cracked hemp and canary seeds. You will note that you are not dieting them correctly. Proceed on the following lines: In addition to the soft food, offer canary and maw seeds, soaked (germinating) summer rape, and lightly cracked hemp. A few crushed sunflower seeds should also be thrown in daily, increasing the quantity as the birds get older, when I gradually discontinue soaked seed. A few greens occasionally are relished, and a little coarse oatmeal. They need a free supply of the "seeding green foods," if I may use the term, meaning the seeding heads of chickweed, shepherd's purse, mouse-ear, knot-grass, groundsel, plantain and the like, especially the three first-named. But don't gather it off dusty roadsides, and strip off all large, coarse, stringy leaves.

A Goldfinch and Yellowhammer.

E. J. T.—You have left the "steadying" of the Goldfinch and Yellow Bunting until rather late; still, having been in your aviary they are not likely to be so wild as newly caught specimens. I don't suppose the Goldie will take much steadying. The cage known as the "Finch stock cage" (see the "Nut-shell" booklet, post free 2½d., dealing with the Goldie, which you will find very helpful) is the best type of cage for these birds. Your feeding is hardly correct. In addition to the Finch mixture, in a separate dish give a dessert spoonful of cracked sunflower seed occasionally, with a good pinch of maw and niger seeds now and again, as a further change. A little wild seed mixture is also excellent. The bird should have a free daily supply of knapweed, thistle heads (especially any with tiny maggots at the centre), milk thistle, seeding chickweed, groundsel, and shepherd's purse (not the coarse leaves), any cauliflower head which you can get full of seed all, or any, of these are liked by the Goldie, when in season, and help to get him through his moult in exhibition form. Many like a tiny white mealworm (just cast its skin) now and again. He should have provision for a bath whenever he feels inclined to take it. That he should bathe freely is important, and this applies also to the Yellowhammer. This latter bird will eat little seed other than canary seed, but should be tried with a few mealworms, gentles, and the live ants' eggs and soft food as recommended in the answer given to "N. B." this week (these things are the highly important items), which answer will tell you how to colour-feed the Hammer if you desire to do so. Most of the winners are pepper-fed. You are correct in saying that an exhibition British Goldfinch need not be a "monster"; the medium sized bird is best if carrying a good head. The hen Bullie you refer to will probably drop her eggs on to the floor; many do this. Thanks for complimentary remarks.

Two Troubles.

W. F. Wilbee.—If you mean that the Thrush has all its toes turned in, close together, and is unable to open them to grasp a perch, then I am afraid a cure is very doubtful. You might read the reply "A Thrush's Feet," and try the effect of the treatment therein mentioned. But if the cause of the trouble is the swelling at the joint which you mention, then try painting this every evening with a little tincture of iodine, using a small camel-hair brush. Put the perches very low down (do not have them too large), and food and water vessels within easy reach. With regard to the young Larks, I am rather puzzled. It reads like a case of partial paralysis, due to weakly constitution. It is not often it affects head and neck then passes to the legs; it is usually manifested in the latter. Pity you do not give details of feeding methods employed. Young Larks need to be given space in which to run about just when they are beginning to feed themselves; a "sprint" or two on grass does them a lot of good. I can advise you to stir half a teaspoonful of Parrish's chemical food (obtainable at any good chemists) into the soft food given the birds; or a teaspoonful into their drinking-water, in which case use only a glass or earthenware vessel. Give some minced up "green meat" amongst their food—rape seedlings are excellent, and so is clover and either can easily be obtained.

Moulting a Chaffinch.

N B.—Most birds steady down after a house-moult; I certainly prefer, however, to get them as steady as possible before the moult comes on. If they are unsteady afterwards, and knock about in a show-cage, there is real danger of flight feathers getting broken, or the web of the outer wing feathers getting frayed, or even the feathers over the beak getting "chipped," in which case the bird is badly handicapped on the show-bench. During the moult I should advise you to make the stock mixture canary three parts, and teazle, summer rape, charlock and linseed one part each. Allow a little hemp once a week, and a few sunflower seeds (say a teaspoonful) daily, except when giving the hemp, also the same quantity of a good wild seed mixture. You will find much of the latter wasted, but whatever the bird picks out will do him good, and it is very cheap. With regard to the live ants' eggs, these should certainly be given, but mixed amongst a little of a high-grade insectile food; with this commence to stir in a small pinch of a reliable brand of tasteless pepper, gradually increasing the quantity. A good teaspoonful of this combined colour and soft food daily will be quite sufficient, and ensure your bird coming through a fine colour (if naturally good in this respect), and carrying the much-desired "bloom." Give a little of the usual seeding green foods, and allow the bird to bathe freely, or spray him on suitable days. The strength of the colour food need not exceed one in four; this should be considered "full strength."

Brevities.

A Skylark (W.C.).—New feathers are sure to come at the moult. Get a little mild sulphur ointment from a chemist, and once daily anoint the place with this, using only a small quantity on the tip of a finger; do this for a week.

A Thrush's Feet (Frank Caddeu, or Parent).—Your signature is hard to decipher, and your letter does not give very detailed particulars. I advise you to try steeping the feet twice daily in strong, fairly-warm whisky and water (only a small quantity will be needed), and afterwards to open out the claws and gently "massage" them with some strong embrocation—be gentle, or you may break one. Pity you did not state what it was you had already tried.

British Bird Querists should purchase our "British Bird Manual," published in two parts, "Hard-bills" and "Softbills," price 1/- each, or in cloth cover together, 2/3 post free.

Concerning Jays (W.A.M.).—Jays have been bred in a large outdoor aviary. It would not be safe to keep smaller and weaker birds with them. There are no helpful sex differences in the plumage. If you choose a large, bright-coloured bird, and a smaller, dingier-coloured one (more grayish in body colour) you will almost of a certainty find them a pair. The hen is generally greyer at the back of the neck, the cock having a more-or-less reddish tinge thereabouts.

Light Mules (Constant Reader).—I am very glad to know that you have bred a good light Mule from that hen. With regard to the other two hens, you must please excuse my passing an opinion. I will say this, however, that it is very unusual to find any fancier willing to part with hen Canaries that have been "proved" to breed clear and lightly marked Mules. Taking ordinary Goldfinches, I do not find that they affect the throwing of light Mules, though it is only natural one's preference should be for light coloured Finches, and any pied Goldie (especially if nearly white) I should certainly favour. Still, I have bred first-class light Mules from rich-coloured exhibition Goldfinches.

A Colour-feeding Matter (Practical).—It is impossible to value light Mules without seeing them; everything depends upon their sex and how light they are. Light Mules need to be very good now before they stand any chance in even average competition, and hens seldom have any particular value. Personally, I should always colour-feed a light Linnet Mule (whether clear or marked). It is true that the pepper has little appreciable effect upon the colour of the bulls, but, in any case, the birds moult out with a better "bloom" upon their plumage. There are very few, I think, shown mal-fed.

Linnet Losing Its Song (J. W.).—It is quite possible that your Linnet may be about to break into the moult, and for this reason has gone off song. Your feeding is alright, though a little teazle-seed might be added to the stock mixture. Stir together a teaspoonful each of glycerine and honey (unrefined), and of this stir a half teaspoonful into two tablespoonfuls of drinking water, fresh twice daily. This will do no harm, anyway, and if the bird is "heart-se" (as you say) will effect a cure in a few days. I take it from your letter that the Linnet is not moping or looking out of sorts. Glad to hear you like CAGE BIRDS so much

Loss of Feathers (F. C.).—I do not advise you to do anything to either Siskin or hen Rullie (especially as you say they are in excellent health). It is a frequent occurrence for birds to lose feathers from the head at this season of the year, and as the moulting season is now due, these will be replaced naturally. The thing you want to make certain about is that the birds are not being "worried" by redmite or grey lice.

Losing Feathers (E. T. Williams).—Note the reply given "F.C." this week. It is a remarkable age for a Blackbird, eighteen years. I presume it moulted alright last season? You can hardly expect so much whistling now, seeing its advanced years. You could get a bottle of Parrish's chemical food from a good chemist, and stir half a teaspoonful daily amongst the bird's soft food for 10 to 12 days: this is an excellent and safe tonic and strengthening medicine.

A White Thrush (H. H.).—A white Missel Thrush is certainly rare, but albinos are not of great value simply as show birds, because only one or two shows provide classes for them, and they are not (by ruling of the National British Bird and Mule Club) admissible in competition against normal-coloured birds. Albinos are of value as curiosities of Nature. The circumstances under which you found the bird were most curious. I congratulate you upon its possession.

Ailing Goldfinch (Constant Reader).—You will, no doubt, have read Mr. Yates' recent remarks about the delicate nature of the breathing apparatus of birds. And Goldies affected in the manner described by you should be treated for bronchitis, as advised by Mr. Yates in last week's CAGE BIRDS. If taken in hand at an early stage, a cure is always possible. The birds should be separated from healthy ones, and be kept in a warm sunny room, out of draughts.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., etc.

Cardinals, Plants, etc.

Red Crest.—(1) You can keep the Yellow-billed or Black-throated species with perfect safety with the smallest Waxbills, but, while some individuals of Virginian, Pope (Dominican), Red-crested (Grey), and Green (Black-crested) are safe, other individuals are very treacherous with their smaller fellow captives, and unless your aviary is very roomy and with plenty of cover, I cannot advise you to keep this latter group with the small birds. The Yellow-billed are, however, a very handsome and pleasing species, smaller and slimmer than the Red-crested. (2) You should be able to procure them in pairs, but the sexes are practically alike in plumage—the hen is usually not quite so lustrous or deep in colour as her mate; that is, speaking of adults only. (3) They have not a sustained song, but their notes are rich and pleasing and oft repeated. (4) 25 to 30 birds not larger than a Norwich Canary, but if you wish breeding results, say, half-a-dozen pairs. (5) For indoors, spruce, box, cnonymous, laurestinus, with ivy and plumbago as creepers. Out-of-doors all the above, also hops, privet, roses, and any kind of fruit trees and non-poisonous shrubs.

Budgerigars, etc., with Finches.

Oliver Dadley.—As I have often stated in this column, mixing Budgerigars and other Parrakeets is rather a risky operation, but in a roomy enclosure such as yours, unless you permit Budgerigars to overwhelm it, the risk will not be unduly great, and you could keep the following together, with, at the most, only an occasional scrimmage and the loss from this source but very small: Budgerigars, Blue-winged Love Birds, Cockatiels, Grey-winged Ouzels, or some other hardy Himalayan Thrush, Zebra, Saffron, and Ribbon Finches, White and Grey Java Sparrows, Bronze and Magpie Mannikins, Grey, Green, and Pope Cardinals, Gold-breasted Waxbills, Diamond and Peaceful Doves, Australian Crested Pigeons, and a pair of some small species of Quails, say Chinese Painted or Harlequins. All the above are to be fairly cheaply obtained, with the exception of the Ouzels or Thrushes, and these latter would cost from 60s. to 80s. per pair. After a year's experience with the above there are many other species of beautiful birds that could be introduced as obtainable, notably various Grass, Singing, and Serin Finches, and the like. If you decide on all Parrakeets, do not have too many kinds, or too numerous. Confine them for a commencement as under Budgerigars. Cockatiels, Blue-wing and Madagascar Lovebirds, Rosella, Ring-necked and Red-rump Parrakeets.

A Feather Plucker.

Mrs. T.—This habit, once it has been contracted, is very difficult to eradicate, and needs the exercise of much patience and perseverance. Get the following seed mixture: Two parts each canary, white millet, and oats, and one part each hemp and sunflower seeds; the whole to be well mixed together. In addition, supply liberally ripe fruit, nuts, and plain biscuit as extras. Keep a piece of cuttlefish always in the cage. Give, so long as the voidings are not watery loose, a dose of Dinneford's Magnesia every third day, water and magnesia in equal parts. Take away the drinking water over night, and then give it the magnesia water first thing in the morning, and let this remain in the cage till mid-day, when the ordinary drinking water can be put in again. On the days you are not giving the magnesia, well colour the drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food. Anoint all bare places daily with Spratt's "Pennacura," and any sore places with a little healing ointment. Treat the blister with the Goulard water as before, and spray the plumage twice weekly with quassia solution, choosing a genial warm day for the purpose. The spraying should take place before mid-day. Keep the bird occupied as much as possible, and try it with wood to chew up and empty cotton reels to play with. Keep it out of draught, yet where it can get light and air. You had better report progress in two or three weeks' time, but if fresh adverse symptoms occur, repeat query at once, with fullest details.

What Bird?

Miss Wright.—I am presuming you are acquainted with our native Yellow Bunting, so I am dismissing that species, otherwise your description comes very near a young bird of that species. However, though your description is by no means complete, I am of the opinion that they are Chestnut-backed Buntings, a very handsome species worth 20s. to 30s. per pair, according to number in the market; at times they are fairly plentiful, and then there is often a stoppage in the supply for fairly lengthy periods. I should supply a seed mixture of three parts each canary and white millet, two parts oats, and one part each hemp, sunflower, and rape seeds—the whole to be well mixed together, and a constant supply kept in the aviary; also supply green food, little ripe fruit, and two or three mealworms per bird daily, with any other garden insects and lice you can capture for them. There is no reason why they should not breed in your aviary, providing they have not too much company. If any young are hatched out, you would have to keep a constant supply of live food till the young leave the nest. They usually are very liable to go wrong during the moult, but if your aviary has a good weather proof shelter, they should do well enough, but I prefer to take all species of Bunting into a room for the winter, in which, if there is no heat, they are protected from searching winds, damp, and wet. It is just possible your birds may be Red-headed Ortolly, ruddy brown Buntings; it is very difficult to define species from a partial word-picture, but the above remarks would apply equally to either species in all particulars.

Brevities.

Grey Parrot With Prolapsus (E.W.B.).—It is with much pleasure that I note the happy ending of your bird's illness, and that the means used have wrought a cure, and I hope there will be no further recurrence of the trouble.

Lovebird With Cramped Foot (Jerry).—Bathe the foot with warm water (fairly hot), then paint with whisky, twice or oftener daily, and give two drops of Dinneford's magnesia direct to the beak with a quill twice a week. If the bird is no better in a fortnight, destroy it, for the case will be hopeless. Use a camel-hair brush for applying the whisky.

Crossbill's Plumage (W. A. M.).—The nestling plumage is ashy-brown, this passes into greyish-green, then into orange-yellow, and finally into the dull crimson of the fully adult bird. I may say here that the crimson plumage is not retained in captivity, but that they moult into a reddish-yellow—this is common with many species of birds having crimson or partly crimson plumage, both British and Foreign—instance Pine Grosbeak, Linnet, Redpoll, Rosefinches, Purple Finch, etc.

Parrot With Worms (Hibernia).—Give this bird as much areca nut powder as will thinly cover a sixpence, mix it into the form of a pellet, and give this every third day till the trouble disappears. It will be well also to well colour the drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food for the next month or more, giving clear water once a week. Seed mixture: Two parts each canary, white millet and oats, and one part each hemp, dari, and sunflower seeds, the whole to be well mixed together; also supply ripe fruit ad lib., nuts and plain biscuits; keep a piece of clean cuttlefish in the cage. Keep the bird in some position where it will get light and air, yet not be subjected to draughts.

Birds for Cage (Rita).—Yes, the dealer you name should be able to supply you with the birds named. The Grey Singing Finch will do well enough as a bachelor among other birds. As regards the bath, get one to hang outside the cage door, removing same when all have had their tub. If you prefer a bath inside the cage, a shallow, porcelain quarter-plate photographic developing dish is as good a utensil as can be procured. There should be a shady portion in every cage to which the birds can retire from extreme sun heat; at the same time they should be kept in such a position that they can take a sun bath according to desire and opportunity.

What Bird—Will it Talk? (Charlie).—It is a Roseate or Rose-crested Cockatoo. This species enjoys a good reputation as a talker in its native country, but its reputation as just the reverse over here, though occasionally one hears of quite talented individuals. The first thing is to get it quite tame, then fondle, pet, and make a fuss of it generally. Keep it in your midst where it will hear plenty of conversation, also talk to it and teach it by constant repetition, and it should ultimately talk a little at any rate. It must be borne in mind that some individuals are much more responsive than others. Even with a reputed talking species there is great variableness, and some individuals take a lot of teaching. The royal road in this and similar cases is patience and perseverance.

Budgerigar With Growth on Tongue (T. Williams).—It is very difficult to advise in such a case without seeing the nature of the growth. Continue your present treatment, coupled with giving it two drops of Dinneford's Magnesia direct to the mouth from a quill every third day so long as the voidings are not watery loose. Get a box of honey and borax from your chemist, and put a little on the bird's tongue several times daily, so long as the box lasts. I have not yet had an opportunity of reading last week's "C.B.," and you must address your query to the expert concerned (Mr. Yates), per the Editor. If the growth does not begin to yield in, say, a fortnight's time, it would be kinder to destroy it, unless you care to take it to a local vet. first to examine and see if he can remove it.

Budgerigars (A.E.G.).—You would find our booklet, "Budgerigars and Cockatiels," very helpful. Many Budgerigars are in moult at the present time; a little lettuce and flowering (seeding), grass ad lib., should be supplied as green food; keep a piece of clean cuttlefish hanging in the cage. These birds are quite hardy, and providing they have space for exercise are quite able to face our severest winters out of doors, at the same time they must not be subjected to draughts. If kept in a room with a variable temperature this would induce an unnatural moult. Give them a millet spray two or three times a week; this will be a change, and find them something to do picking out the seeds. Keep a small piece of apple between the wire of the cage. The curiosity of the Budgies will induce them to nibble it before long. The greenhouse aviary will answer well if you eliminate damp and draughts, and can keep the temperature fairly regular.

Parrot Pulling Out Feathers (G. Rose).—Its diet is not sufficiently varied. In addition to the seed mixture you must apply ripe fruit, nuts and plain biscuit. Keep a piece of cuttlefish continually in the cage. Give Dinneford's Magnesia, in the proportion of one part magnesia to two parts water—in lieu of the drinking water, every third day, so long as the voidings are not watery loose. If such occurs you must lengthen the period between the doses. On other days, that is when not giving the magnesia, well colour the drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food. Spray the plumage twice weekly with quassia solution, and paint the bare parts daily with Spratt's Pennakura. For some time to come use the following seed mixture: three parts each canary and white millet, two parts oats, and one part each hemp and sunflower seeds, the whole to be well mixed together. Do not give any tea, coffee, or milk sops, table scraps, or any kind of animal food whatever.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 9, College Road, Hatton, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s 6d each bird, for reply direct, 2s 6d; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. And bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

R. W. S.—Your bird died of pneumonia, contracted through a cold.

W. J. S.—I do not think mice had anything to do with the loss of your Canary. Splenic apoplexy was responsible for death; this organ (the spleen) was considerably enlarged and engorged with blood, and the liver was in a condition of fatty degeneration. The trouble is of dietetic origin; there is nothing contagious, and I do not anticipate any further losses.

V. E. T. S.—Canary died of "hepatitis," or inflammation of the liver. This is not a common disease of birds, but occurs sometimes as the result of an over-stimulating diet, and on the other hand from exposure to draughts. If you have any more ailing, an occasional dose of glauber salts in the drinking water will be found beneficial, especially if the cause is of dietetic origin.

"Blue Trix."—The "then Bullbul" turned out to be a cock bird. Possibly, it was only an error in your description. It was suffering from tapeworm infestation, death resulting from inflammation of the intestines from the presence of these parasites. There was no disease affecting the liver, as you had anticipated. Had the presence of the parasites been known, suitable treatment might have saved your bird. Where birds appear unthrifty, or there exists malnutrition, even though appetite be unimpaired, one should always suspect the presence of worms.

L. T. Hetley.—The disease which caused the death of Tanager is not of a contagious nature. There was evidence of its having been going on for a long period. Each affected bird would contract the disease from the same source. It would not be communicable from one to the other. The lungs were both affected with pneumonia of a chronic character; the edges were necrotic and solid, this latter state of solidification being a rather uncommon affection of the bird. The disease would not manifest itself until well advanced, and sufficient of the lung tissue involved to materially interfere with respiration.

J. Forster.—Post-mortem appearances in this case were even more marked than in the first. The intestines were in an inflamed condition; the body cavity contained a blood-stained fluid showing the acuteness of the affection, and in addition the liver participated. Pneumonia as a sequel was the exciting cause of death; the other conditions the predisposing causes. That which I see I must interpret from the evidence of my senses, and under the conditions I cannot depart from my first opinion, but would advise you to look further into your dieting, quite apart from egg food as a likely cause. Seeds might also cause the same condition.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

A Cutting (J. W. M.).—Many thanks for your kindness.

Birds and Books (C. P.).—You do not state what kinds of birds you prefer—Canaries, British, or Foreign. If you will tell us this we shall be happy to advise you.

Bow-fronted Skylark Cages (W. Sherwood).—These cages are quite common, and any of the large cage-makers advertising in CAGE BIRDS will supply you with one. Send for a catalogue from one or other of them, and you will probably see an illustration therein, with prices for various sizes.

Cuckoo Article (G. P. M.).—The matter to which you refer took the form of a letter from Miss Sergeant, and was published in CAGE BIRDS October 9th, 1909. A letter on the same subject by the same writer appeared previously on August 14th, 1909.

A Paragraph (H. B.).—Accept our thanks for the paragraph you sent us.

THE SHOWS.

GLASGOW (West End) C.B.C.

First annual young bird show held July 9, in Clarendon Hall. The entries were not so many as was expected, owing to the poor breeding season experienced by several of the members; but a very nice collection of birds were staged, the entries totalling 42. Mr. J. A. Ferguson, who should have judged, was, I am sorry to say, unable through illness to officiate. Two very capable gentlemen consented to judge, Mr. C. Campbell and Mr. A. Miller. Mr. Campbell judged the Norwich section, and Mr. Miller the Border, Yorkshire, and Mule sections. Their awards gave every satisfaction. The show was visited during the afternoon by many members, visitors, and friends. A hearty vote of thanks was accorded the judges.

BOOTLE AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Annual Nest Feather show held on July 2nd. Mr. J. W. Metcalfe (Liverpool) placed the cards, and his awards gave general satisfaction. The Secretary, Mr. Hunt, knows the duties of running shows. He was well backed up by a hard-working committee. The cup for best bird bred by exhibitors was won by Mr. Young with a grand clear yellow, which will probably turn out a yellow hen. If so, it will be a topper. Some doubted its being a yellow, but when compared with its brother winner in buff class, it was easily made a yellow. The runner-up was a grand self buff Yorkshire green. This bird was magnificently staged, reflecting great credit on its owner, Mr. McNulty. The Novice classes did not fill well, but what were there were of nice style and quality. The society had a grand array of specials. Bootle seems to have a knack of providing something good for its members.

NELSON AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Annual first feather show, held on July 9. The entries were small compared with last year's, about 60 birds facing the judge. This was owing to a large number having had rather a bad breeding season up to date. But the quality of the exhibits was of very high order. CAGE BIRDS' posters were arranged round the show room. Mr. England, the secretary, is the right man in the right place, and he was very courteous, and conducted the show in a businesslike manner. The show was attended by a good number of members and visitors, and the stewarding was ably carried out by Mr. Wood. Winners of specials:—(Yorkshires) Wilkinson; 2nd best in show, Gregson and Bell; (Norwich) best bird in show, Mr. Bell, yell. Norwich; other Norwich specials, Fulton and Riley; selling class, J. Emmott; British, Holden; Foreign, England. The judge was Mr. J. Trengove, of Rishton.

Correspondence.

A Happy Ending.

SIR,—We caught a young Thrush about four or five years ago, and it has always been kept in a cage by itself. It is a cock bird. Last week father was going up a lane to his work when he caught another young Thrush, which we tried to feed, but couldn't get it to eat anything, so father put it in with the old Thrush, and almost at once it took to feeding it. Is this in any way out of the common?

Proposed Norwich Plainhead Club for the Northern Counties.

SIR,—The postponed meeting will be held on Thursday, July 21st (instead of Wednesday), at 8 o'clock, in Lockhart's, 65, Grainger Street (near Monument). A welcome will be given to any fancier interested in the Norwich Plainhead. There is a talk of adding the Cinnamons as well; so, you Cinnamon fanciers, turn up to the meeting and further the interests of this variety which has been neglected in the North.

The Hatching of Seagulls in an Incubator.

SIR,—I think the following may be of some interest to readers of CAGE BIRDS. About a month ago a gentleman, while exploring the cliffs here (Jersey) discovered some Seagulls' eggs in a crevice in the rock. Two of these were given to a local gentleman here, who placed them together with ducks' eggs in an incubator. On June 29th one of the Gull's eggs showed signs of cracking. During the evening a Gull made an appearance from the shell and was promptly placed in the upper compartment. The day following the second Gull emerged from the shell. They are being fed on milk and garden worms, the latter being greatly relished by them. At the time of writing they are thriving exceedingly well.

REGINALD HASSELL.

A Yorkshire Union Problem.

A Suggested Partial Solution.

SIR,—A matter that has in the past considerably engaged and is at present time seriously demanding the attention of the council of the Yorkshire Union is the devising of some method whereby the enthusiasm and consequent support of exhibitors can be maintained throughout the entire series of Union winter shows, thus minimising the dread, which experience teaches is only too well founded, that secretaries of societies holding their shows towards the end of the season entertain, that their efforts, however well directed, are partially foredoomed to failure in consequence of the intense interest, which spells success, having spent itself as a result of the probable winners of the various competitions being confined to three or four (sometimes less) competitors. I was one of about a dozen fanciers who casually called at the headquarters of the Bradford (West) Society a few nights ago, when Messrs. Ogden Brothers introduced this question, at the same time giving an outline of a scheme which is calculated, at any rate, to prove a distinct advance on present procedure, and one which I, personally, consider as worthy of the most careful consideration of all societies in the Union which are holding open winter shows. Briefly the outline of the scheme is as follows: Each society holding an open winter show to contribute a certain sum, say 10s., to form a fund for providing the prizes. For the present season this would mean £8, which could be divided into three or four prizes, or any other number the societies concerned thought fit, but the first prize must be something well worth struggling for. The names of the 16 societies are written out and each placed in a separate envelope and sealed. From these 16 envelopes the number thought best for the purposes of the competition (preferably not more than ten) are drawn, and these are the only shows at which points are allowed to count. These ten envelopes are in turn placed in another envelope and sealed with wax and deposited with some responsible person, to be opened only by an appointed committee when all the shows have been held. Thus, no person will have the slightest idea at which shows points will count, because the six envelopes left out would be immediately burned without having been opened, and, naturally, any competitor desirous of coming out at the top of the competition would feel compelled to "fight to a finish." Of course, all the details of the scheme could easily be arranged by the representatives of the various societies, but I trust that I may be allowed to suggest that it would be well for all exhibitors in non-limit and novice classes to be allowed to compete. I am given to understand that this scheme has emanated from the mind of Dr. Syson (this is how his name was given to me), of Glasgow, and, if so, or whoever the author may be, he deserves credit and thanks for a scheme so full of important possibilities, especially applicable, I think, to our Yorkshire Union societies and competitions. For instance, how would the scheme work in connection with the novice medal competition? I have an idea that the classes would be almost as large at the last show as at the first. If societies feel so inclined, there is no reason why the scheme should not be given a trial at the forthcoming winter shows. With quick and unanimous action there is enough time to make all the necessary arrangements, and I trust it is hardly necessary for me to say that if I can render any assistance or give any further explanation, such services as I can command are placed fully and freely at the disposal of any of our societies.

Questions Concerning the Cuckoo.

SIR,—Will any kind reader give me some advice on the keeping of Cuckoos; also say whether it is possible to keep these birds over the winter, and how? I have one at present that is very tame, it will even perch on the finger. It was reared by a pair of Robins, and is now about a month old. But I have to feed it myself. I have been told that they are difficult to keep over the winter. Do they really leave us for the winter months? Some people, I find, doubt it.

Proposed New Cage Bird Society for Huddersfield and District.

SIR,—I should esteem it a favour if you would kindly allow me to bring the above to the notice of your readers in this district. In conversation with a few fanciers in this district it seems there is a desire on the part of many that a Society should be formed. I have already got the promise of a few fanciers and am sure there will be many more that I have not had the pleasure of meeting who would wish to join and get the advantages of such a Society. Will all interested persons please send their names and addresses to me?

A Recipe for a Washable Distemper.

SIR,—Mr. F. J. Rook, writing under the above heading in last week's issue of CAGE BIRDS "inflicts" a recipe for the above upon us, which he informs us he has culled from some old trade journal. There is one thing, or rather two things, that I admire about his letter. First, the candid way he informs us he has not done any of his own cages out with this distemper, because, he says, they did not want doing out at present. Second, if anyone cares, he says, to try it, will they kindly let him know how it acts. Query: On the birds, or on the cage? Mr. Rook concludes his letter by informing us where to purchase the soda waterglass, no doubt with the best of motives: but it appears to me that he does not hold the intelligence of readers in very high esteem.

A. BARNES.

The Song and Appetite of Birds.

SIR,—A very interesting article on the subject of birds, from the pen of that well-known writer "Vanoc" appeared in a recent "Referee," from which I extract the following: "We know no more why birds sing than we know how birds fly. Parrots, Mynahs, Starlings talk, and Bullfinches pipe tunes correctly; but the long-drawn phrases of the Thrush, or the melodies of the Blackbird, more excellent than the Nightingale, are a mystery of mysteries. The unbidden expression of emotional energy in bird songs stirs somewhere below the surface of the hidden sea of feeling in man. Do our voices or do any of our modes of expression or activity appeal to the sub-conscious self of birds as they appeal to us? From the birds' point of view there is nothing nice or nasty. Yet in our egotism we shudder at the sight of an Aasvogel plunging his bare neck in the carcass of a dead ox, though we vibrate with pleasure at the sight of the jewelled Humming Bird performing the same operation in the chalice of a fragrant flower. Though birds are a synonym for grace, daintiness and melody, they are greedier than pigs—if pigs are greedy. A Wren of my acquaintance made two hundred and thirty journeys in one day between her nest and the garden. Mr. Eric Parker says that the Wryneck supplies its young with five hundred and thirty-seven meals daily. No pig can eat his own weight in twenty-four hours, but it is calculated, with what truth I know not, that the daily diet of Wrens, Robins, and Thrushes is often heavier than themselves. Still, on second thoughts, no wild bird can safely be described as "greedy," because there is no evidence to show that he eats more than is good for him."

Is it a Record Family?

SIR,—I thought it might interest readers of CAGE BIRDS to know that Mr. J. Day, of Lowestoft, an old fancier and master basket maker, has had the good luck to have one of his hen Canaries lay eight eggs, all of which she brought off herself. Five of the number came off on June 14th, one on June 15, and one on June 16, and the last one on June 19. He is very proud to know he holds the record round about Lowestoft. Seven of the eight are strong, and in three days' time will be on the perch. He has plenty of visitors to see them, and I myself am so greatly interested in them that I call at his workshop every morning to see them.

Thrushes that Will Not Gape.

SIR,—Seeing in your correspondence columns advice on how to hand-rear Thrushes, I would be very much obliged if the writer, or any other reader of CAGE BIRDS, would tell me how to feed young Thrushes that will not gape, as I had a nest of them last year. They were ten days old before they died, and they fed well for two or three days, and then started chirping all the time. They would not stop in the nest, nor would they open their mouths to be fed, with the result that I lost them all. I fed them every hour and a-half from 5 o'clock on the morning till 8 o'clock at night. Then I put a bit of soft cloth over the top of them. They were fed on egg and arrowroot cake made sloppy. Now, if "Thrush Lover," or any other reader, can tell me a remedy I would be very much obliged.

A Contrivance for preventing "Sweating."

SIR,—I have found the following contrivance an excellent one for preventing hens from "sweating" their young; and it is a great help in cases where there is only one young bird in the nest. I have had a "sweating" hen for nearly five years; she is a good mother in every way. I have tried all sorts of things to stop her "sweating" her young, but have failed until now. I have had great success with this method; I think my fellow-readers will see the benefits to be derived with but a trifling outlay. Get an ordinary baby's "dummy" and, having taken the bone (or ring) off, wire it through the air-holes of the nest as shown in the accompanying illustration. This supports the young, and also prevents entirely their being "sweated."

A. BRETT.

A New Society for Chopwell and District.

SIR,—In answer to "Derwent Lad," I beg to differ with him about the remarks of the chairman. There were a good many present when he got up and said: "Let them go, we can do without such members." Now, sir, a certain member asked me what I thought about the chairman's remarks. I said that I did not like them at all, as it was the men with the birds that we wanted to make our show a success. At the election of judges for the first feather show there were two men put up, Mr. A. and Mr. B. Mr. A. was elected to judge, but the present secretary got up and said there would be 2s. 6d. worth of his entries short if this man had to judge. The two men had to go up for election again, when Mr. A. gets knocked out and Mr. B. gets the work. When we came away from the meeting you should have heard the remarks that were passed on our way home. One man said he had never seen such a thing in his life for judges to be elected twice just because the secretary objects. I was surprised to see the whole meeting ruled by this one man. "Derwent Lad" says that it was agreed at the last open show to pay members 17s. 6d. per class; I would like to let "Derwent Lad" know that they did this at their first open show. He goes on to speak about the man who won prize-money to the value of £3 10s. 6d. all together; but he just got £2 2s. 6d. of this money, and "Derwent Lad" does not say how much in entrance fees this member paid. He paid £1 12s. as entrance fees, and the said member got £2 2s. 6d. including specials. Yes, it came up for discussion, but who was it went for this money to remain in the funds? Some members who had never been at a meeting for a whole year, some that had no prize money to get at all, and some who wanted about 1s. 6d. Now, the Society need not have been "on the rocks." But they kept the money in the funds and lost about ten or twelve of their members through doing so. I think they would not be much in pocket by keeping it. I differ with "Derwent Lad" in saying they have tried to promote the fancy, for it was arranged to hold one meeting at Chopwell, and one at Derwent Valley, but this did not suit—it was too far for some of them to come (or they would not come); it was arranged to hold the F.F. Show at Chopwell, and the Open Show down at the Valley, but this did not suit; so they have got all to themselves, as they wanted.

A TRUE FANCIER.

[We have had to considerably condense this letter, as the matters dealt with are of purely local interest, and would, we venture to think, be best settled in the club-room of the Society concerned.—Editor.]

Returning a Kindness.

SIR,—My son has drawn my attention to the following item in the "Boys' Own Paper," and I think it will greatly interest my fellow-readers of your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS: A bird lover writes to us from Ashbourne, Derbyshire: "I think you would like to hear how a Chaffinch fed a young Thrush while the mother Thrush was imprisoned. A Thrush and a Chaffinch built in the same tree in our garden. When the young were hatched, the Thrush would go and fetch a worm and break it into pieces; it would feed its young first and then the Chaffinch. Both the young Thrushes and the Chaffinch would let me stroke them. One morning, when the young were learning to fly, one Thrush fell down the cellar grating and could not get out again. The old Thrush tried to get it out, but only fell into the hole under the grating herself. While she was imprisoned, the Chaffinch fed the other young Thrush. We caught the two Thrushes that were imprisoned and set them free. The old bird does not seem to have forgotten that we set her free, for she is quite tame and comes nearly into the house."

The Appeal for a Chatham Fancier.

SIR,—Permit me to thank all those who so kindly helped me in my endeavours to assist an old fancier "over the stile." I enclose a cutting out of the "Chatham News." Will you be good enough to print it, and ask all those who have subscription lists to let me have them back, so that I may bring the fund to a close? I once again thank you for all you have done in aiding me in my efforts.

H. WRAY.

22, Glencoe Road, Chatham.

With the object of assisting Mr. W. Bradly, a prominent local fancier, a benefit smoking concert, arranged by Mr. H. Wray, of the Chatham Fanciers' Society, was held in the Ropemakers' Arms on Monday evening, and proved in every respect an unqualified success. Councillor J. Fenner presided over a large attendance, and among those present were Alderman H. F. Whyman and Councillors O. Taylor, E. A. Billinghurst, and W. Webb. The secretary of the fund (Mr. Wray) announced that there had been a splendid response to what was undoubtedly a most deserving appeal. The Chairman and several of the Councillors also commented on the sad circumstances of the case, and expressed their pleasure at being able to subscribe towards the fund. During the evening a capital programme of vocal and instrumental items was contributed by Messrs. G. Ryan, H. Smith, W. Cass, G. Williams, L. Gilbert, S. Elliott, G. Wells, J. Frid, W. Napier, J. Clifford, F. Hartnup, H. Martin, G. Butler, Bardell, Hall, Day, Duffield, and others. Mr. Bradly, who has been ill for about thirteen months, and is still unable to follow his employment, was formerly a printer at the "News" office, and it is a gratifying fact that his old workmates headed a subscription list which totalled £3 10s. 9d. Several fanciers' societies outside the district have also responded to the call of assistance, and among the subscriptions received are:—Canterbury Fanciers, 14s.; Portsmouth Fanciers, 10s.; Isle of Thanet Fanciers, 8s. 6d.; Erdington Fanciers, Birmingham, 5s. 9d. Donations have also been given by the following gentlemen:—Mr. G. F. Holder, K.C., M.P., £1 1s.; Mr. W. H. Atkinson, 5s.; Alderman H. F. Whyman, 2s. 6d.; Councillor Taylor, 2s. 6d.; Councillor Webb, 1s. 6d.; Councillor Fenner, 2s. 6d.; Councillor Lawrence, 2s. 6d.; Mr. Gordon Roberts, 2s. 6d.; Mr. G. Baker, 2s. 6d.; Mr. W. Martin, 2s. 6d.; Mr. E. Filley, 2s. 6d.; and Mr. A. Filley, 2s. 6d. Up to the present the fund amounts to about £10, but as several subscription lists are due to the Secretary, it is anticipated that quite £12 will be raised.

The Danger to the British Bird Fancy.

SIR,—It is somewhat amusing to view the situation partly raised by your directing attention to the danger to the bird trade arising from the recent interpretation in London of the wild bird protection laws. The National British Bird and Mule Club convene a meeting to see what can be done to protect—not the liberty of the useful wild birds, but the men interested in ramming them with cayenne pepper and painting their pretty plumage. Very elevating indeed! But the shock in the whole report was the mention of a letter from another society, and one can fancy he hears the exclamation, "What! a letter from the Cage Bird Union? Is that thing not dead yet?" How those men must have hung their head in shame and blushed in confusion when the missive from the child they strove to crush in the cradle was placed before them extending sympathy and proffered help during a time of distress! How bitter must the cup have been! But perhaps the sense of taste was absent. Be thankful thou child of love that those giants of liberty in their rage against law and authority did not fall upon you and rend you limb from limb. Instead, it is proposed to create an aristocratic sort of body to countenance benignantly the operations of the active members of the Protection Societies who will be the recipients of the execrations of the men whose liberty is being restricted. Possibly on occasion the telegraph wires will vibrate at the command of the "Legion of Smilers" with the message that some unlucky fancier is catching Linnets without a license, and a policeman is seen rushing along on a cycle or stepping from a motor car intent upon the capture. Fame not at the picture; it is as I see it on the walls of the "Feathers." Sir, let me invite them to first perfect the machinery already in existence, giving their countenance and unstinted support to the Union, to put down the abuses that exist in their own ranks; then may they turn and with justifiable pride point to the mighty organisation they have raised to deal with the violations in the Fancy; giving to their deputations an importance that will command attention and respect. It will then be time enough to further uplift the Fancy by reforming catchers and dealers. Nor should it be forgotten that few fanciers have the facilities of Mr. Maxwell for the perfect treatment of the captives. I would warn them to be careful in approaching the legislature on the question of their hobby. Something more: the Cage Bird Union, rule 22, might give cause for grumbling. I have half a mind to suggest to the Chancellor of the Exchequer the imposition of a small tax per bird—the delightful song, the gay and amusing manners of our charming pets are worth a few coppers per year—for is it not our luxury? It would realise more than dog or gun licence. Neither must it be forgotten that birds are considered a nuisance by some neighbours. There is much, very much, to be considered by those anxious defenceless castaways.

G. W. MACPARTLING.

More Mules from Mules.

SIR,—Please allow me to state that Mr. J. A. Murray (Sunderland) has hatched two youngsters from the third nest of his pairing of the cock Linnet Mule and hen Canary. Whether the three remaining eggs were fertile or not Mr. Murray did not know at the time of enquiring, as he had not interfered with the hen in any way. He has now six young ones left from the above pair, two from the first nest, two from the second nest, and two from the third nest. W. REID.

A Problem for Canary Breeders

SIR,—I would like to know whether anyone has had a similar case to the following, and whether there is any cure for it? I have a hen Canary that is between three to four years old. All this year she has been suffering from sore feet. The part of the foot which rests on the perch and all round the joint becomes very much swollen and inflamed, and then suppurates. On bathing the feet in warm water and pressing them gently, the "puss" comes away, and there is a small hard corn, which, when taken out, leaves a deep hole. This relieves the bird a little for a day or two. Then the whole thing occurs again—first in one foot and then in the other, and sometimes both. I consulted a veterinary surgeon, who told me to paint the feet with iodine—not the white, as he considers that useless. This treatment took down the inflammation, but did not cure the trouble. I have taken away the perches, and use sawdust instead of sand. The mother of the bird suffered from tuberculosis. Of course, I did not know this when I allowed her to go to nest. Can this have anything to do with the present trouble? By the help of your paper (which I have taken for some years past), I have been able to drag several birds through serious illnesses, and don't like to be beaten in the present case; so shall be glad of any advice. I may mention that the bird seems quite well in her general health, and is lively when not in pain.

Wild Bird Life.

Stonechats on Surrey Commons

Many acres of land in Surrey are what is generally known as "common land," that is ground free to all. It is mostly covered with grass, wild weeds of all kinds, heather, furze and brambles, just the cover that appeals to the wild creatures of the country side; and all these breezy open spaces are the haunts of many of our most charming wild birds. The larger ones, such as Rooks, 'Daws, Hawks, Starlings, etc., can be seen at any time. Finches are common everywhere and at any time, the tall thistles and teazle being an additional attraction in the autumn. And among the brambles and furze in the sheltered nooks many migrants and resident birds nest in security. In fact, I have at different times met with every species common to the southern counties upon these downs, so that there is no better place, free to all, to watch the habits of feathered creatures. To do this, too, one need not tramp over miles of rough ground. Just remain quietly in a sheltered spot, with a good pair of glasses, and the hours will pass all too quickly. The anxious notes of the Linnets and Green birds will quickly claim the attention, and the noise made by the feeding of young birds will probably be heard from where one is resting.

The Stonechat is one of the most interesting birds of the common, and will quickly be noted, for these birds are fairly plentiful, and being watchful and alert will soon expose themselves to view. To the average observer the Stonechat is a bird likely to convey a definite and lasting impression when seen for the first time. His is an individuality not easily overlooked or forgotten. He is bold, watchful, vivacious and independent. Now he is posing delicately upon the top of a gorse bush or bramble, and he courts and commands attention. At times he dives to the ground, reappearing immediately within a few yards of his first position. Joined by his watchful spouse, he proceeds to play a game of "bluff" with the novice at bird's nesting, and no bird of the common is more equal to the task than this charming black-headed beauty. For he is a past master at the game. Although he has no system of deception (sometimes appearing most indifferent when he should be most anxious) he may keep one watching the whole of a summer's morning without success, for one is unable to fathom his actions, or those of his equally alert partner.

No. 426.
Sent by Mr. Geo. B. Daniels, 69, Derby Lane, Old Swan, Liverpool.

The enclosed sketch of a device for preventing litter in the bird-room will perhaps be of interest to your readers. It takes the form of a zinc trough fixed to the cage rack, and since adopting same I have found it an excellent time saver, inasmuch as the bird-room only requires sweeping out occasionally, and no seed husks are carried on the feet to other parts of the house, which, according to my experience, is often a source of trouble with bird-keepers. The saving in the seed bill is also an item, all the seed thrown out by the birds being caught, which otherwise falls on the floor, and is swept away. It is simple to make, anyone possessing a pair of shears and able to use a soldering iron being able to make half a dozen in an evening. The enclosed sketch shows the dimensions, and the dotted lines indicate the places at which to turn up the zinc to form the completed article. Small wire hooks are soldered on to the inside ends which fit into a wire staple driven into the uprights of the cage rack. The bottom of the tray which goes a couple of inches underneath the cage is turned up ¼ of an inch at the back to prevent the seed, etc., from falling on to the cage below. I find the tray does not obstruct any light from the cages, and on entering the bird-room at first the trays are hardly noticeable. I use No. 8 zinc for the purpose, and a dozen troughs can be made at a cost of about three shillings. I have not shown the cage in position, so that the tray may be seen in its entirety.—GEO. B. DANIELS.

SUNDERLAND C.B.A.

The second of the first feather shows was held on July 9th, in the Fawcett Street Cafe, and was again a very successful event. Entries totalled 40, the strongest sections being the Norwich, Lizards, and Borders, and some really good specimens were staged in these classes, the Lizards especially taking a good deal of sorting out. The show was well attended, the three-quarter bred Mules exhibited by Mr. Murray doubtless proving an attraction to many; one fancier, Mr. Ashman, travelled through from Middlesbrough with the sole object of seeing these birds, and stated that he was quite satisfied they were bred from the Linnet Mule. The judge was also satisfied on this point, and declined to put the birds before two genuine Linnet Mules exhibited by Mr. Waters. On the whole the show was a great success, the number of exhibits being slightly in excess of that of the first show; and it is to be hoped the third and last show (to be held Aug. 6) will be even more successful. Mr. J. T. Clark judged.

Many thanks were given the hard-working secretary, Mr. W. Gilbert, for the able manner in which he carried out his duty. The winner of the cup was Mr. Austin, who gained 22 points with his Norwich Plainhead; the runner-up was Mr. W. Salter, with his team of Yorkshires, he gaining 20 points. FALKIRK AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Half-yearly meeting and nest feather show, held in Oddfellows' Hall, Grahamston, July 9th. The birds were not so numerous as might have been expected, due no doubt to the bad breeding season. Still, it is gratifying to be able to report an increase of 55 birds in the number staged, as compared with 40 last year. Norwich and British birds were specially commendable. The Crest Section, though small, was an improvement on recent years. The foreign bird section still wants improving, while the Mules and Hybrids were also few. The weather was ideal, and there was a splendid turnout of spectators. Mr. J. Jeans (Camelon) placed the awards, and gave entire satisfaction. Mr. Jeans was presented with a handsome umbrella for past services, he having judged the nest feather birds without fee for a good number of years. President R. Dickson made the presentation in a short speech, and Mr. Jeans suitably replied. One of the society's most ardent members, Mr. Proudfoot is leaving for Canada on July 15th. Owing to the bad breeding season only 70 birds were staged in 14 classes, as several of our members have not totalled half a dozen birds this season. Mr. Barkas (High Westwood) judged, and his awards seemed to give every satisfaction.

CLAPHAM AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

The members held their 4th annual first feather show (which also included a few Britishers) in one of the spacious rooms at the Avondale Hall, Clapham (the headquarters), on July 9th, and a good number of fanciers visited the show during the evening. The Canary section contained some very fine specimens, notably the exhibits of Messrs. Mazzoni, Rose, and Askew, while the Yorkshires were an excellent collection, Mr. Masters' Cinnamon-marked being greatly admired, and doubtless will be heard of again. It is a lovely specimen of grand quality, length, and shape, and secured numerous specials. The Britishers were small in numbers, but there were some good birds. Mr. Scott's Linnet should be heard of again after the moult. Mr. Brighty staged a nice Goldie. Mr. Sexton won with a big Twite, nicely marked, and also exhibited a grand coloured Siskin. Mr. W. H. Vale judged the Canaries, and Mr. S. A. Sandy the British.

REDRUTH.

Annual show, held in the recreation ground on July 6th and 7th, in good weather. The entries exceeded last year's, and considering the time of the year (the exhibition was a great success, and the birds in grand bloom. The Norwich came up well in number and quality, the clear buffs being excellent. The Yorks were small, but good. The pair and group class were also excellent. The Mules and Hybrids were good; the winning six-point captured special for best in show, special for best Mule or Hybrid, and that for best pair (with the light Linnet Mule for partner, both this year's Palace winners). Goldfinches were grand, the winner being a gem of the first water. There were not many in the Large British class, but those staged were good; the winning Hawfinch was a grand specimen. The Small British were very good, the winner being a grand Bullie, with lovely cap, and in rare fettle. The Foreigners were good, and the King Parrakeet won special for second best in show. Mr. Poole (Stratford-on-Avon) judged, and his awards met with entire approval. The members' class was judged by Mr. F. Collins (Camborne). Most points in show, F. Collins, with 85 points; second most points, Rowe and Richards, with 53.

First feather and British bird show held July 7th in the St. Peter-le-Bailey Hall. The initial show was a great success, upwards of 70 entries being received. Many of the birds were of exceptional merit, and competition throughout was keen. Mr. Lee's ticked Norwich was of great merit. A silver medal, offered for best bird in amateur classes, was won by Mr. A. F. Fifield, Mr. E. G. Olliffe being reserve. Mr. A. Lewin officiated as judge, and gave entire satisfaction, and the arrangements for the show were admirably carried out by Mr. C. F. Holliday, the hon. sec.

NEWCASTLE C.B.S.

Third annual nest feather show held in the Co-operative Hall on July 9th, when there was a nice array of young birds and British, Mules, and Foreign Birds. The cup for best Canary was captured by Mr. L. B. Tomlinson, with a slashing clear buff, a really grand bird, and one which we hope will do well at the back-end shows. The British, Mule and Foreign cup went to our worthy show manager for an excellent Redstart, which was put down in faultless rondition. The Norwich came up well in numbers, with some nice birds amongst them. Yorkshires were the feature, and some splendid birds were on view. Is this the result of the encouragement meted out to novices these last few years? Borders were down on last year's, but some choice specimens were on view. Cinnamons and Scotch Fancies "drew a blank," and there were only two Mules. Unfortunately, the judge had to disqualify two birds entered in the light Mule class. British were not so large in number as we would like to have seen. Surely, we have more British bird keepers in our midst? The Foreign were a nice collection, and drew forth many admiring comments. Messrs. Currah and T. Robson judged the Canaries, and Messrs. J. Shepherd and G. Taylor the British, etc., taking alternate classes. The show opened early to the public, who patronised it well.

Annual Young Bird Show, held at Mr. Naish's Sale Rooms, The Hayes, on June 29th kindly lent for this purpose for some years past by Mr. Nash; this room has a good light, and is well fitted for the holding of a members' show. I am sure by the hearty vote of thanks that was passed at the close that the members appreciated the kindness. The show was indeed a good one, and some of the Norwich and Yorkshires will be heard of again. In the Norwich Mr. Thomas takes special for most points in the two members' shows, with 86 points, while this same member leads in the Canary Cup Competition with 60, Mr. E. James coming next with 47. In the Yorkshire section Mr. E. James (a novice) took special for best Yorkshire in open classes. Mr. Brown's yellow Yorkshire won special for best bird shown by a novice, beating Mr. James's open special winner. Mr. Chidgey won the novice points special Norwich, Mr. Brown ditto Yorkshire, and Mr. Smith the points special at two shows with 61. Mr. Hopson won the novice Norwich special. In the British and Foreign birds cup competition Mr. Thorne leads with 67. Mr. Dallimore coming next with 65. Mr. F. D. Jones took special for the best British Hardbill, Mr. Dallimore that for Goldfinch, also that for most points Hardbill classes; and Mr. Thorne special for best bird in remaining classes. The judges were Messrs. F. D. Jones (Norwich), E. T. Banks (Yorkshires), and D. V. Lewis (Mules, British and Foreign); and their awards seemed to give satisfaction.

ORMSKIRK C.B.S

Fourth annual nest feather show, held on July 9th, in the clubroom at headquarters (Buck i' th' Vine Hotel). Entries were a bit short of last year's figures, some of the British classes being badly supported. The Canaries were specially commendable, and above the average. Special for best Canary was awarded to a "wee gem," a clear Buff of the right stamp; a similar prize for best British going to a well-staged Nightingale. The novice medal for three nominated birds was secured by Mr. T. Mawdsley, with a trio of capital Norwich. There was a disappointing attendance of visitors, due, no doubt, to the counter-attractions in the neighbourhood. CAGE BIRDS posters were well displayed in the showroom. Mr. N. Wellings made the awards, and gave entire satisfaction.

NOTTINGHAM (Permanent) C.B.S.

First feather show held on July 9th. The entry was rather poor, only 231 birds being staged, but this is accounted for by the exceptionally bad breeding season. However, the quality of the exhibits was all that could be desired. A new feature in the shape of Yorkshire classes was introduced, but only drew three entries. We hope to enroll a few Yorkshire fanciers before the next show, as this variety has been neglected in Nottingham. The awards were placed by Mr. G. Marshall, whose judging was received with satisfaction by everyone.

HIGHGATE, HAMPSTEAD C.B.S.

First Feather Show was held July 9th, at headquarters, the Spencer Hall, Dartmouth Park Hill, N. This most progressive society had a record entry of over 180 birds, which evidences the interest of the members. There were, too, some very nice youngsters on view, and the annual show promises to be something exceptional. The novice section was very strong, both in Nor., Yorks, Borders, and Crests. The Brit. and foreign birds, too, were a fine collection. The hon. secretary, Mr. C. W. Law, who managed everything in most able style, is to be congratulated upon the success attending his efforts, while the stewarding could not have been in better hands, those two past masters, Messrs. J. Oldaker and W. Shakespeare, doing the needful, while another of the "old school," in Mr. J. Robson, seemed to please everybody by the manner in which he, as judge, spotted the winners. Master Giddy also rendered valuable help. There was a real good attendance, and the show room looked very pretty, the plants loaned by Mr. A. Knight being most attractive. WOOD GREEN F. AND F.A.

Annual young stock show of cage birds was held in adult school, Mayes Road, on July 7th. Mr. J. Robson acted as judge. The number of entries was fairly good, some of the exhibits being of a high standard of quality. The attendance of members and friends during the afternoon was considered good taking the wet weather into consideration.

Fourth nest feather show held at Station Hotel, on July 2nd. There were some fine young birds, especially Borders, which will be heard of later. Mr. T. Robson (Newcastle) judged, and gave all-round satisfaction. Mr. J. M. Macdonald (chairman) managed the show in his well-known courteous manner. There were 61 entries. Mr. A. Montgomery won the cup for nominated young birds, with 21 points; Mr. C. Wilson won the British bird special with 14 points.

Second members' show, held at headquarters, Boar's Head, Middlegate, on June 27. There was a fine entry of young birds, but the old birds were not quite up to expectations, owing, it is said, to the fact that members were not willing to separate the pairs. The show was well attended, which was very gratifying to the hard-working officials, at the head of which is the capable hon. sec., Mr. Alex. Young. Special for best bird in show was won by Mr. W. Lidgett.

MIDDLETON C.B.S.

The 11th annual young bird show was held on July 9th, in the session rooms, Old Boar's Head. There was only a moderate entry, as the breeding season has not been a good one with most of our members, some of them having only one or two young ones. There were a few promising young ones present, and with a good moult these will be heard of again. Competition for the members' cup was very keen, Mr. Hampshire and Mr. A. J. Wagstaff making a tie with points, which will have to be decided at our back-end show. About forty birds faced the judge, Mr. Hardy (of Oldham), and his awards gave general satisfaction.

Should Birds be Kept in Cages?

The R.S.P.C.A. and the Recent British Bird Law Case.

"It will be a good day for England when the caging of . . . birds . . . is made entirely illegal."

The manner in which the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals places before its patrons and subscribers in the pages of its official monthly organ, "The Animal World," the result of the recent law case (known to our own readers as the Preston and Flowers Defence Case) is not without its humorous side. The editor of the aforesaid organ does CAGE BIRDS the honour of lifting from its pages word for word our report of the remarks of the Lord Chief Justice when delivering his judgment, and the comments of Justices Channell and Coleridge—a report for which we specially arranged at, of course, some considerable monetary outlay. This is complimentary to the fairness of our report. So far so good. But the idea of equity possessed by the perpetrator of this barefaced piece of journalistic freebootery does not extend to even the courtesy of acknowledging the source from which his column of matter has been—well, we will say annexed. We presume he (or can it be she?) considers the end justifies the means; had the Society paid for its own report there would have been a little less of the subscribers' money available for the further harassing of the wretched bird keepers, or—shall we say?—the upkeep of the palatial suite of offices from which the Society directs its operations, and the payment of official salaries.

Coming to our own editorial comments upon the case and its bearings, this is what the "Animal World" has to say anent the same:

The result of this appeal is most important, and since it will have a most wide-reaching effect on the trade of the bird fanciers it is not surprising to read in CAGE BIRDS an article deploring the action of the society, and trying to reduce the whole affair to an absurdity. The appeal was, so we are informed, financed by the subscribers to that paper "in the interests of the British Bird Fancy," and "readers will learn with astonishment and regret that the decision has gone against the Fancy." To quote again from CAGE BIRDS: "The effect of this decision from the public point of view is pretty startling. It means, if it means anything, that when Larks are caught in Cambridgeshire they may be slaughtered there with impunity, and may be sent up to London in thousands dead for eating purposes; but if a single Lark is sent up to London alive with the object of cheering up some dweller in a dismal alley, or bringing the soul of the country into the slums, the vendor of that Lark, or the man who has it in his possession, unless he can prove that the Lark was not 'recently taken' (whatever that may mean), can be prosecuted with the utmost rigour, and no doubt will be. . . . This is a matter that affects, and affects gravely, every bird-keeper in the United Kingdom. It is nothing else but the thin end of the wedge for the total abolition of keeping birds in cages."

We sincerely hope that the fear expressed by the writer of the above may speedily be realised, for it will be a good day for England when the catching and caging of the beautiful wild birds of our countryside is made entirely illegal. It is not so much the cheering of the poor in the slums (a truly melodramatic touch) as the financial gain to be got from the poor little captives which appeals to the majority of "the Fancy," and therefore the fact that some wretched little bird sings out its life in hideous surroundings would, of course, not appeal to many of them. The writer refers to the keeping of wild birds in cages as "a humane and dignified hobby," but we fail to realise how the keeping a little bird captive in a cage, deprived of its natural surroundings and opportunities of flight, can be called dignified. But then, of course, in the barbarous days of old it added greatly to the dignity of a conquering hero if he could keep some unfortunate prisoner confined in a small cage suspended from the outer wall of his castle so that his enemies and neighbours might realise how strong and powerful he was. We presume, too, that such a hero considered himself "humane" because he saw to it that his captive was fed and watered! But times have changed since those bygone ages, and the ideas of dignity and humaneness have, thank God, altered also!

We quite agree with the writer of the article quoted, and also with the Lord Chief Justice, in saying that this case has shown up an "anomaly" in the law, and we sincerely hope that the time will arrive when it will be illegal to take the beautiful song birds whether for food or for the mere pleasure of keeping them, like slaves of old, to sing to us.

We also cordially agree with the writer when he says, "It is a curious fact, and not a little saddening, that under this interpretation of the law Larks and Linnets, Goldfinches, and Chaffinches, and the various other beautiful feathered creatures which delight those of us who indulge in the legitimate hobby of keeping British birds, can be slaughtered with impunity and brought into protected areas dead—when the life-breath has been beaten out of their little bodies."

But we would like to add that no real bird lover, fully appreciating the bird in its own beautiful surroundings and hearing it there to its best advantage, would feast upon Lark pie or any other such horrible delicacy. To our minds it is a crime to deprive the world of so great a beauty as the song of the Lark merely to tickle a jaded appetite, but it is equally repugnant to us to think of its being, for the rest of its life, compelled to exist behind prison bars, perhaps in a hot and sunless slum, and we think "the Fancy" weaken their case in seeking to justify the practice of keeping wild birds in captivity by invoighing against a practice which is only one degree worse, and both of which spring up from a purely human vice—selfishness!

In one respect this reveals a fresh attitude of the Society, assuming the editor's remarks to be indicative of its policy. When the case was before Mr. Biron, at the Old Street Police Court, and he had decided in the favour of the R.S.P.C.A., the "Animal World" said (vide the February issue): "This decision is extremely important, as it helps the Society to attack the cruelty which is so frequently attendant upon the confinement of large numbers of wild birds in dealers' shops." With this latter object of the R.S.P.C.A. we have no quarrel; we are, in fact, entirely with them in the matter, and so, too, are bird-keepers generally, as is abundantly evidenced by the report of the meeting organised by the National British Bird and Mule Club and the many letters on the subject which we have published. There has, in fact, never been any question as to this, for it is no part or policy of bird-keepers to in anywise countenance cruelty in the pursuit of their hobby, either by dealers, catchers, or anyone else. In any plan of campaign directed against cruelty the R.S.P.C.A. has our unqualified support; we shall always be willing to assist them when possible, and we know that they can count also upon our readers to assist them. We note with pleasure the action they have recently taken against a certain dealer (reported elsewhere in this issue), for such conduct as was proved against this man forfeits any claim to our sympathy, and punishment is the only fitting end to such gross neglect which helps to place the whole bird-keeping fraternity under a stigma. Let us stamp out cruelty, by all means.

But in the latest pronouncement of the "Animal World" there appears the expression of a desire to stamp out entirely the catching and keeping of birds, and on this count we join issue with the Society, and shall do our utmost to combat any such needlessly offensive and oppressive policy, which can only be based upon an entire misconception of the bird-keeping hobby. Whatever we ourselves may say as to bird-keeping not being incompatible with the possession of "humane feelings," may be put down as "biassed." Fortunately, there is plenty of outside and unimpeachable evidence available. We commend to the notice of the editor of the "Animal World" the following remarks of Father Bernard Butler, of Spinkshill, taken from a report of his lecture which appeared in the "Shefficld Daily Telegraph."

Father Bernard Butler, of Spinkbill, last evening delighted members of the Nether Edgo Photographic Society with another of his charming lectures on birds. Incidentally, he defended the keeping of birds in cages. He said that he had read pamphlets on the subject published by the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds. He had one such pamphlet with him bitterly attacking the keeping of Linnets.

But, said Father Butler, the keeping of cage birds is a poor man's hobby. A poor man has not got a big garden in the country or large plantations in which to rear birds to shoot. Yet he has a great fondness for nature, and the little bird in his cage is a great pleasure and delight to him. He is kind to his bird, and makes a great pet of it.

They had to remember that nature provided an enormous number of small birds, and they had many enemies. Mice, snakes, rats, Hawks, cats, all preyed on them; nature provided them as food for these other birds and animals, as it provided meat for the writers of theso pamphlets to eat. It was well to be kind to animals, but they had to seek the golden mean, and not carry it to excess. He did not like either societies or individuals trying to crush the poor man's hobby, but saying nothing about the cruelties of the rich. There was any amount of cruelty about game shooting.

He had been pleased to find birds in many homes. The keeping of birds humanised children and men. The birds were generally well off. They were provided with food, shelter and security from their natural enemies. The cage bird lived much longer than the bird in the garden.

There were cruelties, of course, but instead of prosecuting poor men for keeping birds, they should get them to be kinder to them. To condemn bird-keeping indiscriminately was cruel. They could condemn the keeping of unsuitable birds that never grew tame; but to the keeping of Canaries, and ordinary British birds, kindly treated, no possible exception could be taken. Father Butler declared that the Linnets took a pride in the singing competitions in which their owners entered them.

Father Butler speaks with a long experience of birds; and showed on the screen many photographs proving how tame the wild birds of the garden will become. Birds are naturall tame, he said, but they have learnt by painful experience not to trust man. What they had to do was to try to regain the confidence of wild birds. Birds were not afraid of animals, and even the most timid birds had learnt that the ploughman was all right when at work in the fields. Father Butler spoke of the ease with which birds were photographed once they were tame enough to feed out of his fingers or mouth. He showed photographs he has taken of birds on their nests, as well as feeding from his hands.

Will it be said that the Reverend Father Bernard Butler is unable to distinguish the humane from the cruel, and that he is incapable of deciding what constitutes a "dignified" hobby? The facts as we see them are that he has an inside acquaintance with bird-keeping (which none of our critics can surely possess) and knows that it can be humane and uplifting. He is not led away by isolated instances of cruelty by catchers or dealers or certain bird-keepers (which we all deplore) to condemn a legitimate hobby of working men—and not of working men alone, for it is common knowledge that bird-keepers are to be found in every walk of life, from the highest families in the land to the dwellers in its humblest cottages.

Before we deal further with the "Animal World' article, we would direct attention to the following letters which appeared in that well-known weekly journal "Truth," of date July 13th.

SIR,—Your correspondent "E. G. E." must live in a very favoured locality in respect of the ravages of Thrushes and Blackbirds among fruit, or he would not write that those who say these birds destroy sound fruit are "unobservant people." I can remember that fifty years ago one had not even to protect strawberries against birds, and I expect that insects were as plentiful then as now. At present Blackbirds and Thrushes attack strawberries, cherries, and raspberries, while the Blackbird also makes havoc among gooseberries, figs, pears, and even apples, wisely selecting the finest of these fruits. That it is these birds anyone who has a garden may easily observe. It is these and not Sparrows that make their way into the netted strawberry-beds; for in some gardens if a portion of the strawberries is left unprotected by netting, the owner will find every berry, ripe or unripe, destroyed, and it would be absurd to say that these were more insect infected than those under the netting, which are found sound. ECCE.

SIR,—I have the management of a fruit farm, where some twenty to twenty-five acres of strawberries and raspberries are grown. If your correspondent "E. G. E." will pay me a visit, he shall see for himself the destructive work of the Blackbird and the Thrush. A large number are captured during the fruit season—in some seasons from fifty to 100 in a single day. While admitting that some good is done to the fruit-grower by birds destroying many insect pests, yet it is unquestionable that he also suffers severely from their attacks on ripe fruit, and when they become so numerous as in this district the damage done is very considerable, the worst offenders being the Blackbird, Starling, Wood Pigeon, and the Thrush.

H. COTTERELL.

The Orchards, Elsenham, Essex.

We will not dwell upon the fact that these thick-and-thin advocates of complete bird protection are as oblivious to the interests of fruit and grain growers as they are to the very minor (comparatively) interests of bird-keepers. We will content ourselves for the moment with pointing out that the writer of the letter signed "Ecce" bears witness that (1) certain birds are much more numerous today than they were 50 years ago; (2) that they are now in such numbers as to very seriously jeopardise the prosperity of fruit-growers; (3) that the oft-repeated story about unsound fruit and buds alone being eaten is entirely false. Mr. Cotterell's letter supports these contentions; and note his statement that from 50 to 100 of these birds (Blackbirds, Thrushes, etc.) are slaughtered (capture, we take it, in this case is synonymous with slaughter) in a single day on but one fruit farm. Can the "ravages" of any bird-catcher compare with this? And is it more humane to kill these charming song birds wholesale in cold blood than it is to keep them in a cage to delight a human and humane owner, who will feed and tend them to the best of his ability and under whose care they will live and thrive and sing for many more years than even Dame Nature would allot them? To any but a "crank" the right answer should be obvious.

DUNFERMLINE AND DIS. C.B.S.

Meeting held in the Co-operative Hall, on July 9th, Mr. John Rankine presiding. Final arrangements of First Feather Show, to be held on July 30th, were gone fully into. The date of our second annual show was fixed for November 5th. This date keeps us clear of all other Fife shows. A list of judges was given out, and the secretary is now in communication with the best man in each list. The classification has also been extended this year, which we hope will meet with approval. The committee is now revising the society and show rules.—R. T. CAMPBELL, Sec.

EDMONTON F.A.

On July 13th there was a record attendance in connection with lectures; something like 50 gentlemen had a most enjoyable evening, and listened to a most instructive and interesting lecture by Mr. G. Gardner ("G.G."). Cage birds was the main theme, but the lecture was acceptable to all interested in the breeding and rearing of live stock. Mr. Chairman Sorrell proposed a hearty vote of thanks to the lecturer, which the meeting most cordially endorsed. Cage bird fanciers would do well to join this progressive association.—J. S. JACKSON, Hon. Sec.

WALLSEND & MID-TYNE C.B.A.

Usual monthly meeting, held at Station Hotel, July 13th, Mr. Richardson in the chair. Only a moderate number of members turned up. The secretary gave the meeting a financial report of the Nest Feather Show, which was considered very fair. The Chairman presented the winner of the Nest Feather Cup, Mr. Montgomery, with a gold medal. The winner suitably replied. It was decided that the club get the medal suitably inscribed. A vote of thanks to Mr. T. Robson was unanimously accorded for his services in judging our Nest Feather Show. The next meeting is on the breeding results of members. All members are urged to try and be at our next meeting.—JOHN R. EVANS, Sec.

DONCASTER & DISTRICT C.B.S.

Usual monthly meeting, held July 13th, at the Victoria Rooms, Mr. Crundell in the chair. A good number of members put in an appearance. The secretary presented the balance-sheet, which shows the society to be in a flourishing position, there being a balance in hand on the first year's working of £2 8s. 1d., which was voted by all a creditable commencement, and which is a proof of the interest that is growing in the district, and the system the members are working to. There was also a table show of First Feather Canaries, which brought out some smart Yorkshires. Mr. Rayner was 1st and 3rd, Mr. Tomkinson 2nd. In Norwich there were some excellent youngsters, Mr. Crundell winning 1st, 2nd, and 3rd. Further business was the arranging of open show, to be held on Boxing Day, December 26th, 1910, when the society hope to equal the fine show made in the Drill Hall on Boxing Day, 1908. Other new members were enrolled, and with further enlistments and support from the public this society will come well to the front.—G. BESCOBY, Sec.

ILFORD F. & F.S.

A very good meeting was held at Headquarters July 19th, when Mr. C. A. House was unanimously elected to judge all sections of our Young Stock Show, to be held on October 15th, at Loxford Hall, Ilford Lane (a good and well lighted hall for such a purpose, which we are lucky to get). The schedule for this event was then drawn up, and as over ninety classes are provided, it is hoped we shall have a record show. Special prizes, amounting to over £2 2s., were promised, and several present expressed their willingness to collect more. Mr. A. Morris was elected to represent cage birds on the Committee, and during the evening the following new members were nominated and duly elected:—Messrs. G. Adams, E. Morris, and C. Hickmott. Owing to holidays another general meeting will not be held until September 13th, but Committee meetings will be called from time to time. If the enthusiasm shown by members at this meeting is only continued, the society bids fair to make itself felt in the very near future. The date for the annual show is fixed for December 10th.—W. H. DREW, Secretary.

GATESHEAD C.B.S.

Meeting held July 13th, Mr. T. Almond (president) in the chair. Mr. Tomlinson (Newcastle) was proposed, and accepted, as a member. Correspondence was read from specialist clubs granting us their patronage for our annual show. Committee's report was read re schedule for our open show. This was accepted by the members, after one or two alterations. We were also favoured with a lecture by Mr. E. Floyd (Ashington) on "Canaries and other Cage Birds." There was a good rally, the meeting room being taxed to its utmost capacity. The lecture was very instructive, and seemed to be enjoyed by all. Mr. Floyd pointed out that the temperature of birds was very much higher than that of human beings, and, consequently, they were nervous and highly-strung little creatures. The Canary was made up of three parts, so to speak—firstly, the stomach, a furnace generating heat, enabling the body to successfully combat various outward elements; secondly, the nervous system, a power station generating force; thirdly, the heart, lungs, liver, kidneys, etc., all doing their respective shares. Being chemically constituted, birds must be chemically attended to. A "hammer and tongs style" would not do a Canary any good. All the ingenuity of man at times was defied. Caged birds, depending upon their owner for what they shall have to eat, should receive proper treatment, and be judiciously fed. The lecturer enumerated the different seeds, and their qualities, and spoke also upon the feeding and rearing of young birds. His preference as regards green food was for lettuce, having tried dandelion this season and found that it brought his feeding hens too soon into condition again, so that they wanted to go to nest before the young were old enough to do for themselves. He did not believe in double buffing. He examined all his birds by handling them to judge their size. He also saw to it that he got birds of good colour. We were also favoured with a sketch from Mr. Floyd of what he considered to be a typical Norwich Canary, giving the scale, measurement, etc. He did not favour the very large type of Norwich of to-day, but the chubby, short bird of a few years ago. Several questions were put to the lecturer, and they were answered in a satisfactory manner, testifying to the knowledge and experience that Mr. Floyd had acquired of birds. A hearty vote of thanks was given Mr. Floyd for his lecture, and we hope to have another visit from him in the near future.—A. HOLDEN, Assist. Sec.

WOOD GREEN F. AND F.A.

At our usual monthly meeting, held on July 12th, Mr. Callegari gave a lecture on "The Daylight Bill and its Relation to Fanciers," and, after full discussion, the following resolution was passed: "That the members of this Association are in favour of a Daylight Bill, and consider it would greatly benefit all fanciers of live stock." The members hope that fanciers will consider this subject, and that societies will take the matter up and get it discussed from a fanciers' point of view. —WM. G. BRUCE, Sec.

SELSTON AND DISTRICT F.S.

Meeting held in the schoolroom, July 16th. It was decided to hold table shows commencing September 4th, 1910, for cage birds (1910 bred), and to hold the annual members' show the last Saturday in November. But, having looked up the dates of other Societies in the district, the latter will be held on November 19th, so that we do not clash. It was also decided to hold our next meeting on July 29th, at 7, in the schoolroom, when I hope to see all members there. All annual subscriptions to be sent in on or before September 30th.—F. MALTBY, Hon. Sec.

GLASGOW AND DISTRICT C.B.A.

Committee meeting held on July 12th, in Duncon's Rooms, 71, London-street, Glasgow, the president, Mr. R. B. Jarvie, in the chair. Correspondence from judges was read. Paterson (Ayr); for Mules, British and Foreign birds, Messrs. J. F. Dewar (Edinburgh) and C. Houlton (St. Helens, Lancs). The secretary was instructed to engage the Drill Hall, Stirling Road, for show. The classification fixed was as follows: Plainheads, 16 classes; Crests, 5 classes; Borders, 9 classes; Yorkshires, 5 classes; Mules and Hybrids, 7 classes; British, 17 classes (including house and field-moulted British Goldfinch, house and field-moulted Linnet, and fed and non-fed Greenfinch), and Foreign 3 classes. Entry fee, 2/- per bird. Prizes, 12/-, 8/-, 5/-, 3/-, and 2/-, with leather prize cards at cost price, 6d. There is also a selling stock class for Canaries, and one for Mule or Hybrid; entry fee, 6d. per bird, no prize money. Mr. D. Graham kindly offered a sheep (to be taken in joints, at the winner's convenience) to the exhibitor making most entries over the whole show. The meeting closed with a hearty vote of thanks to the chairman.—F. BOWMAN, Sec.

NORWICH PLAINHEAD CANARY CLUB.

Davies (Stockport) has again presented the club with a valuable special, its form this year being a beautiful marble timepiece, which is to be won outright on the same lines as the tea urn of last year. Notes from Erin.

THE first young bird show ever held in this country was that under the auspices of the Yorkshire C.B.C., of Ireland, in the Central Hall, Dublin. Last year (their first season) they purchased no less than six challenge cups for competition amongst its members. Their show proved a huge success financially, closing with a sum of about £12 to their credit. The committee desiring that the members should not become cold or indifferent in their hobby decided to hold a young bird show, and to entertain their members at a lecture and washing competition (the latter will be held early in October). The membership has gone up in leaps and bounds. And it it hoped that this season's annual show will be one of the best shows ever held in our Island.

THE young birds (close on one hundred) embraced some splendid exhibits. Yorkshires, of course, formed the majority, and in this section the judge, Mr. W. Sheridan, experienced considerable difficulty in placing the cards, but his awards gave entire satisfaction. A splendid challenge cup (value £5) was presented to the club by the well-known seedsmen, Messrs. Rowan and Co., Dublin, and needless to say the competition for their beautiful cup was keen. It went to Dr. J. P. Lavery, of Dundalk, for a yellow cock of grand length and quality. This bird's win was very popular. The runner-up was Mr. J. P. Rooney (Dublin), with a clear yellow hen, which won special for the best young hen in show. Mr. D. Carroll, the popular and courteous hon. secretary, took 3rd place with a clear buff cock. With a good moult all three birds will be heard of again.

THE committee are to be congratulated on the way they have worked in the club's interests, and it is pleasant to see that their untiring efforts have been rewarded by success and prosperity. The Hall is an ideal one for a bird show, the staging (which, by the way, the club purchased this season) we heard described by a very experienced fancier as "the neatest and best he had ever seen." Whoever designed this staging is to be congratulated. The committee worked hard and with a will. Messrs. Lavery, Rooney, Carroll, Birse, Stewart, Keating, McDonnell, Carolan, Holley, and Cloke were amongst the principal first prize winners.

"CLOSED RING."

"CAGE BIRDS" PRIZES FOR YORKSHIRE UNION MEMBERS.

Mr. Hammond Sends us the Proposed Rules of the Competitions for the 1910-11 Season.

The Yorkshire Union to offer ten shillings in cash for amateurs and ten shillings in cash for professionals at each Union open winter show. The cash to be divided into two prizes for each section, as follows:—Six shillings for first and four shillings for second, and to be awarded for most points and second most points respectively throughout the show in all open classes. No competitor to receive more than the combined amount of first and second prizes from these cash specials during the season. The Union shall also offer three prizes (anything the winner may select, except cash) to each section as follows:—Amateur Section, 25s. for 1st, 17s. 6d. for 2nd, and 15s. for 3rd. Professional Section, 20s. for 1st, 12s. 6d. for 2nd, and 7s. 6d. for 3rd, to be awarded to those members having gained first, second, and third most points respectively, in each section, in this competition during the season. No competitor to receive more than one of these prizes, and in the event of any person qualifying for one of the season's specials from this fund offered by any of the specialist clubs, his or her portion shall be restricted to the prize of highest value, and if of equal value, to the prize for the section in which such person has obtained the most points. Any surplus funds to be dealt with as the committee may decide, subject to the consent of donor.

The Yorkshire Canary Club, the Cinnamon-marked Yorkshire Canary Club, the National Green-marked Yorkshire Canary Club, the Open Norwich Plainhead Club, and the Yorkshire County British Bird and Mule Club each to offer three prizes (not cash) in each section, to be competed for at all shows and in all open classes where the patronage of the respective clubs is given. The value of the prizes for each club to be as follows:—Amateur Section, 1st prize 20s., 2nd prize 17s. 6d., 3rd prize 15s.; Professional Section, 1st prize 20s., 2nd prize 12s. 6d., 3rd prize 7s. 6d., and to be awarded for first, second, and third most points respectively, in each section, during the season at said patronage shows. Points to be counted according to the rules of the respective clubs. The prizes to be designated as offered by CAGE BIRDS' in the handbook of the Yorkshire Union and by each Specialist Club offering the said prizes for competition, and all exhibitions to be marked "C.B." for professionals, and "C.B.A." for amateurs, on the entry forms.

Points will be counted from the catalogues of the various shows, and any errors or omissions therein must be communicated to the secretary of this fund within a fortnight after the close of the show.

Any matter of dispute in connection with this competition to be referred for settlement to the CAGE BIRDS Prizes Committee, whose decision shall be final.

Any objection to be accompanied by a deposit of five shillings, which will be returned if the objection be upheld, but if considered frivolous, the deposit will be forfeited and applied as the Committee may decide.—FRED. HAMMOND.

In the Courts.

A Dealer Heavily Fined for Neglect of Birds, etc.

John Mack, a dealer in live stock, of Dames Road, Forest Gate, was summoned at West Ham, on July 14, for causing unnecessary suffering to four Parrots, one Cockatoo, and a number of other birds, etc.; also with causing to be ill-treated a dog, six pigeons, four rabbits, and four ducks; also with the unlawful possession of 12 Larks.—Mr. F. G. Polhill prosecuted for the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals; Mr. A. M. Walker defended.

In consequence of a communication, Inspector Knight, of the R.S.P.C.A., at ten o'clock on the morning of June 28, went to the defendant's shop and found it locked up. The inspector knocked several times but got no answer. In the window he saw a Blackbird dead, and no signs of food or water in the cage. He left, and returned to the shop in the afternoon at quarter-past two, but defendant was not there. The inspector made inquiries, and found the defendant in a coffee-shop, and they returned to the shop together. Inside the shop were small birds and animals numbering about 200, and a number of them showed signs of great neglect. The cages were very dirty, and looked as if they had not been cleaned out for days, and some of the animals were in a dying state. Defendant said, "I am sorry to say that I neglected them. I don't live here and have been coming to the shop late this last couple of weeks. I admit that I have neglected the cages for the last week or two. I will clean them at once, and you will have no cause to complain again."

Mr. Walker, on behalf of the defendant, said he took over the business about three years ago without any previous knowledge of birds; he had now decided to give it up. On the face of the evidence he had to admit that there was a certain amount of neglect.

The summons against the defendant in respect to the twelve Larks was withdrawn, and on the other two summonses Mr. Gillespie imposed a fine of £4 and 12s. costs.

Mr. Dukes has resigned the secretaryship of the Warrington and Dis. C.B.S., writes Mr. G. M. Nelson, and I have been elected in his place. Communications for the society should, therefore, in future be addressed to me at 466, Knutsford Road, Warrington.

Just read this from one who tried another colour food last year and lost scores of prizes through being short of colour:—"July 4, 1910,—Mr. T. Sandiford, Dear Sir,—Please forward half hundredweight of your Royal Red feed. This season I shall use your feed exclusively.—(Advt.)

The following gentlemen have kindly consented, writes Mr. H. I have got the first three parts of "Our Canaries," and am looking forward for the remaining numbers, which I feel sure will make up into a splendid volume and will always be very useful for reference to by readers of CAGE BIRDS, writes Mr. Richardson, chairman of the York C.B.S. They are beautifully got up, and very cheap at the price you are charging.

I would be glad if the secretaries of societies to whom sheets have been sent in connection with our "Watch Competition," writes Mr. W. Reid, hon. secretary of the Sunderland C.B.A., would kindly return same to me as soon as possible, as the date of closing is now due. The names of all societies who have supported us will, we hope, be duly inserted in CAGE BIRDS at the close of the competition.

The Northern British Bird Mule, and Foreign Bird Club have three silver cups and possibly 24 medals this coming show season to be competed for by members of the club. So anyone desirous of becoming a member should please communicate with me; subscription 2s. 6d.; radius, Northumberland, Durham, Westmoreland, and Cumberland.—J. BERTRAM, 95, Gainsboro' Grove, Newcastle.

The "Country-side Monthly" for July—the second number of a new publication—contains a beautiful coloured plate of "Common Hedge Snails," which is accompanied by some notes on the same. Among the numerous excellent articles are "The Geology of Holiday Resorts," "A Holiday on the Norfolk Broads," "The Sky and the Weather," etc, besides many interesting notes on birds. Our readers should make sure to obtain a copy.

May I ask secretaries of open shows, writes Mr. J. S. Clarke, hon. secretary, Crested Canary Club, Sunnyside, Prospect Road, Woodford Green, Essex, (other than those who have already applied for C.C.C. support), to make application for the Roberts twenty-five guinea challenge cup, to be offered for competition at their shows? In accordance with the donor's conditions this cup must be offered at twenty shows, and as the C.C.C. are only granting their support to nine shows. I want eleven other societies to include it in their schedule of prizes. It entails no risk or liability whatever on such societies; there are no restrictions as to who shall judge; and it must bring entries in the Crest and Crestbred sections. Prompt application is requested.

Yorkshire men, don't you use any colour-feed but Sandiford's. Supplied this week: Mr. W. H. Shackleton, 56lbs.; Mr. W. Thomas, Amblerthorne, 160lbs.; Edmondson and Son, 56lbs.; Mallinson and Son, 30lbs.; Norwich and Cinnamon champions, J. E. Davies, N.P.C. cup winner, and winner over 60 firsts, 60lbs.; E. Big Scotch winners: Mr. Smeaton, 60lbs.; Mr. Watson, 14lbs.; A. G. Cameron, Scaife, Howie, Jarvis, etc.; all above had large quantities. These are just a few I can remember. I could fill this paper with large breeders' and exhibitors' names I have supplied this year, all sending grand testimonials. See advert. columns for prices. Can be had in tins, ½d. lb. extra.—(Advt.)

What a pleasant surprise I had when on receiving my favourite paper, CAGE BIRDS, I saw my young seven-weeks' old yellow Yorkshire portrayed on the front page! If I am any judge, he is going to make a first-rate show bird, and will be heard of in the near future. I may say that I have had a very good breeding season, considering the indifferent weather we have had. I started with ten hens, lost two, and finally finished off with nearly sixty youngsters. I have made a practice this season of giving my sitting hens a little egg food and watercress twice a week, and have found that my birds were kept in better condition than if fed on plain Canary seed alone. It seems rather a sudden drop to me, after giving them plenty of egg-food, etc., before going to nest and when sitting, to give them nothing but plain Canary seed, which is always recommended. Experience teaches everything; so I should like any fancier who has never tried this to give it a trial next season. Watercress is my favourite green food. I give it three times a day, and I have never found any ill effects to result from young watercress yet. I always give it a good rinsing in salt water. I am a great believer in salt, and use it in the birds' baths. Just a pinch of it seems to make them quite fresh. I also put a little in the egg-food. I may say, in conclusion, that I have never missed CAGE BIRDS since I became a Yorkshire breeder, for the valuable information it always contains helps one and all on the right road to success.—J. BURTON (London, W.)

We are holding another Nest Feather show on our next meeting night, August 6, at 6.30 p.m., venue, the Lesser Town Hall, writes Mr. A. Cant, hon. secretary of the Hamilton (Cadzou Oaks) O.S.

The July number of "Bird Notes"—the journal of the Foreign Bird Club—is again an interesting one. It includes articles from the pens of Mr. A. Sutcliffe ("A Holiday in the West Indies"), Lady E. Douglas Pennant ("The Aviaries and Birds at Soham House, Newmarket"), Miss M. Drummond ("My Aviaries and their Inmates"), Mrs. E. Warren Vernon ("The Rearing of Blue Tits—for Beginners"), and others. There are besides, many notes, letters, etc., and a large number of half-tone illustrations.

The attention of exhibitors is drawn to the fact that the Cambridge local hospital is to benefit from the proceeds of the Cambridge Mammoth show, to be held (under Cage Bird Union rules) on August Bank Holiday. Twenty-two classes are provided, and there are three challenge cups and a score of good specials to be competed for. The date for entries closing has been extended to July 26, and the secretary (Mr. W. Driver, 17, Sussex Street), is hoping that exhibitors will rally round with their support and help make the exhibition a record success.

All fanciers should follow the lead of the wise men of the Fancy and use Ramsden's pure peppers only, as supplied lately to Messrs. Mundell (170lbs.), Bailey (116lbs.), Dibb (200lbs.), Helliwell (111lbs.), Fawcett (132lbs.), Dewar (84lbs.), Colton (114lbs.), Williamson (70lbs), Henderson (132lbs.), Kilpatrick (132lbs.), Weston, Trengove, Midgley, Duncan, Lowne, Yates, Gilbert, Thomas, Haigh, Rukin, Nason, etc., etc. Sold with a full guarantee, full weight without package, and packed in canisters only, without extra charge. Ramsden's peppers stand unrivalled for purity and depth of colour. For the wonderful records held by Ramsden's pure peppers, refer to the catalogues of the last five Crystal Palace Cage Bird Shows—an unbroken record. Shun imitations and substitutes. Insist on having Ramsden's, the finest the world produces.—(ADVT.)

Competitors, Note!

Competitors in our Free Holiday Competition should note that all coupons must reach us by Wednesday next, July 27, at latest. Be in time, the last coupon appears in this issue, on page 35.

A Feast of Mutton.

A novel special prize is to be offered at the Glasgow and Dis. C.B.A. open show next January, this taking the form of a sheep, which will be sent in joints to suit the winner's convenience. This sheep (given by Mr. D. Graham) is for the exhibitor making the most entries.

Scottish Plainhead Club.

Will societies desiring the Scottish Plainhead Club's patronage make application at once, giving full particulars as to dates, classification, and judges? Members are reminded that subscriptions are now due, and should be paid early. I shall be pleased to hear from anyone wishing to join the club.—J. BROWN, secretary, 599, Duke Street, Glasgow.

Circumventing the Cat.

In the days gone by, writes Mr. G. R. Sims in the "Referee," I cured a feline favourite of his favourite forays on the feathered tribe by a simple device. I happened to have a toy bird—a stuffed thing, that when wound up hopped about. I let "Snow" get at it once or twice, and then he discovered the trick. Ever after that he never troubled about the little birds that hopped his way. He wasn't going to be "sold again."

A Clear Yellow Greenfinch Mule.

I have bred a clear yellow Greenfinch Mule, writes Mr. J. Lawson (Ferryhill). It was a fortnight old last Wednesday (July 13), and has left the nest and is going on very well. I do not see a dark feather on it. If it lives it will be at the show at the George Hotel, on Wednesday night, July 27, at 8 p.m., and any fanciers wishing to see this bird can then do so. I have had a few Mule breeders to see it, and they say there is no mistake about it. I wish CAGE BIRDS every success, as I have got a lot of good information from it.

Manningham at Cricket.

The above society played a cricket match with Bolton Woods C.B.A., Saturday, July 16. Manningham proved the winning team; score, 103 declared, Bolton Woods 65; and we all enjoyed ourselves in fine style. Then we did justice to the inner-man with a first-class knife-and-fork tea at our headquarters, and here Bolton Woods proved the better team. After tea we had a social. The following artists contributed in first-class style:—Messrs. J. Cooper, T. Borcock, H. J. Christenden, E. Sheppard, J. Hutton, R. Penny, J. Ackroyd, F. Western, W. Brooke, J. Lunn.—H. GRANGE, sec.

The Law and the Birds.

In the House of Commons on July 11 Sir J. D. Rees (Montgomery Boroughs) asked the Under-Secretary for the Colonies whether he would explain why the Colonial Office Conference on the question of bird protection, while including members of the Selborne Society and the Royal Society for the Protection of Wild Birds, included no representative of the London Chamber of Commerce, the members of which had had long experience in connection with the practical aspect of this question as it affected British trade.—Colonel Seely: The Conference being held on the question of bird protection is a purely informal Conference between members of Government Departments, and I am not aware that there is any representative of any society upon it. It is obvious that, before any definite action can be taken in the matter, those interested in the trade will have an opportunity of stating their case.—"The Times."

The Commoner Diseases of Birds: Their Symptoms and Treatment.

By G. YATES, M.R.C.V.S.

Asthma usually an Incurable Disease.

Asthma may be described as a chronic and usually incurable difficulty of breathing, unattended by fever, occurring at intermittent periods only, in the intervals between which the bird seems quite well. The subject more affected is the gross, fat, and too well-cared-for pet, occurring, as it does, in isolated cases. True asthma is a nervous affection; there is a spasmodic difficulty of breathing, thought to be brought about by spasm of the muscles of the windpipe narrowing it in certain parts, so causing a constriction, and interfering in this way with breathing. Although an incurable disease, relief may be given in the periods of attack; but no lasting benefit may be derived from any form of treatment.

The symptoms are easily recognised. The bird huddles itself up on its perch, the beak is kept slightly opened, the breathing is seen to be more distressed when expiring air than when inspiring, and the act of expiring lasts much longer than that of inspiring, and the breathing is carried out with much labour. These attacks are of a recurring nature, and depend very much upon the surrounding conditions and the temperature of the air. Draughts, cold and moist air are the commonest cause of these attacks. Removal from draughty situations, supply of warmth, and the administration of a few drops of Friar's Balsam in the drinking water, fresh, two or three times daily, will give relief. As a preventive, susceptible birds should be given an occasional laxative, such as sulphate of soda; 5 grains in the drinking water will assist in warding off an attack.

The Deadly Broncho-Pneumonia.

Broncho-pneumonia is an incurable condition, and one from which death soon results, so I shall here treat of it in a summary manner. It is usually due to extension of inflammation from other parts of the breathing organs, and occurs in the nature of a complication (due to neglect of colds, etc.). It is our business to provide against such a complication by giving careful attention to those cases in which there is danger of such arising. It is a fatal disease in birds, and very rapid in its onset.

Having here briefly dealt with the ordinary diseases affecting the lung tissues, I will now, without restricting myself to any regime describe a few of those diseases which affect the digestive organs of birds.

Diseases of the Digestive System

—Ptomaine Poisoning.

There is no more important subject to owners of birds than that arising from poisoning by ptomaines (better known as toxins), or poisons generated in the food which on entering the system set up poisoning by absorption. It is the preventive part to which I would direct attention; such disease should not occur where thorough cleanliness is observed, and adequate attention is given to stock. The present month, and the next few months also, when the weather may be expected to be warm, form a period when this disease arises, forcing our attention upon it by the number of deaths for which it is accountable.

Egg food is the most prolific source of contamination. This should be quite fresh, and freshly prepared at each meal, and on no account be allowed to stand overnight for use the next morning. The poisons form after the food has been cooked. And very rapidly does this occur, even a few hours only sufficing to form poisonous substances. Thorough cleaning of food pans is also essential, for any little remaining food may be quite sufficient to cause loss, even though that added be quite fresh. I have encountered several cases lately, and cannot but believe that there is much need of improvement in the hygienic routine of bird keeping.

Young birds are the most susceptible subjects, and the symptoms, when they are affected, are alarming. Sometimes one is found dead, and another ailing; a few days may elapse and another one is taken ill, so that in the course of a week or two a large stock of young birds may be carried off.

One of the principal symptoms is sudden collapse and faintness. A bird may suddenly appear "all of a heap," there is a greenish, fœtid diarrhœa, preceded by constipation. This sudden collapse is due to pain and indigestion, and paralysis of various groups of muscles takes place. The bird scarcely ever rallies from the time it is attacked until death occurs, two days, and often less, afterwards. The bowels become badly inflamed, also the stomach (proventriculus), and death results from exhaustion. Post mortem examination gives evidence of inflammation, often extending the whole length of the bowels, the contents of which are very fluid, and greenish in colour; the lungs are also affected with pneumonia and putrefaction rapidly occurs.

Where the disease is suspected to exist every precautionary measure should be adopted (such as cleansing all food and water vessels with a reliable disinfectant), as it is only by prompt action that one can provide against further loss, and prevent an extension of the trouble. A few drops of Lysol (a powerful intestinal antiseptic) can be given in the drinking water. This must be carefully administered, two drops being quite sufficient for the ordinary-sized water vessels. Unfortunately, before the disease is located, many deaths may have occurred, these being often attributed to causes other than dietetic.

Diarrhœa, of course, is the most prominent symptom, and the vent is seen to be soiled; for this I can suggest no better treatment than the giving of one of the salts of bismuth, either the subnitrate or carbonate, both of which are heavy white powders, and very safe of administration. Both are insoluble powders (i.e., will not dissolve in water), possessing no specific actions, the good effects being produced mechanically by coating and protecting the mucous coat of the bowels, and so exerting a sedative influence. The bismuth is best administered by making a little bread and milk (not too soft, or sloppy), and dusting the drug over the same.

Enteritis and Gastro-Enteritis.

These two diseases are scarce worthy of separate description, for in birds it is seldom that one exists without the other, the term "enteritis" indicating inflammatory changes of the mucous coat of the bowels, and "gastro-enteritis" when both the stomach (or proventriculus) and bowels participate. This inflammation may be primary and independent, or secondary (such as arises in the course of other diseases), or it can be classified as arising from the introduction of ptomaines (or toxins), as treated under the heading of ptomaine poisoning, by the taking in of thermal irritants and mineral and vegetable poisons as part of infections and contagious diseases, such as tuberculosis, septic fever, bacteria which produce changes in the liver substance (so indirectly causing the disease), and lastly, a mycotic form arising from the eating of mouldy food, and irritation brought about by the presence of parasites in the bowels. The causes will thus be seen to be numerous, but the common causes may be set down as errors in dieting, want of cleanliness, and alterations taking place in the food.

Enteritis is a very common trouble in birds, and is often associated with pain. There is redness and irritability of the mucous coat of the bowels, or stomach and bowels, the contents varying much in nature, sometimes being thin and watery, at times stained with blood, or they may be slimy, and occasionally the excrement may consist of blood alone, but more often it is greenish. If a bird so affected is handled, the body is seen to be tense, swollen and often reddened, the swollen state arising from tympanitis due to the formation of gases within the bowels, the products of decomposition. The bird shows fear and restlessness if much pain is present. The symptoms are very rapid in their onset; the birds go "thick," assume a somnolent attitude, rapidly lose flesh, there is excrement around the vent, and death occurs in the space of a day or two.

Cases of a more chronic nature may make temporary recoveries, but later have a return of the symptoms, and die, much depending upon the age of the bird and the time of the year. If early recognised, a little scalded bread (or biscuit) with milk may be given, dusted over with bismuth. When pain exists, a few drops of tincture of opium may be given with advantage in the drinking water. It is customary with many to paint the body with a little turpentine, which certainly affords relief; but much will depend upon the temperament of the subject, for if of a highly nervous temperament probably this treatment will be productive of more harm than good. There are at one's disposal many other astringent drugs, but I think that bismuth takes precedence of them all, being as effective as any, and at the same time tasteless and most easy of administration.

The more chronic form of enteritis is commonly due to local ulcerations of the bowels, tuberculous growths and parasites. In the larger birds, such as the Psittaceæ or Parrot family, this form is very common. When due to parasites, or worms, the diarrhœa will be found to be intermittent, and if tape worms, segments of these will be found in the excrement. Here the disease may persist for weeks, the birds losing flesh and in protracted cases becoming almost skeletons. The cause must be removed. If due to tapeworm infestation, areca nut, or tenaline, may be prescribed; for round worms, pomegranate root powdered, kousso, or common salt dissolved in the drinking water, the dosage depending upon the bird to be treated. In all cases (from whatever causes) warmth should be ensured, as where diarrhœa exists there is always great loss of body heat.

ON THE TOP RUNG:

And How I Got There.

(That well-known Scottish artist and fancier, Mr. Thos. Aitken, has undertaken a commission for CAGE BIRDS to visit several of the prominent fanciers North of the Border, and put on record for the benefit of our readers brief details of the methods by which they have attained success in the hobby. Previous subjects have been Mr. A. M'Farlane (Norwich Plainheads), Mr. G. G. Henderson (British), Mr. W. M'Clure (Scots Fancy), Mr. A. Chalmers (Norwich, etc.), and Mr. R. B. Jarvie (Norwich Canaries.—Editor.)

Mr. Louis J. Arrighi

(Edinburgh).

Mr. Louis J. Arrighi needs no introduction to readers of CAGE BIRDS, being well-known as one of Scotland's most respected fanciers, and a keen lover of birds who does all in his power to further the interests of the Fancy. He has been known to send as many as fifty entries to a single show, not merely for the sake of winning prizes, but to help a society which at the time needed financial support.

Mr. Arrighi's stock consists of a mixture of Foreign and British birds and Hybrids; on the latter he is very keen. The specimens include:—Baltimore Oriole (or Hanguest), Red Cardinal, Black-headed Siskin, Cape Sparrow, Java Sparrow, Bicheno Finches, Nuthatch, Hawfinch, Bullfinches, Goldfinches, Siskins, Redpolls, Yellow Hammers, etc. Living in the country his birds have that fit appearance which is recognisable in those continually in the fresh air.

Mr. Arrighi's aviary is erected in his back garden, and measures about twenty-one feet long, varying between seven and eight feet in height. Two-thirds of the length is of wire, and the whole aviary can be divided into three compartments. The roof of the outside flight is of wire over which are yellow coloured roller blinds, which are drawn down during the moulting season, and at night. Above this wire is a roof of glass, and above this again is another cover of wire netting. An aviary such as Mr. Arrighi's is difficult to describe in print—it must be seen to be rightly appreciated.

In the covered portion are several box cages in which are housed Mr. Arrighi's prize-winning Mules and Hybrids. These are only let out into the flight during the moult. At other periods, Mr. Arrighi informed me, they are very quarrelsome, and would then harm the other inmates of the aviary if let out amongst them.

The floor of the outside flight is covered with rough gravel, and several large bathing pans are at the disposal of the inmates. Many were splashing and spluttering in them at the time I was in the aviary.

"You have plenty of baths for your birds, Mr. Arrighi?"—"Yes; I am a great believer in plenty of pure cold water. I give them fresh water frequently every day, and I find that those of my birds which show the best gloss on the feather are those that most regularly use the baths."

Mr. Arrighi has each variety of seed in a tin by itself, and hung up on the sides of the flight, together with spray millet and cuttlefish bone.

"What is your favourite Hybrid?"—"A Goldie-Bullie."

"Do you prefer foreign birds as the parents for such a cross?"—"Yes; one gets bigger, cleaner-cut birds, and better colouring when using foreign Finches than when using the British. I always prefer a Siberian Bullie hen, but they are very difficult to get to lay eggs."

"Have you ever bred anything from two Mules?"—"No, never. And I never expect to get anything from such a mating. I don't think it possible for them to have off-spring. A hen Mule will certainly rear young birds, but, of course, they will be the young of another bird. I myself have had some that have reared young Canaries among the other birds in my aviary."

"Do you darken the aviary when moulting?" — "Yes; and when darkened the light inside is of an orange yellow colour, corresponding to that of the blinds."

"And you colour-feed?"—"Only the Hybrids and some of the British, using to every five parts of cold pepper one of hot. I frequently put in each water vessel a little sulphate of iron (size about that of a pea); this fixes the colour in the feather. During the exhibition season I give a little colour-food occasionally, as I think it helps to keep up the colour.

"I give plenty of mealworms, also sunflower and wild seeds to my birds. I never, however, give chickweed, as it causes them to scour. There being so much water round about here may be the cause of the chickweed having this effect on the birds."

MACCLESFIELD AND DIS. C.B.S.

The sixth annual First Feather Show was held in the Assembly Rooms, Chestergate, on July 9th. It was kindly opened by Mrs. R. Brown, supported by Councillor W. Frost. The entries exceeded those of last year, there being 88 entries—one more than last year—quite a nice lot of birds considering the breeding season. The quality was excellent, and the Lancashires and Yorkshires were a credit to the breeders. Mr. S. R. Compston judged and gave the awards satisfactorily to all. The foliage and plants which decorated the show benches were wortby of note and added great beauty to the showroom.

REIGATE AND REDHILL F.A.

Fourth annual young cage bird show held at "Mutton's Temperance Hotel," Redhill, on July 11th. I am pleased to say a record entry of 104 birds was staged. A grand lot of Norwich were present. Dr. Kellett won the cup for best Canary with a yellow, also won the buff class with the same bird that won the medal at the London and Provincial O.S. He is to be congratulated, this being his first year on the show bench. Yorkshires also were a very good lot. Mr. Tillett won both classes, with Mr. Roser running 2nd in each. Borders were very fine, and certainly improved the show. Mules were very scarce—only three entries; these were shown by J. Montague. The Britishers were the largest section, and some very fine birds were shown. Mr. A. W. Bacon's Chaffinch was shown in grand condition, and won special for best British. Mr. Burtenshaw's Siskin was 2nd. The show was held in a very nice room and was well attended. Mr. Bacon, the secretary, carried out his duties well, and is to be congratulated upon getting together such a grand entry. Mr. F. Easterling placed the awards, and gave every satisfaction.

READING AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

First Feather Show held at Palmer Hall on July 13th, instead of our monthly meeting, and was very well attended. Visitors were flocking in all the time the show was open. Entries totalled 56, which was considered very good, as most of our members have had a bad season and a lot of British birds were in moult. The Black Bullfinch and Pied Linnet of Mr. Acton's were on view and created a lot of interest; as also did the Foreigners. There were eight pairs entered in the latter section, and every one was in splendid condition. Mr. Yates judged and made a good job of it.

DULWICH AND PECKHAM C.B.S.

Second Young Bird Show for this season, held at headquarters, the Reindeer Hotel, on July 12th, when close on 50 young birds were staged, chiefly in the Novice Section, the champion members' exhibits being conspicuous by their absence. Mr. Mazzoni had some very fine Norwich in the champion Section. This gentleman is fortunate in having some really promising youngsters, that should do well when the autumn shows come round. In the Novice Section Mr. H. W. Tomsett and Mr. F. Cole showed some grand Norwich, some of which we shall no douht see again. Messrs. A. Goodwin, J. Carpenter, and D. Reeks put down some fine Yorkshires, sharing the honours between them. In the British Section, Mr. C. Freeman sent a grand team. Mr. S. H. Grahame also sent four good birds, winning special for best British with a Twite. Madame Madewell was again successful in winning 3rd with her Bullfinch "Bobby," a nice bird, with grand breast colour. A good number of fanciers attended during the evening. Mr. Cole had the catalogue with awards ready a few minutes after judging, a fact which was much appreciated by visitors. Mr. H. E. Tringham judged the Canaries, and Mr. C. Botting the British, their awards being well received. The show was a complete success in every way. Three gentlemen handed in their names for membership.

STOCKPORT B.F.A.

Fifth annual Nest Feather Show, held on June 30th and July 1st, in the Assembly Room, at the Boar's Head Hotel. The room is very suitable for a show, being large and lofty, with a good top light, showing the birds off to advantage. Entries only numbered 88, being nearly 100 less than last year, owing to the very poor breeding season, many of our members have had; in fact, several of the old exhibitors had not a bird to show. The quality of the birds shown compared very favourably with that of those shown at previous First Feather exhibitions. Mr. J. Garner won special for best Can. in show, with a grand yellow coppy. Mr. F. Hardy won that for best British, with a gem of a Goldfinch. Mr. W. Bowyer (Leek) judged, and gave every satisfaction.

YORK C.B.S.

Usual monthly meeting, held in the All Saints School Room. It was decided to hold an exhibition of wild seeds for the coming month (August), when Messrs. Sissons and Shorney have promised to supply us with samples of the seeds required for the British birds during the winter months, and their valuable properties will be explained, for the Finch tribe. Also we had a First Feather Show, and Messrs. Shorney and Zimmerman staged some fine Norwich. The quality was good, but lacked in numbers. Messrs. Campling and Simeson showed some rare Yorkshires, but the members are very careful of showing their first feather youngsters, thinking, no doubt, they are best at home. Mr. Wright judged, and his awards gave every satisfaction.

The 2nd First Feather Show was held on July 16th at the New Inn. Entries again came up well, 76 birds being staged. Mr. J. Townend judged and gave every satisfaction. The principal point winners were: Yorks, Mr. Marsh; Nor., Mr. Johnson; Cinn. Mks. and Greens: Mr. Richmond. Mr. Steele gained most points in novices' classes, which were badly supported, although another special has been given. As a result of the two first feather shows, most of the members are close together, and some keen competition may be expected in the winter show.

Third annual First Feather Show, held in Blackfriars' Hall, on July 12th. There were over 200 entries, as compared with 112 in the previous year, which was gratifying to the secretary, Mr. A. Kent, the chairman, Mr. C. Richardson, and the committee, Messrs. G. Bennell, W. Breeze, T. Simpson, C. Greenfield, and R. Hately. Mr. E. W. Smith (Downham) judged, and appeared to give every satisfaction. Among the exhibits was a pure white Blackbird with pink eyes. The quality of the birds throughout was excellent.

ALTRINCHAM C.B.S.

Annual Nest Feather Show held July 9th, at the Victoria Cafe, Oxford Road. The room is well adapted for a small show, being well lighted. The show was not as large as usual, several members having a most disastrous first round, and the second round young ones being hardly fit; but what was short in numbers was made up for in quality, some real good specimens being staged. This society is noted for good specials, and this show was no exception. The winners of medals for best birds were: Messrs. J. Critchley for best Nor. (a real bouncer, variegated yell.), W. Bayley for best Bord. (a beautiful model, cl. yell., feathered like wax), P. Drinkwater for best Yorkshire (a grand bird), E. Jones for best British (a very nice conditioned Yellowhammer.) Among the exhibits we noticed a lovely buff, the property of the worthy President (Mr. R. Unwin), who was the donor of the medals, consequently he did not wish to compete. This bird should be heard of again. Mr. Mills kindly distributed the prizes during the show, and was ably assisted by his well-known fancier wife, Mrs. Mills. A hearty vote of thanks was accorded to them, and in reply, Mr. Mills said he was interested in his wife's hobby, and would do all in his power to further the interests of the cage bird fancy in general. Mr. P. Drinkwater (secretary) and Mr. B. Head (assistant secretary), together with a good working committee, had everything in ship-shape order. Mr. T. Harrison (Altrincham) judged, and his decision met with general approval, no grumbling being heard.

*A Novel Nest.

At Penwortham, near Preston, a Tomtit has built a nest and laid six eggs in a cart belonging to the landlord of "The Pear Tree Inn." The cart is in daily use for the carrying of bricks, but immediately it returns to headquarters the Tomtit flies to the nest. The nest is constructed in such an ingenious fashion that when the cart is tipped up the eggs cannot roll out. Sent by Elsie Markwell (age 10), 7, Undercliffe Road, Eccleshill, Bradford.

*A Blackbird's Bravery.

Recently a Blackbird built her nest in a hedge a few feet from the front door of a house, and in due course her brood was hatched. One day while we were looking out of the window we saw a large rat climbing up towards the nest. The mother immediately flew down towards the enemy. She pecked at it on the head, and beat it with her wings, so that ultimately the rat retreated, leaving the brood unharmed.—Sent by Nellie Buglass (age 10), 3, Meadowbank Crescent, Edinburgh.

 My Two Pets.

One day my father was mowing the lawn, and we saw two old Greenfinches, and they were keeping up a terrible noise. My father told me there was a Greenfinch's nest somewhere near. So I looked about and found it. We fetched a short ladder, and I climbed up to see what was in the nest, and when I looked in I saw five young ones about half feathered. I asked my father if he would let me have two to rear. I took them home, and wasn't I pleased! I fed them on biscuit and egg, and chopped up young lettuce very fine. I used to get some green-fly off the rose trees and mixed it altogether. I fed them with a little stick until they could peck, and now they are two strong cock birds, about nine weeks old. They are so tame that they will eat out of my hand. Sent by Willie Probert (age 11), 8, Maindee Parade, Newport, Mon.

Wild Bird Life.

Old Haunts of Birds.

The growth of a town or village causes many changes in the bird life of a district. Some species are easily disturbed, and quickly seek fresh haunts and nesting quarters. A house or two may be built, or a small wood cut down during the winter, which will cause our summer migrants to shun those spots which they have frequented for years; and not only will the birds of that particular wood disappear, but surrounding places will frequently be left without their summer residents; for although they may not have nested there, it is possible they may have been in the habit of visiting the place during the day in search of food, so that when it disappears it so alters the face of the country that they no longer regard it as such a desirable district to live in. I have known more than one place to be deserted by summer warblers directly the changes commence. On the other hand, several species cling to the old haunts until actually driven out by the nesting quarters being invaded and the ground used.

Some few years ago there was a little patch of marshy ground in the East-end of London where the Snipe and Redshanks visited annually. Of these two species the Snipe was the first to disappear (although probably a stray bird or two found its way there during the winter months, long after they were supposed to have gone). But the Redshanks came year after year to nest in the old spot, although houses and factories were gradually being put up. When I left the district there were only two or three acres of open ground, but still a pair or two were heard whistling when the marsh was invaded. Possibly by now they have been forced to find fresh quarters nearer the mouth of the river.

As is well known, Rooks and Jackdaws are very constant to one particular spot, and many a country town boasts of its rookery in the old elms right in the midst of its busy thoroughfares. There is something peculiarly picturesque about such trees, tenanted by the garrulous birds, who go about their nesting and other duties apparently unconcerned with the doings of humans in the world below them.

Answered by CLAUDE ST. JOHN.

Young Dying.

J. S.—Your feeding, and the hemp you send a sample of, are undoubtedly the cause. The sample of canary is very good, and suitable for any stock. The hemp has been good, but is now thoroughly rancid and unfit. I cannot detect any signs of mice. The sand is nice and gritty, but rather dusty; still, it is very suitable if you cannot get similar sand freer from dust. See that all your other seeds are as good in quality as the canary, and follow this treatment; your birds will then soon be all right. As a staple give an unlimited supply of plain canary. Every second day give separately about half a teaspoonful of summer rape per bird, and on the alternate days for the next fortnight a little bread and milk, sprinkled with soft sugar, and liberally strewn with maw seed. Three times a week give half a teaspoonful of hemp per bird. Give a few half ripe plantain stalks, or seed stalks of shepherd's purse, every second or third day. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts for two days as will cover a sixpence, and afterwards by same means a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea, a crystal of sulphate of iron half as big, and six drops of dilute sulphuric acid every second day for a week.

Moulting and Colour Feeding.

M. E. J.—Provided the birds are healthy and in a good vigorous condition, there is no necessity for any material change in food or general treatment during the moult, beyond exercising due care that the birds are not exposed to draughts or chills, and are kept in a pure atmosphere and fairly equable temperature. Red mites should be closely looked after, as they are apt to become very troublesome. Strict cleanliness throughout should be exercised, the birds allowed to bathe freely whenever the weather is mild, a little egg or oiseau food given about twice a week, and towards the end of moult a few grains of linseed three times a week. A crystal of sulphate of iron, or twenty drops of chemical food, in the water twice a week during the latter half of the moult will also prove beneficial. This, of course, refers to ordinary birds not being colour fed. Whether you should colour-feed them or not depends solely upon your own taste, the breed they belong to, and whether you want to exhibit them. If Border Fancies they must not be fed. If Norwich, Yorkshires, Cinnamons, or Lizards they must be colour-fed if you want to get a fair chance of reaching the top. If any other breed you can use your own discretion. If you decide to colour-feed, begin at once to add a little colour to the egg food given twice a week. As soon as the birds begin to drop feathers, give the soft food with colour daily, and continue doing so regularly until the birds are quite fine in feather again.

Unhealthy Skin and Plumage.

M. L.—I have generally found such complaints are associated with the scar leaf of birdy days, and are to a certain extent, metaphorically speaking, the grey hairs of the bird; therefore, I suspect your bird has seen the best of its days. I would not advise you to turn it loose in an outdoor aviary, but if you have a nice sheltered corner in it you might place the bird in a good-sized cage, such as a double breeding cage, and hang it there, where it will have the full advantage of the open air life, and not be subject to bullying attacks by the more healthy and vigorous birds. As a staple diet, give a mixture of three parts canary to one part summer rape; every second day a quarter teaspoonful of maw seed, and on the alternate days a small piece of bread and milk sprinkled lightly with soft sugar. Twice each week for the next month dust the bread and milk slightly with a mixture of two parts flowers of sulphur to one part chlorate of potash before putting on the sugar. On two other days each week give a pinch of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, linseed, millet, and broken groats. Give plantain stalks, seed stalks of shepherd's purse, seedy chickweed or dandelion heads, freely. Allow it to bathe freely, and occasionally dissolve a crystal or two of permanganate of potash in the bathing water. In the drinking water give twenty drops of whisky ten of lemon juice, and as much Epsom salts every second day for a week as will cover a sixpence, and after this give twice a week for a month the soda and iron mixture as advised to "J. S." Anoint the bare and unhealthy skin once a week with carbolised vaseline. Report progress in a month, referring to this reply.

Concerning Crests.

T. Howard.—To go fully into all the details is impossible here. One question alone as to catering for the birds would necessitate a lengthy article such as you will find in our 1909 Annual. (1) She probably has a chronic form of asthma. Is she perceptibly worse at night, or in certain conditions of weather? Keep her in a well-ventilated place, where the air is pure and fresh, and not contaminated by fumes of burning lights. See, however, that it is quite free from cold draughts and fluctuations of temperature. Feed on plain Canary as a staple. Every second day give half a teaspoonful of summer rape, and on the alternate days a small piece of bread and milk, with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion dropped on; and cover with a quarter teaspoonful of maw. Give a little chickweed daily. In the drinking water give ten drops of syrup of rhubarb and a pinch of Epsom salts for two days, and afterwards five drops each syrup of tolu, oxymel of squills, glycerine, and ipecacuanha wine, two days in every three. Continue this treatment for a fortnight. (2) A staple of plain canary, half teaspoonful of summer rape every second day, and on the alternating days a little egg food, varied occasionally with bread and milk, twice a week, and on two other days a small teaspoonful of a mixture of one part each hemp, inga, teazle, millet, and broken groats, and a half part each of maw, linseed, and gold of pleasure. (3) Yes, this is the moult commencing. Many of the early birds are beginning to cast feathers. The above will suit them well.

Bare on Rump, etc.

A Reader of "Cage Birds."—Is the discolouration underneath the tail on the feathers or the skin? If it is only under-tail coverts that are soiled it is probably due to the looseness. Try the following for, say, a fortnight, and if the bird is not considerably better then, write again and give more particulars concerning the symptoms. First of all, see the cage is quite free from all insect pests, or make it so if it is not. Keep it as clean as possible, and the floor strewn with gritty sand. See that all seeds and foods are perfectly sound, clean, and fresh. Keep in a cosy place, quite out of reach of draughts, but still where the air is pure and fresh. Allow it to bathe as freely as it likes, and occasionally add a crystal or two of permanganate of potash to the bath. Feed on a staple mixture of three parts canary to one part summer rape. Every second day give a small piece of bread and milk, with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and dusted with soft sugar, and on the alternate days a quarter teaspoonful of maw seed. Twice a week give a small pinch of a mixture of equal parts hemp, teazle, and linseed. In the drinking water give as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, and ten drops of lemon juice for two days, and afterwards four drops each tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid, every second day for a week. Anoint the bare place on the rump twice at an interval of a week, with carbolised vaseline.

Brevities.

Seed Samples (H. C. M.).—Opinions based upon such meagre samples can be of little practical value. Anyhow, here they are: Rape: Is a very nice sample of summer rape. Canary: Is small, and rather thin, and of rather poor quality, though sweet. Hemp: Very small and uneven in size, but of good quality in the kernel. Another packet contained a little canary and rape mixed, which are practically the same as those above. Next time, do, please, be a little more liberal if you want a trustworthy opinion; also pack samples more securely, and number each packet.

A Late Brood (Salt Pan).—As this is only the second nest the hen has had this season, there should be no risk at all in letting her sit and rear them if she will. It might throw the moult a little later, but it will probably be more rapid, so that if you take due care to keep her fairly warm and out of draughts when the moult begins, she may be through just as early as if she was prevented hatching this brood. Should she drop into moult and cease feeding the young, you must either transfer them to another hen, or if one is not available finish rearing them by hand.

Crouching on Perch (I.M.D.).—The bird is feeling a bit out of sorts on account of the moult approaching. I think that all that is wrong. Your feeding, however, gives room for improvement. As a staple diet give a mixture of three parts canary to one part summer rape (the reddish-brown seed, not the black). Twice a week you may give a small teaspoonful of the seed mixture, and for the next week every second day a small piece of bread and milk with a good pinch of maw seed strewn over it. Give a spray of seedy chickweed daily. In the drinking water give 10 drops syrup of buckthorn for two days, and afterwards 20 drops of chemical food daily for three or four days.

Where to Buy (A. C. Frost).—Sorry, but I really cannot oblige by naming any particular dealer or firm. Look in our advertisement columns any week under the heading Yorkshires, and write any of the known breeders, stating your exact requirements. You should get a very good singer for its breed for a less sum than you name, though, of course, it would not be the most typical. If you only require a good singing bird, and are not particular as regards the breed, the sum you name would be better spent by purchasing a trained Roller. You should get a very fair Roller for 30s., and as songsters pure and simple the breed is second to none. It would be good policy also to wait until December or January before buying, as the young birds are then in the market, and prices more reasonable.

Sample of Canary Seed (Inverness).—I can only give you an opinion upon the seed—not an analysis. It is very small, extremely dusty, thoroughly bad flavoured, and altogether an undesirable sample. Your birds are certainly wisest to reject it. The best thing you can do is to follow the birds' example and get a better sample.

Young Birds Staggering (J. Bennett).—You do not say how old they are. If they had only just left the nest when you wrote, the apparent weakness when flying on to a perch was probably nothing worse than inexperience, and may have quite disappeared by this time. If they still appear weak, crush a little cuttlefish to powder and add a pinch to the soft food each time. Also give a few broken groats daily, and soak a little white millet until soft, wipe dry, and give a teaspoonful of this between the brood every second day. Pound a little old limey mortar and add to the sand covering the cage floor, and, finally, give 20 drops of chemical food in the water three times a week for a time.

Horny Growths (Yorkie).—These growths have been shown to be due to a type of bacillary infection. I very much doubt whether any treatment would be of avail, and, considering the history, I think you would be best advised to suffer the loss now than keep the bird going perhaps for months, with the possible risk of infecting others, besides the temptation to breed with it. The latter you should strictly avoid doing. If you want to try to cure it, touch the spots twice a week with a camel-hair pencil dipped in tincture of iodine, until the nodules peel off. Feed generously on a diet of seeds, green food, and a little bread and milk, but avoid egg food. Give an occasional aperient of a little sulphate of soda in the drinking water.

Treatment for Young (Havelock).—Your feeding is probably at fault, and I suspect you are too liberal with the hemp. If you treat as advised to "Hunt" in last issue from the time they leave the parents, you should soon be rid of this trouble. Note, you should not transfer the young direct from the breeding cage to the flight cage. Let them have a few days in a moderate-sized cage before going into the flight. When they have been away from the parents a fortnight you may begin to give such greenstuff as half ripe plantain stalks, seed stalks of shepherd's purse, or seedy chickweed. Those that appear puffed and sleepy should have a pinch of Epsom salts and 15 drops of whisky in the drinking water for one day, and a little bread and milk sprinkled with maw seed daily for a few days.

Wheezy Hen (J. L. Pulsford).—Limit diet strictly to plain canary and a daily supply of green food for a week, and during this time give twenty drops of whisky and as much Epsom salts in the water every second day as will cover a sixpence. After this, add a pinch of summer rape to the diet twice a week, on two other days a pinch of hemp, and on two other days half a teaspoonful of egg food, or an equivalent amount of bread and milk sprinkled with soft sugar, and give in the drinking water every second day for another week the soda and iron mixture advised to "J. S." Keep quite free from draughts, and if it is not all right in a fortnight write again and repeat particulars, referring to this reply.

After-Effects (Sleepy).—It is simply the after-effects which have made him weak, and consequently sleepy. It is very probable also he will now drop into moult, which will appear to increase the weakness and make him still more mopy. Give a piece of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut with two drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it and sprinkled with maw seed, each day for a week. Give only seed stalks of plantain and shepherd's purse as green food, and place a piece of cuttlefish in the wires. In the drinking water give 20 drops of whisky and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence for one day, and afterwards four drops each tinctura of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid every second day for a week.

Inflammation (Christow).—Thanks for further particulars re ailment. I do not remember all the details concerning your feeding, but I have little doubt this is at the root of the trouble, and I suspect you give hemp far too freely. Adopt the method advised to "Hunt" in last issue from the time the young leave the parents, and you should soon effect an improvement. Do not give green food for the first fortnight after removal, but afterwards give limited quantities of such things as shepherd's-purse, seed stalks, and plantain stalks. If the birds then seem to drink inordinately, which is not very likely, give a small piece of bread and milk in place of any other soft food, and add four drops of dilute sulphuric acid to each two tablespoonfuls of drinking water for one-half of each day for a few days. If any birds are still ill, keep them comfortably warm, put on a diet of bread and milk sprinkled with maw seed, and plain canary seed. No green food until better. In the water give 15 drops of whisky and a pinch of Epsom salts for one-half of each day, and the acidulated water for the remaining half until birds are better.

What is Wrong? (D.G., Porth).—It is getting too late now to expect the birds to go to nest, and I doubt whether they will. The hen I should discard altogether, and would advise you to replace her, if possible, next spring with a vigorous, young, and healthy hen. Your feeding seems very faulty, and your management of the pair when putting them together rather injudicious. Altogether you would be best advised to get our handbook, "Canary Breeding for Beginners," post free 7d., from our manager, and study the elements of feeding and general management in readiness for next season. The birds should soon commence moulting. During this time feed on a staple of plain canary. Give half a teaspoonful per bird of summer rape every second day, and a similar quantity of egg food, or bread and milk, liberally sprinkled with maw seed on the alternate days. Allow birds to bathe freely in mild weather, and when nearing the end of the moult give a few grains of linseed every third day, and add 20 drops of chemical food to the drinking water.

Young with Diarrhœa (H. Tite).—If the young are still alive, pay particular attention to the hen, to see if she feeds satisfactorily. If not, transfer them at once to another good feeding hen. If such is not available, give her a good pinch of Epsom salts in the drinking water for two or three hours on two successive mornings. Stop all usual green foods, but give a half ripe plantain stalk each day. If you continue to use eggs, see they are from a perfectly healthy source. It would, however, be an advantage to use the cod liver oil food without egg of any kind for the rest of the rearing provided the hen eats it freely. Make it only just crumbly moist, and add a good sprinkling of maw seed each time, and dust it lightly with powdered cuttlefish for a day or two. Give a teaspoonful of scalded rape daily (see it does not become sour), and a similar quantity of cracked hemp daily (which see is perfectly sweet and good in the kernel). Keep cages, perches, and nest quite clean. If the hen is not keen on feeding, give a good meal by hand once or twice daily until she improves.

Loss of Young (East Yorks.).—You should not have given two drops of castor oil. If the bird needed an aperient, a little finely minced green food—lettuce, groundsel, or watercress, preferably—given very moist in a little egg food, would have been quite sufficient for a bird so young. To have a better chance with the next brood you are taking (an ill-advised decision), you should certainly remove the eggs as laid and return them on the evening the third is laid. Keep a dummy in the nest in case she should lay but three. You should also try leaving the cock with her this time. When young are due to hatch give a small quantity of egg food, and supply at least twice a day in small quantities, perfectly fresh each time. Begin to give green food on the fourth day, and cracked hemp about the tenth. If hen flags in feeding, add a little maw to the egg food, and a small quantity of soaked rape daily. When the young are ready to leave parents, treat as advised to "Hunt" in last issue.

Hind Toe Displaced (J.W.W.).—I can't quite see how the toe can stick into the breast, unless the leg also is flexed to keep it bent up against the body, except it is when the bird is sitting flat on perch. It is doubtful if you will remedy the deformity; you ought to have attended to it as soon as the bird left the nest. Put on a rubber ring made by cutting an eighth of an inch off the end of rubber tube as used on feeding bottles. Pass this over the three front toes, held close together; then hold the hind toe back against the leg, and pass the ring on up the leg until near the end of the toe. Leave it there, so that when the bird is released the ring will still hold the toe in a backward position. Allow it to remain on a month; then cut it off, at the same time giving fairly thin, almost round, perches, say, a trifle thicker than an ordinary lead pencil. Let it have these perches for a few months, if necessary, until you see the toe has a good power of gripping the perch.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., etc.

Is it Unwell?

R. Charnley.—So far as I can grip your query, that is, follow your description of the symptoms, there is nothing to cause you uneasiness, but such as you describe is largely natural at this season of the year. I would, however, give it three or four doses of Dinneford's Magnesia—2 parts water, 1 part magnesia—with an interval of three days between each dose, the above to form the drinking water on the days in question; on other days well colour the drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food. Get this from your chemist, and put a little on the tongue of the Parrot daily, so long as the supply lasts; this will clear the bird's mouth if it is at all furred. I do not think any consultation is necessary, but if there should be any further development repeat query at once with full particulars. In addition to the seed mixture give ripe fruit, ad lib, such kinds as you find it prefers, and as in season; nuts (shelled walnuts are very good), plain biscuits, either dry or moistened (not saturated) with water, or water and chemical food. Keep a piece of clean cuttlefish hanging in the cage. Do not give tea, coffee, or milk slops, table scraps, or any kind of animal food whatever.

Concerning a Rosy Pastor.

Tom Pepper.—(1) The moult of this coincides with that of our native birds, and takes place in late summer or early autumn. If you attempt colour feeding use red colour food, and you could begin at once, or in, say, a fortnight's time, merely sprinkling the colour food over the daily supply of soft food at first, gradually increasing the quantity till the proportion was one in four. Moisten the soft food, and then stir in the colour food. (2) The bird will become tamer, but for a bird of this size, and of a such restless (not wild) disposition, your cage should be six inches higher and wider than the size you name. (3) The bird will settle down somewhat, but with such birds, when the time of darkness approaches, it is better to screen their cage from artificial light, and you will not find the wildness continue long. Hang a night curtain of some material which will allow light to percolate through in the early morning before it is removed. (4) 18 x 15 x 16 inches. Find out his likes and dislikes, tempt him with the former to take it from your fingers; it will thus become accustomed to you and others, and gradually lose its fear of man. At the same time rushy movements, or anything calculated to scare, should be avoided in its vicinity. (5) When the bird is at rest, the crest is not visible, but when it is excited and rattling off his notes, then the feathers of its head are erected, but more in the form of a cap with drooping plumes, than an upstanding crest.

Birds for Outdoor Aviary.

A. E. E.—I cannot name quantity, as you do not mention size of aviary. As regards Foreign species, Zebra and Ribbon Finches would probably breed this season if procured at once. At least, quite apart from the question of breeding, all birds that you intend to winter out-of-doors should be placed there as quickly as possible. You can keep all the following with the Canaries. Long-tailed and Rufous-tailed Greenfinches, Grey and Green Singing Finches, Bronze and Magpie Mannikins; Cape Canary, Cherry, Chestnut, Spice, Pectoral and Masked Finches, Silverbills, Bengalese, and odd males for the sake of their colour when in nuptial plumage of Napoleon and Madagascar Weavers; Diamond Doves (very small), Gold-breasted Waxbills, Common and Green Avadavats, and a pair of some small species of Quail, the Chinese Painted for preference. Supply canary and white millet seed, either separate or as canary and white millet seed, either separate or as canary and paddy rice, with a little hemp and sunflower seeds in the winter months, little ripe fruit (such as they will take), flowering or seeding grain, and lettuce as green foods, with grit and water ad lib. Coulbe, British species to Redpoll, Linnet, Siskin, Goldfinch, and Bullfinch. Write our Mr Weston for food and treatment of them. A bi-annual coating of Brunswick Black (from any oilstores) is the best preparation for wire netting. Bamboo roses, wild clematis, Virginian creeper, ivy, and hops are all suitable climbers, the latter especially for any inside standards you may have. You would find "Foreign Birds for Beginners" (see advert.) very helpful.

Mated or Single? ("Dad").—There is but little (if any) hardship to the birds in keeping a group of males together without mates; in fact, many species can be so kept that would not agree together in pairs in the same aviary. However, I am of the opinion that the small Waxbills are happier and more contented when kept in pairs, though this may be mere sentiment, and the birds can be kept as you suggest without pining away or suffering of any kind, and a number together obviates loneliness. There is, however, another side to the question. I am sure you would find them (the small Waxbills) more interesting when kept in pairs, even though no attempt at breeding is made. Hang up as many cocoanut shell nests as you have pairs of birds; each pair will choose one as a domicile, using them as retiring places and night shelters, and you will see the birds under a different aspect and conditions than if only males were kept. A little hay or moss should be pushed into each receptacle.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Watery and Offensive.

Gilbert, A.—It is due to some unhealthy condition of the bowels, and it is a very unpleasant state of things when a bird makes the draw-board so offensive. Let the bird have plenty of mawseed to eat, and a liberal supply of ripe plantain-stalks, seeding shepherd's purse, and thistle-tops (opening them, if necessary). You should certainly not let a Linnet have the run of unlimited hemp, niger and linseed. Feed it on this stock mixture:—Canary two pints, teazle one pint, summer rape and charlock half-pint each. Give a pinch of the other seeds occasionally. For four days dissolve in two to three tablespoonfuls of drinking water as much citrate of iron crystals as will lie on a threepennypiece. Afterwards, mix into the same quantity of water six to eight drops of tincture of gentian, continuing it over a period of a week. Scrub the cage bottom regularly with a little disinfectant. The above medicines can be obtained of any chemist for a few pence. If the citrate of iron is ineffective, try for two or three days two drops (not more) of lysol in the water.

Decorating an Outdoor Aviary.

Miss Caunt.—You ought to have told me the size of the aviary, for in a small place, containing a reasonable population, it will be almost worse than "love's labour lost" to attempt to decorate it with flowers and shrubs inside. There are not many shrubs, and hardly any flowers, which birds in an aviary will not demolish. And what they fail to demolish quickly becomes an unsightly mess by reason of the excreta, etc. In a small aviary, the best plan is to have a number of privet, box, or holly shrubs in tubs or large pots, and change them at short periods. In a large open aviary these shrubs may be varied with fruit bushes (such as currant and gooseberry), thorn bushes (hawthorn, etc.) while you can make a sort of thick jungle with a mixture of sunflowers, nettles, tall grasses, oats, seeding weeds and things of that kind. Ivy makes a fine background for an aviary, and ivy-covered stumps look very pretty in it. Woodbine, clematis, or pretty clinging ivy, etc., look splendid trained over the outside. You cannot beat for a border (outside) such plants as attract insects. Cornflowers, too (my favourite posy) are very beautiful and valuable. The seed of the latter is eaten by many birds—Goldfinches are passionately fond of it. A corner planted with thistles, too, is both useful and ornamental.

Young Hawfinches.

Hawfinch.—I should continue to crack the sunflower seed for a little longer, but I don't think it necessary to do so with the hemp. I may say that you cannot expect your young (1910) Hawfinches to moult out at their best for next show season; they want to be two years old, at least. At their second moult they improve wonderfully in colour and "fill out" (grow) considerably. You can give a little insectile food daily, with a little colour food mixed amongst it; the young birds will eat this readily. If you don't believe in colour-feeding, then give plenty of Nature's colour food, i.e., berries, such as black, privet, etc. When adult, sunflower should be a Hawfinch's principal food—get it (the seed) sound and plump (with good kernels). Given this, and a little Finch mixture, and a mealworm or two every day, the bird asks for little more. The mealworms, however, should be given direct from the fingers. They are an invaluable agent in steadying a Hawfinch. The bird appreciates hemp, linseed, canary, oats, and sometimes a little buckwheat, dari, groats, summer rape, small maize, etc. His powerful beak makes short work of beech-mast, walnuts, plum and cherry stones, hawthorn, privet, etc., berries, and the like. Green-food: A little young lettuce, watercress, chickweed, shepherd's-purse, also ripe apple, pear, and suitable fruits, occasionally. They favour tender green garden peas, and these should be given in the pod when obtainable. Let the birds bathe freely.

Young Linnet Mules.

Diaco.—No hard and fast rule can be laid down as to the removal of young Mules from their parents; some (those that have been well fed from birth) can feed themselves a day or two earlier than others that have been neglected or indifferently fed by their parents. The best and safest rule is never to remove them entirely so long as they "call" to be fed; before that stage is reached, however, they will be picking up food—partially supporting themselves, so to speak. I give green food (seeding shepherd's-purse) all the time; it is one of the first things the young Mules get on to. But lettuce, watercress, etc. (non-seeding kinds) I avoid when the young birds are commencing to feed. Have often given my methods of feeding. Cracked seed they must have for a time, and some soft food. When well on food a good seed mixture would be: Canary three parts, teazle two parts, hemp one part, charlock and summer rape half-part each, maw and linseed quarter-part each. In the hot weather reduce the hemp and linseed and increase the teazle.

Any of the special Finch or wild seed mixtures advertised in our columns will make a good and acceptable change, given twice or so a week. A little sunflower seed twice or thrice a week would also be sure to be appreciated; crack it, if necessary. Any of the usual green foods may be given—chickweed, shepherd's-purse, flowering groundsel (not coarse leaves), dandelion, lettuce, watercress, etc. The two first-mentioned may be given practically ad libitum. All Mules are very fond of shepherd's-purse and chickweed.

Brevities.

Thrush Foods (R. Carter).—Take my advice and invest in a copy of the "Nutshell" booklet, which deals with the Song Thrush and Blackbird (only 2½d. post free from "Cage Birds" office). In this you will not only find the best foods given, but a lot of information about the general management—much more than I could possibly give in the small compass of these replies—and which will help you greatly.

Moulting a Goldfinch (M. E. V.).—I dealt with this matter in the reply given "E. J. T." in last week's issue, to which kindly refer. I can also recommend the "Nutshell" booklet on the Goldfinch to your notice; it will please you. The stock Finch mixture referred to is: Canary and teazle three parts each, hemp two parts, linseed one part, and just a small sprinkling of summer rape and charlock.

A Bullie; and Another (H. H. H.).—1. My own experience is that the Bullfinch is not so long-lived in captivity as, say, either Linnet or Greenfinch; but to state that they "do not live more than two or three years" is absurd. Don't you believe it. 2. The answer to this depends upon the size of the cage and the number of birds therein. If given a reasonable amount of "elbow room," different species of birds will most certainly sing "when kept altogether."

Another Ailing Skylark (A. C.).—You made a great mistake in bathing the eye with sweet oil, which would make the bird sticky and uncomfortable, and do little good, if any. Get a little boracic eye lotion from a chemist, and use this warm (stand the bottle in some hot water). Nor would the oil do the knee joint any good. This you should bathe in fairly hot water, dry, and then paint with a very little tincture of iodine (obtainable from the chemist) Do this once daily; a small camel-hair brush is handy to do it with.

A Young Cuckoo (A. D. Stirling).—Read the reply given "G. B." this week, which answers your own questions. Cuckoos should have live food of some description. The cage must be a big, roomy one, and be frequently cleaned, or the plumage gets broken and dirty. I consider Cuckoos very unsatisfactory cage birds, and long ago vowed I would never have another. But last year I was tempted and fell—that is, I hand-reared one (or, rather, a certain good lady did so). A young Cuckoo is a curious and in somewise interesting creature; hardly "worth the candle," however

An Ailing Skylark (A. Lomas).—It is difficult to help you, as your letter conveys so little information—not a word as to how you are feeding and keeping the Lark. However, let the food be the same as is advised in the "Nutshell" booklet upon the Skylark (which I gather has been sent along to you), giving as much live food as possible—such as gentles, spiders, mealworms, flies, caterpillars, and such grubs as you can get out of the garden. This change of food, with a mild dose of saline medicine for two days, may pull the bird round; dissolve as much sulphate of soda as will lie on a shilling in four tablespoonfuls of drinking water (fresh each day).

In an Ornamental Aviary (Curious Querist).—I am afraid you will do little good in the breeding line with mixed pairs of birds in the small ornamental table aviary you describe; if you overcrowd you most certainly will not. The most likely combination I can suggest is cock Goldie, cock Linnet, and two (or three) hen Canaries. On no account put in a cock Canary; unless, that is, you decide to restrict the inmates to this one male and the two or three hen Canaries. For the mating couples the following would be a good stock mixture: Canary three parts, teazle two parts, hemp, summer rape, charlock, and linseed one part of each. You would find the two "Nutshell" booklets dealing with the Linnet and the Goldfinch very helpful to you (post free 5d. the two). Moult the birds together; two cock Linnets would most likely fight when in breeding condition.

Goldfinches Ailing (Cousin Jack).—Like all too many of my querists, you give no details of your feeding, nor of the symptoms of the illness, which would help me to answer—I am left, as it were, to grope in the dark. I can only advise you to give a complete change of food, niger, maw, thistle, dandelion, sesame, wild seeds, crushed sunflower and safflower will help you to provide this), and for one day a dose of saline medicine, as much sulphate of soda as covers a shilling dissolved in three tablespoonfuls of drinking water) followed by a week's course of a tonic, such as 6 to 8 drops of tincture of gentian in the same quantity of water (fresh daily).

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 2, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. And bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

Mrs. Sproston.—Spice Finch died of pneumonia unassociated with any other diseased condition. The recent cold weather is the cause, these birds being very susceptible to variations in temperature. You do not state how long you have had these birds, whether of recent import, etc.

I. W. W.—Young Canary died as the result of pneumonia affecting both lungs. This was the actual cause. The primary disease is connected with the liver, and its origin would result from dietetic causes. Such causes are often difficult to trace, and sometimes occur where the most scrupulous cleanliness is observed; and it becomes a matter of great difficulty to assure fanciers that the trouble is in any way connected with the food, often being looked upon as a personal reflection on their management. This disease is not by any means of a fatal character in itself. It is the complication pneumonia that really kills, much depending upon surroundings and the nature of the weather. Should you have another affected, place it at once in a warm position, and give 3 drops of aromatic spirits of ammonia in drinking water three times daily mixed with a little simple syrup of glycerine. If administered by the beak, give only 2 drops of the first in about six drops of the latter.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

A Photo (A. R., York).—Photo safely to hand this time; thanks.

An Idea (G. Bates). Pity you do not state what this idea was about, maybe our artist has it, though we cannot at the moment say for certain.

Pigeons Found (W. P. Bell).—We have forwarded your letter to the Editor of "The Racing Pigeon," and no doubt the fact of the birds being in your possession will be announced in that paper, and lead to the owner claiming them.

Photo, etc. (A. Richardson).—Photos have safely arrived. Thanks for suggestion, which we will give our consideration.

A Red-Mite Killer (B. W. Lingwood).—We shall be glad to give you an opinion if you will let us know what the liquid is. We may say that there are several harmless fluids (to birds and cages, that is) which will kill red-mites "on the spot," and destroy their eggs; for instance (to name one or two), a strong solution of lysol, or turpentine, or methylated spirits, or petrol, etc.

A Membership Matter (E. M. Evans).—It is certainly quite "in order" for any member of a society to object to the nomination for membership (or, rather, the election to membership) of any person he deems undesirable. He would state the grounds upon which he bases the objection, and the meeting would vote for or against the said person becoming a member. In some societies, however, the elections are conducted by ballot, a certain percentage of "black-balls" excluding from membership. We do not see that the fact of the party concerned being present makes any difference; he (or she) should retire from the room, if requested, while the proposal of membership is being considered.

Fears (Nil Desperandum). If your fears of "asthma" are well founded, then you have our sympathy. But you have no legal ground of complaint against the seller, who sent on seven days' approval; and you admit that you kept the birds in face of noticing "sneezing." You seem to have acted unwisely in your own interests. But we may say that the fact of the young birds five weeks old lying on the perch and closing their eyes at times is not by any means symptomatic of illness. All young birds do the same thing. At the tender age you mention they take many a "forty winks" during the course of the day. If the youngsters are bright and lively when they do move about, and are eating well, then they are going along quite all right, and you have no cause to worry.

Birds in Durham (Aves).—Your letter can be answered in one sentence, viz., the "law" cannot interfere with you if you do not have in your possession birds caught during the close time (which for your district, Durham, is, according to Trower's "Guide," from March 1st to August 1st). You can buy from any district birds which have been legally taken (i.e., in the open season). We should advise you to study the bye-laws operating over Co. Durham; you can get copies of these at a trifling cost from Messrs. Eyre and Spottiswoode, printers, East Harding Street, London, E.C. If any species are protected in Durham all the year round they will be named in the said bye-laws.

First Feather and Other Matters (Weekly Subscriber).—A young Canary at six weeks of age is held by most old fanciers to be "just ripe" for first feather shows. When breaking into moult they are handicapped through looking rough and untidy. Young birds are most certainly not expected to show the "standard length" and other "standard points" in the same way as adult birds. It is necessary to colour-feed Green Canaries; also to wash them for show as occasion requires. Greens get their plumage soiled, the same as other Canaries, and a clean bird is always tighter and more silky-looking in plumage.

A Ramble Around Kirkham Abbey.

SIR,—Being in Yorkshire (Kirkham Abbey), I have been having a good look round in the little time I have had to spare, and readers of CAGE BIRDS may be interested to hear of my luck during a ramble I took on June 24. My first find was a Hedge Sparrow's nest with three eggs. Next a Greenie's, with young just coming out of shell; next another Greenie's, ready for eggs—this before breakfast. After breakfast the first thing that drew my attention was a Goldie with three young, and I watched these feed, and went to examine the spot where they were feeding. Here I found nothing but white clover seeds, chickweed, and grass seeds. Returning from the field I noticed a brown Linnet with four young. These I watched in the same field, but I did not go to see what they were feeding from, so I put it down that it would be the same seeds. I also noticed in another field a very young Starling perched on a sheep's back. I suppose this had gained the instinct very early for searching for food from the wool of the sheep, as at this time of the year there are maggots in the wool of sheep caused by flies; and I am told that if these animals do not receive good attention, these maggots will increase to such an extent as to cause much injury that will cause death. My next find was a Yellowhammer's or Bunting's nest, with three eggs of extraordinary size; and the markings were beautiful, the long black streaks running irregularly all over the eggs. I next tried a lot of gorse for some Linnets, but failed to locate one. I then journeyed to a piece of waste land covered with blackthorn, whitethorn, brambles, elder, and ferns. This I thought would be sure to "land" me on something good, especially as I had spotted a pair of Bullfinches here. As I sat under a tree watching if I could see any feeding young, a beautiful pair of Bramblefinches came and perched on the blackthorns, and I had a good look at them; but after exploring all the undergrowth, brambles, etc., sometimes up to my shoulders in thorns, fern, etc. I never found a nest. Next I came across an old oak-tree which I discovered was hollow. I thought I might find a Woodpecker, Jackdaw, or something of the kind; but "no go." Returning to dinner I met a fancier and Hybrid breeder, with whom I have had many a chat about birds since I have been here; and I have also got some useful information from him about wild birds. He knew there was a Goldie's nest in a garden close to where I am lodging, and as luck would have it the owner of this garden happened to look over the garden wall. My friend asked for permission to go and look for Goldie's nest, which was readily given. We climbed a high wall and were soon busily engaged searching a large pear tree; but still no luck. Then a search was made of all plum trees, apple trees, etc.; and still no luck. We next tried a very high thorn hedge, and after a very close examination we discovered it nearly at the top. Up I went after a lot of struggling. It was a stiff job and a rough one, but at last I was there only to discover that the young had left. My friend and I were of opinion that the three young I had seen previously were out of this nest. Now to dinner, half hour late. My next move was for a stroll with my friend, his friend, and a gamekeeper with whom he is very friendly. Our first find was a young Partridge just out of the shell. We had a view of the keeper's young Pheasants and saw him feed them. While watching them I saw a Jay only a few yards distant. We made for a rough piece of ground covered with gorse, and on our way we saw the Redstart, his lady love and their three young, of which we had full view. I got quite close to one, and saw that the markings on the breast make them similar to the young of the Robin; but I noticed it was growing a red tail. Now to the gorse, where we hunted over and over again; but not a feather or egg did we discover. But no wonder, as I noticed the keeper giving a likely looking birdnester of about 12 years of age some advice to clear off, and telling him what would be the consequences if he caught him there again. But if we did not discover any Linnets we found a cage hid away in the gorse; it looked as though somebody had had some young Linnets in it, as I noticed a good supply of seeds in the bottom. Now search was made in all hedges which surrounded several fields, but with no luck. I found Greenies ready for eggs; also Chaffinches. Several more fields were "overhauled"; we found another Greenie's nest ready to receive eggs. Now on to another small wood. Here we saw the Bearded Tit, Longtailed Tit, Woodpigeon, Greenfinches, etc. More fields and hedges were searched, but we saw nothing in "our line" of any account. After tea on a stroll in another direction with a fellow workmate, I saw a Magpie. We also found a Whitethroat's nest with five young about 10 days old, a Greenie's with four young about a week old, and a Whinchat's with six young almost ready to fly. This gave us some trouble to find as the old bird was very shy, but after keeping well out of sight but still with our eyes fixed on her, we saw her go to feed and, of course, she showed us the spot where they were, which was on the ground among the grass by the side of the main road to York. Another Greenie's nest we found, but we did not get up to it, and the Chaffinch's nest we found with one egg. Now to supper, after having had a good full day.

Since I have been in the hobby I have derived more benefit from reading CAGE BIRDS, writes Mr. C. Smith (Derby), than by any other means. It is just the right paper for novices as well as for others. I must also thank you for the good and beautiful plates issued from time to time.

Mule Breeding from American Birds.

SIR,—I promised in my letter to CAGE BIRDS (which appeared in June 11th issue), to let Mr. Burrows, of California, U.S.A., and your other readers know if I had any results from the Californian Linnet or Purple Finch (which is its proper name), that I mentioned I was turning into a large outside aviary along with Canary hens and other British birds that were specially put up for hybrid breeding at the time of my writing. By referring to my letter you will see that I told you the Purple Finch had paired up with a Canary hen. I paid a visit on June 10th to see how things were going on. The result then was five fine, strong mules. Four of them are all dark, and one is slightly variegated. They are from two different hens, and from four different nests, two being hatched and reared in first nest, the other three being odd birds. Both Canary hens were nesting again while I was there. We hope to be more successful this round, and get two good full nests hatched and reared. The Purple Finch is certainly in grand trim singing to the hens and driving them around. He will not let any other birds go near either the hens or nests. I may also mention that a nest of five Chaffinch and Bramblefinch Hybrids were successfully hatched in this same aviary on June 10th, but I am sorry to say five of them died the following day, the other one being still alive on the Sunday following; but I only had very poor hopes of its living, as the eggs had been given to a Canary hen to hatch and rear. Had the eggs been left with the Bramblefinch hen I have no doubt they would have been successfully reared. However, the same pair are nesting again, so I gave instructions to leave them alone this time, and chance them to rear their own. There was also another pair (a Chaffinch cock and a Bramblefinch hen) that had gone to nest. They had laid their first egg on the day of my visit, so I gave the same advice, viz., that they should leave them alone and chance the birds to rear their own young, as there is every opportunity of getting all the insect life they will want to successfully rear such hybrids, being out in the country as they are, and well surrounded by large woods. There is also an abundance of ants' eggs, etc., to be got, so I hope we will have better results with this round. There are five hen bullies in this same aviary, and although there are cock Linnets, Goldfinches, Twites and Redpolls there also, the hens have all paired up with Greenfinch cocks. But there are no young yet, although there have been several nests of eggs and several fertile eggs, which all failed to hatch out, however, under Canary hens. Some of the Bullie hens are on eggs again, and the others nesting; so we hope for better results this round. I may also mention that in this same aviary a cock Yellowhammer has paired up with a Canary hen, and is going through every process likely to lead one to think that this cross may be possible. Although they have had two nests of eggs, all are clear. I may say they went through similar processes last year, but no fertile eggs were got, and the Yellowhammer is in grand condition, driving the hen around, and will not let any other bird go near the hen or nest. My brother also has a few pairs up for hybrid breeding inside his bird room in cages. At the time of my visit he had a Bullie hen (paired to a cock Redpoll) that he was expecting to lay the next day, as she looked like doing so. He also had a cock Greenfinch and a hen Redpoll up, but she has just laid odd eggs; so all are clear. He has, too, several other pairs together, but with no result as yet, except a few Canary mules from Goldfinches and Linnets. By what I hear, there is not much doing among mule and hybrid breeders in Cumberland so far, but some are doing fairly well with Canary breeding.

Proposed New Cage Bird Society for Purley and District.

SIR,—I should be glad if you could grant space in your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, for this appeal to fanciers hereabouts. This neighbourhood has developed into a populous residential district, and ought to be able to boast a good cage bird Society to cater for the needs of fanciers here. I know several good fanciers who wish to join, but there must be many bird-lovers near whom I have not had the pleasure of meeting. If all those desirous of becoming members (ladies included, of course) will please send me their names and addresses, and get others to do likewise promptly, we might get the thing going.

A Cage Bird Society for Whitletts and District.

SIR.—There was a public meeting called here in Whitletts (Ayrshire), on July 7th, at 7 p.m., for the purpose of arranging for an annual exhibition of cage birds, etc. A good number of fanciers attended, and after some exchange of opinions it was decided to hold a show, in or about December. The Society is to be called the Whitletts and District Cage Birds Society. Member's fee was fixed at 2s., and boys under 16 years of age, half price. Mr. M. Doolan was appointed show secretary, and Mr. W. Blaikie, treasurer. It was also decided to leave the appointing of a president and other office bearers till next meeting, which will be held in the Hall, Whitletts, on July 25th, at 7.30 p.m. Now as we are in the very centre of the Fancy in Ayrshire, and a small mining village, the fanciers of which are endeavouring to foster the keeping of cage birds, etc., I hope all fanciers will rally round and give us their support. We will do our best to make it a success. Now, fanciers in Ayr, wake up and attend our next meeting, as we will be depending on our main support from our neighbours in and around Ayr.

Proposed New Open Cage Bird Association for Glasgow.

SIR,—In regard to a letter which appeared in CAGE BIRDS issue, June 4th, 1910, over the signature of Mr. R. Bald, Sec. of the Bathgate and Dis. C.B.S., on the date of our show clashing with that of Bathgate, I may say I was instructed by the members of my club to write to Mr. Bald, and ask him to forward me the date his club had fixed on, as my club were quite willing to fix some other date. Up to the present Mr. Bald has not had the courtesy to reply. However, the members have decided to alter the date of the show to the following Saturday, viz., January 20 and 21, 1911, as no other show is fixed for that date.

Thrushes that Will Not Gape.

SIR,—The young Thrushes had arrived at an age when they ought to have begun to feed themselves. Had they been tempted with a few worms they would no doubt have begun to pick up, as it is the nature of all soft-billed birds to pick at anything they see moving. I find earth-worms an excellent thing to tempt birds with when mixed with the ordinary meal.

F. PARRINGTON.

SIR,—I have reared a lot of young Thrushes. I take them when they are from seven to ten days old, and give them snails for the first three weeks, and after that I gradually bring them on to Capern's new food, giving half snails and half food, till they can feed themselves with snails. Then I put a stone in the cage, and they break the snails on it. I have had good results from this method of feeding.

Kindness of a Hen Canary.

SIR,—Being a constant reader of your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, and reading week by week most interesting items, I should like to tell my fellow readers of a case of what I consider a great act of motherly kindness on the part of a hen Canary. Some days ago I found a Goldfinch's nest in our orchard. The bottom had given way, and four out of the five young birds had fallen to the ground. All four were dead. I went up the tree and found the other young bird hanging in the nest cold and almost dead. I brought it down, breathed on it, and then put it in a nest of four young Canaries. The hen bird was bringing them up by herself. The hen went at once to the nest, looked at the new-comer, and then started to feed it; and to-day it is well and growing fine. The hen is feeding and bringing all five birds up well. I think this well worth note, as to what our pets will do in the way of kindness.

FRED FIDO.

A Reader's First Attempt at Hybrid Breeding.

SIR,—The following is my experience at Hybrid breeding, in fact, my first attempt at breeding birds at all, and I think it may be of interest to the numerous readers of CAGE BIRDS: Having through some friends obtained some Canaries last year, I thought I would try my hand at breeding, and having a hand-reared hen Bullie, I thought I would try Hybrid breeding at the same time. I bought a cock Goldie in November last, and put them in a double breeder, placing a wire slide in the middle, so that they could get accustomed to one another. I let them remain until January, when I thought they seemed to be on very friendly terms. I then withdrew the slide, and let them run together, and as there was no serious fighting, I let them remain so. I gave them (besides their ordinary seed, which was Canary), hemp, inga, gold of pleasure, German rape, and egg food, and green food in small quantities at first, consisting of lettuce, chickweed, dandelion, gradually increasing it, until they were having as much as they could possibly eat. About the end of April I put them in a Blackbird's nest, and gave them some roots, hay, etc. These the Bullie at once started carrying about for lining the nest; but it was not until the 21st of May that she laid her first egg, and then she laid for five days in succession. The eggs I then put under a hen Canary, and she sat well for five days. When one evening I happened to go into the room, I found my Canary off the nest dead. I had not another hen sitting at the time, and was at my wits' end to know what to do. So I took the eggs to a friend's (who keeps Canaries), who put them under one of her hens for me, but I had to take them away again in two days later, as her bird was due to hatch. I now took the eggs to my home, five miles away, as my father had a few Canaries, and I put them under one of his hens, and she sat the rest of the time. Three of the eggs were good; one I broke, one hatched, and the other had a dead bird in the shell. The bird that was hatched the hen fed for two days, and then refused to feed any more. I gave it to another hen, but with the same result. I tried no less than five hens, and not one would feed, but they all sat on it, so I had to hand feed it, which I did for a fortnight; then it died. So ended nest No. 1. The second nest of eggs I had were four in number; these the Bullie started to lay on June 2nd. I placed these under a Canary, but they all proved to be clear. The third nest contained five eggs. The first was laid on June 18th. These also I placed under a Canary, and she sat for twelve days; but on going into the room on the morning of the thirteenth day I found her off the nest, and the eggs cold; but rather than throw the eggs away I found a Linnet's nest, and put them in, taking her eggs away; and on looking the other day I found two eggs hatched, two clear, and one containing a dead youngster. The Linnet, up to the present, is feeding well. The Bullie has now laid again five eggs, this making her fourth nest. These I have also placed under a Linnet, and must now wait for results from these. I will let you know later what luck I have from them. In conclusion, I must thank you for the many useful hints I have obtained from CAGE BIRDS.

A Recipe for a Washable Distemper.

SIR,—I did a rare "grin" when I read Mr. A. Barnes' analysis of my washable distemper recipe. If Mr. Barnes hasn't got the bump of "self opiniation" well developed, I'm done. As his intelligence is so extremely well developed, it would seem superfluous for him to ask if the distemper acts on the birds or the cage; I thought readers would understand my meaning, viz., if they tried it would they let me know if it would stand washing. I frankly stated I had not tried it myself, and if anyone gave it a trial and it did not stand washing, it would not land them in the bankruptcy court, for it would only cost a few pence to try. Mr. Barnes further accuses me of holding the intelligence of readers in light esteem by telling them where the waterglass was to be obtained; but plenty would not know where to obtain it, no doubt. Further, I can respect any fancier worthy of respect, and if this intelligent Mr. Barnes had given a recipe to beat the one I sent, he would have done more good than merely writing a lot of empty bounce.

A Problem for Canary Breeders

SIR.—In reply to Mr. Clarke, re the above, I should certainly do away with the hen if she were suffering from, or had been bred from parents ailing with, tuberculosis. It stands to reason that what is bred in the bone comes out in the flesh, and that disease will travel from one bird to another. However, if Mr. Clarke does not care to do so, I can only advise him to try the following treatment: Firstly, procure a small bottle of peroxide of hydrogen; pour a tablespoonful in a saucer, catch the bird and place feet in liquid; keep it there until it stops foaming (froth). Then take the bird, wipe its feet and have ready a small bottle of lotion, viz.: one part collodion, one part salicylic acid, and paint the feet with this lotion, using a small camel brush for the purpose. Give three coats, and see that each is perfectly dry before painting again. In a day or two after place a very small piece of soda (common washing) and pour a little boiling water over; and as soon as the soda water gets cool, place the bird's feet into the liquid for a few minutes. Wipe, and then repeat the treatment. You will find in a week's time that the bird will be completely cured. If, however, it still suppurates, repeat the process again. The peroxide will clear all the matter, leaving it quite healthy. I had a bird somewhat similar, but the ailment was caused through a splinter off a perch getting into the foot; it raised a swelling the size of a pea. I removed the splinter and gave the bird the above named treatment. The result was that the bird recovered. It has since bred me several good youngsters this year. Another case I had brought to me by a friend, is that his bird had one beak shorter than the other. On examination, I put it down to one of the parents pecking a piece off the bird while it was in the nest. Looking at the bird squarely in the face it appeared to have a small hole in the centre. That is it had no points on the beak. However, I shortened the lower mandible and shaped the upper one. Then I cut along the sides to ensure correct articulation. At the present time the bird looks well and cracks seed alright. The beak, of course, is considerably shorter, but nevertheless the bird does not look any the worse for it, as it is a promising yellow. I am greatly interested in it and am looking forward to seeing it on the show benches. My friend is highly delighted at the treatment, but I confess it has always been my hobby to cure birds suffering from different complaints. I am always pleased to answer any fancier's letter relating to anything surgical.

More Mules from Mules.

SIR,—Being a constant reader of your paper CAGE BIRDS, I thought that probably the following would be of interest to your readers. In the season 1909 I bred two Goldfinch-Canary mules (one cock one hen), and this season I paired these two with a hen Canary and cock Canary. I am pleased to say that from the hen mule and cock Canary I had a nest of three eggs. Out of these I have had one third hatched—on July 12th—which is still alive. My good fortune, I believe, is a rarity. I shall be pleased to show the bird to any reader who might wish to see same. I might add that I have two eggs at present from the cock mule and hen Canary, and am hoping for another youngster.

FRED MALLETT.

Horse and Groom,
High Street, Plumstead, London, S.E.

SIR,—Having read in CAGE BIRDS about Mr. Murray's success in breeding from Mules, I may say that I have at the present time a Linnet Mule hen paired to a Norwich cock. She reared three young ones last year, and has reared five this year. She is now sitting on 4 eggs. If anyone would like to see the birds, they can call at my address. I shall be only too glad to show them.

[It seems an odd circumstance that so many instances of Mules having bred should be recorded in this one season, seeing that for so many many years their power to do so has been denied. We hope that the cases recently recorded will be investigated by some of the "old hands," and that they will give readers the benefit of their opinions upon them.—EDITOR.]

A New Society for Chopwell and District.

SIR,—It is hard lines for a few of us members to have to do the local business and then for others not to be satisfied. I think it would be more pleasant if the members would turn up a lot better and attend our monthly meetings and be as members should be, on both sides, both in the Derwent Valley Society and the Chopwell Society, seeing there are members in both clubs. Now, members, turn up for the meeting which (I think) will be held this Saturday, July 23rd, and see if we cannot find judges to suit, and not as "True Fancier" says, "One man to rule the Society," which I say is wrong. Members should give their opinion at the meeting, the right place for it, and then we will know what to do. About the prize money, we paid all full prize money where it was due in the open classes, and 40 per cent. in the members' classes, which I think was very fair. It was our aim to pay all full prize money. We tried our best on two occasions, and we failed. It was decided at two meetings, by over three-fourths of the members present, that the small amount go to the Society's funds. So, boys, turn up and let us have your opinions in the clubroom and not in the street and other places. Then we might make better of the members' prize money and classes, and the judges for the coming open show on October 29th.

The Destructiveness of the Raven.

SIR,—In the "Western Morning News" of the last few days a correspondence has been going on anent the shooting, etc., of rare birds, and the Raven was one of those mentioned. I thought that the enclosed letter (written by Cornishman) might interest your readers; at anyrate it gives the other side of the question. It reads:—"In a recent issue I noticed a letter re young Ravens having been shot, and to-day a letter from Miss Gardiner, secretary of the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds. I do not know myself where the birds were shot, but I should say that whoever shot them was quite justified in doing so. The Raven is a bird whose food has been chiefly carrion, but since the introduction of the Act that all dead carcasses must be buried the Raven has had great difficulty in finding food, and has become an egg-sucker, and when they have young do not hesitate to attack a live animal if it is at a disadvantage in any way. Two years ago I found a sheep on its back with two Ravens pecking at its head, the poor creature vainly trying to protect itself. On my getting to it I found its eyes pecked horribly and damaged beyond repair, and at once put the sheep out of misery. Only a fortnight ago I found another sheep on its back with two Ravens on it. On reaching the ewe I found her alive, with a hole pecked in her stomach and the entrails partly drawn out, a most disgusting sight. Last year I know where a double were born, and the owner returning a few hours afterwards he saw two Ravens fly away, and on going to the lambs found that they had had all their eyes pecked out, the ewe being unable to protect them. As to Ravens being scarce, I saw 40 pass quite close to me not such a very long time ago. Until two years ago I was a great believer in preserving Ravens, but since finding what I have stated above every Raven that comes within range of my gun dies; and they have not been a few. Were a man to scratch out his fellow-man's eyes when he had his hands tied behind his back would he be protected? No. Why should a bird peck out a poor sheep's eye and be protected; let alone the loss of the sheep to the owner? Ignorance is bliss."

The Lining of Nest Pans.

suitable size saucer, or any round article. Then cut as shown in Fig. 2. The lining can easily be stuck by means of paste or gum in any ordinary nestpan. Odd pieces wasted in the cutting make a most suitable nesting material. One yard of felt will line about three dozen nests.

A. E. WINKUP.

"Jenny," the Pet of the Home.

SIR,—Jenny was a hen Canary, the first bird that I ever had of my very own. Proud indeed was I when I was the possessor of bird and cage, a jar of sand, a tin of canary seed, another of rape, and a few hempseeds in a screw of paper. A bath was also provided for her, and I felt at the time I had nothing left to wish for in the world. I was extremely fond of Jenny, and thought her lovely. But now that I know better what a hen Canary ought to look like I am sure that beauty was not her strongest point. She was very chubby in shape, her feathers were a pale buff, with a ring round her neck of very light grey, looking almost like dirty white; but it must have been the natural colour, and no lack of cleanliness, as she thoroughly enjoyed her tub. Jenny made herself at home at once, and in a very short time was as tame as a bird could be. There were very few days that she did not have a fly about the room. If needlework was about on the table, with reels of cotton or silk, she would amuse herself with pulling at the loose ends, getting a scare sometimes when the reel ran after her. She would also draw the pins out of the pincushion. Seeing how pleased she was with a bit of cotton, I hung up a small kitten-bell in her cage, with a piece of cotton for bell-rope, and this was tinkling good part of the day. She was particularly fond of my father, who was very bald, and when let out of her cage, if he was in the room, nearly always made straight for his head; it was great fun to see her slipping about trying to keep her balance. Often he paid her no attention, but folded and read his paper as usual, Jenny not minding this in the least. I would constantly carry her on my head, or shoulder, or finger upstairs (doors and windows being open), and she would never leave me till we were safe downstairs again. Once we had a small niece staying with us, a child of about five years old. In the morning before breakfast it was always, "Auntie, may I let out Jenny and give her some hempseed?" And I would answer, "Yes, if you are very careful." When I came downstairs, although the maid had been bustling about laying the table, Jenny was calm and self-possessed as usual, and both child and bird inteneely happy. The pinafore was carefully held up by both little hands, and inside sat Jenny, contentedly munching away at some hempseeds that had been given her.

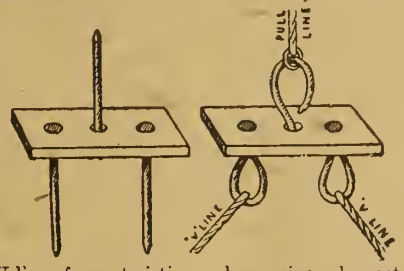
The Danger to the British Bird Fancy.

SIR,—If the actions of the National British Bird and Mule Club were half as "amusing" as the antics of Mr. MacPartling, the Fancy would indeed have good cause for laughter. Really, I think his experiences with the C.B.U. and with his "Mules" must have turned his brain. He always struck me as a bit of a fanatic—I have listened to his torrents of words at a Crystal Palace meeting of the C.B.U.—and now he seems to consider himself a "martyr," and lashes his "enemies" with what is nothing but a lot of high-falutting nonsense. What a splendid "sport" he is (I don't think). Because his British birds failed to impress their likeness upon his "Mules," his charitable nature causes him to turn and try to rend the whole British Bird Fancy. British birds are now a luxury (according to Mr. MacP.) and a nuisance to some! Therefore without any thought for his poorer brothers in the Fancy he would tax them, and he is not above playing a part akin to that of the "copper's nark" (what a lovely occupation!) by informing the Chancellor of the Exchequer of what a great (?) source of revenue he is overlooking—in other words, he would help to crush the British bird man. Very elevating, indeed (to use his own phrase). Mr. MacPartling does not even trouble to base his letters on the truth. The N.B.B. and M.C. never tried to "crush any child in the cradle," nor have they ever "turned their countenance from the C.B.U."; many of its members are also affiliated members of the C.B.U. As for being "men interested in cramming them (the birds) with cayenne pepper and painting their pretty plumage," such hysterical bosh is unworthy of any sane individual. Simmer down, Mr. MacPartling, and go in for white mice!

DISGUSTED.

An Easily-made Clap-net Swivel

SIR,—I enclose a sketch of a very simple swivel which any person can make. Get a small piece of iron 1 inch in length, ⅛ inch thick, and drill three holes in same—one in the centre and one near each end. The holes should be drilled large enough to admit a wire nail. When the nails are passed through the holes turn a hook on each of them as shown in sketch. This prevents the



V-line from twisting when using clap-nets. I have used pull lines without this swivel and find them a great inconvenience, as when the line is left stretched on the ground it will twist and snarl; and it is liable to break after a short time. I have been using clap-nets for the past ten years, and find the pull line useless without this swivel.

Can the Yellowhammer be Used for Hybrid Breeding?

SIR,—The Yellowhammer, a name it is best known by all over England, is one of our commonest British birds, and at the same time one of the prettiest, for a well-fed and moulted specimen makes a very attractive show bird. It is thought a lot of by most British bird enthusiasts, as most of them, even when wild caught, readily take to cage life, and soon get quite tame, if handled properly. From my own experience of this bird, after many years, I have found some quite untameable, also very spiteful with other birds either in a large cage or aviary, and the sooner they have been given their liberty the better for yourself and the other birds. The object of this letter is, "Will they breed in confinement with any other species?" They live on a great many kinds of insects when at large, but when caged they quite readily take to most kinds of seeds. Canary seed in particular they are most fond of, and could be kept for years on this seed alone, even without any insects of any kind, although it is best to give them some. From my own experience of this bird, now some 20 years or more, I have tried the cock bird year after year to try and get it to cross with a hen Canary, but after the various dodges I have used the results have been nil, neither have I had a fertile egg. It is quite true that I have never tried them in an aviary, but I have in large cages, both out of doors and indoors; neither have I ever seen them attempt to feed the hen Canaries. They have been quite sociable with them, also fussy, but nothing more has come of it. I have seen it stated on several occasions that someone has had a cross between this bird and the Canary. I believe one was shown once, but it apparently did not "take on" or suit the "experts," or else we should have heard more of it. In years gone by two birds were brought to me on different occasions and by different people, saying they were a cross between a Yellowhammer cock and green Canary, but I could not trace any Yellowhammer in it. Now I don't want by this letter to prevent anyone having a try at this cross; on the other hand, I want them to give it a good trial; not only novices, who generally get the best luck, particularly so the lady fanciers, but I want some of our old hands to give it a trial, not only with the Canary but other British birds they may have by them. The hen Yellowhammer I don't believe has nested in a cage or aviary as far as my memory serves me, but at the same time she might be tried in an outdoor aviary with several birds, such as Canary, etc. She would have plenty of room there, and it would be more like natural. I don't think for one moment she will nest in a cage, but one can never put down any hard or fast rule respecting birds, as it would be small for it. Either of these birds might also be tried with the other Buntings, the Corn for preference. This is a fine large bird, and does well in captivity. I have never made any attempts to pair this birds up with any species although I have had several of them for years. One cock I had over 8 years before it died. I hope this letter may be the means of bringing some other items out, which would be most interesting to British Bird Fanciers.

NIMROD.

A Yorkshire Union Problem.

SIR,—The problem of sustaining interest in competition right up to the last show was talked over at the end of last season by a few members of the Y.C.C. of Scotland. A member, with perhaps a very limited income, feels he has dropped out of the running for some prize for which he was competing, and so ceases to enter his birds for the remaining shows. These late shows suffer; hard-worked secretaries grumble; the disappointed exhibitors are disheartened, and even the winner has not the satisfaction he would otherwise have enjoyed. Now, as a suggested remedy so far as the Y.C.C. of Scotland is concerned, I propose giving a gold medal for most points gained by a novice for birds nominated at three shows out of the six under the club's patronage. At the beginning of the season I shall nominate three shows. The names (known only to myself), will be enclosed in a sealed envelope and handed to the club secretary. At the end of the season, in the presence of the committee, the seal will be broken and the Secretary will then be able to announce for the first time the name of the winner. In this way we hope to keep up the interest and encourage that class of member—the novice—who contributes so largely to the success of the Fancy. During a recent run round the North of England I mentioned my idea to some of the "Big Bugs," and I learn from Mr. Fred Hammond's letter that the Yorkshire Union may adopt some such similar scheme. We in Glasgow feel flattered that the "great guns" of Bradford are not above learning something from "puir auld Scotland." In a few years we may see Messrs. Bailey, Shackleton, Ogden, et sic omnia, running down to Glesca' to pick up a few really good Yorkshires!! Perhaps! By which token (and to be serious) I wonder how long it will take club committees and secretaries in Scotland to discover the fact that the Yorkshire Canary has come to stay, and the sooner they provide classes for the bird of position, the sooner will they be adding to the success of their shows.

COLOUR-FEEDING FOR EXHIBITION.

(A Paper read before the Ashington C.B.S. by Mr. Jas. Miles.

At the meeting held on July 16, at Mr. Rowley's (Mr. Thompson in the chair), Mr. Jos. Miles read a paper on colour-feeding, of which the following is the gist. He did not, he said, pose as a professional, but had come forward on the invitation of the members to give them a short paper, which was really more for the novices than for the older fanciers, some of whom have had more experience and possessed more ability in the Fancy than he himself

Necessity for Breeding for Colour.

Everyone knows the importance of colour in the plumage of Canaries, whether for exhibition or for other purposes, and in giving you a paper on colour feeding, I wish first to point out what is of the utmost importance, so far as the production of colour is concerned. You must breed for colour. See to it when pairing your stock that you have some colour blood in their veins. Green blood is the secret of colour. No one can feed birds to the necessary standard for exhibition unless the birds are bred from pairs mated to produce colour. I have tried to feed common birds with but very poor results. It is folly to expect that by giving colour food you will get the necessary depth of colour.

My foregoing remarks relate to a matter of more importance than the mere feeding of the birds with prepared colour food. It is unnecessary for me to give a resume of where and how the best colour feeds are produced, as these particulars have been given often in the Fancy Press; and I do not presume to be an authority on their production. Suffice it to say, that my advice to all is to buy the best colour-food on the market.

Having bought my colour feed, I mix about four ounces of hot Natal with four pounds of sweet pepper. I think this mixture is quite strong enough, and I do not advocate the use of a large proportion of hot feed, as I believe it to be injurious to the health of one's birds.

I usually start to get my young birds on to colour feed at the beginning of July. When doing so I use equal parts of hard-boiled egg and stale bread-crumbs, and add a little castor sugar and just sufficient feed to slightly colour it at first, gradually adding more until the required depth of colour is obtained. I then add more bread until I get a proportion of two parts bread-crumbs to one of egg.

Standard of Egg and Colour Feed.

The following recipe is the standard of egg and colour-food which I have successfully used and will continue to use. It contains these five items; 1, one hard-boiled fresh egg; 2, twice its weight of stale bread-crumbs; 3, three large teaspoonfuls of colour feed; 4, two teaspoonfuls of castor sugar; 5, one teaspoonful of saffron and rum from two-pennydorth of the former, and one gill of rum.

You will find if this recipe is followed that a food is produced that is neither too dry nor too moist, and on the above amount I have fed from forty to fifty birds. After the first month I use the saffron and rum only on alternate days, gradually diminishing it as the birds get through their moult. Also, I gradually diminish the strength and quantity of the colour-food. It is unnecessary when the birds are finished off, but it is essential that they should be gradually weaned from it, as any sudden change of feeding, especially from soft to hard food, has a disastrous result.

During the process of moulting and colour-feeding keep the birds well supplied with fine gravel. I believe the birds are best in large flights, and I use clean sawdust for the bottoms, supplying the grit in a saucer or other convenient receptacle. By this method the birds' feet are always clean. Do not crowd too many birds in a small space. This, I think, is partly the cause of feather plucking.

It is also important to supply fresh daily (at mid-day, if possible) a good bath—clean rain water being preferable to any other. I think rain water gives the nice bloom or sheen we so much appreciate.

Personal Methods.

I always prepare my colour food at night, and feed the birds just before retiring to bed, at the same time withdrawing all seed until noon the next day. I do not use green food of any kind; neither do I advocate the use of nasturtium or marigold flowers. My experience in their use is that they produce a looseness in the bowels; they also seem to spoil the birds' appetites for colour food. One has also a difficulty in being always able to get a supply in the proper condition, and it is better for the birds to go without than to have supplied them some that are damp, or to have them irregularly. I also use a little linseed when the birds are finishing off.

For the last two years I have not used any iron preparation whatever, believing it to be of too binding a nature. As your birds are weaned from soft food to seed, the dry seed has a tendency to cause constipation. This should be guarded against, and for this reason I have refrained from the use of iron tonics. Although I do not claim to be an expert colour feeder, I think I have been able to produce colour of a fairly high standard. I have not had a long experience, but it is with pleasure that I have prepared this paper, and should anyone feel disposed to ask any questions, I shall be only too pleased to attempt an answer. I believe it is only by these means, and by practical experience, that one gains the most useful knowledge. I trust I have not bored you with my first attempt at writing a paper, and should I have interested you, or given you any information which will prove useful to the novice, or, perchance, to the professional, I will feel amply repaid for the time I have taken to prepare it.

An interesting discussion followed the reading of the paper, and the Chairman, the Secretary, and Messrs. Charlton, Wallace, Graham, Anderson, and Hancock took part in it. Mr. Thompson moved, and Mr. Charlton seconded, that the best thanks be given to Mr. Joseph Miles, for his very able and instructive paper.—JAS. MILES, Secretary.

Country Rambles

Highgate, Hampstead & Dis. C.B.S.

The society's ramble took place on July 16, when a large number of members journeyed to Epping Forest. On alighting at Chingford the party marched off under the leadership of the assistant secretary, Mr. J. Hyde. The weather was everything that could be desired, the country looking at its best. The "Owl" being out destination, where tea was to be served, we started off to the right of the lake, and then bore round to the left after leaving the lake. The first bird to be seen was a beautiful specimen of a Bullfinch, and several of the members naturally were on the alert, in the hope of finding Bully's home, but had to go on disappointed. A short distance further on we came upon the nest of a Thrush, from which the young had only just flown, leaving the complete shell from which one of the young had been hatched in the nest—a most peculiar thing considering the time it must have lain there, and the circumstances attending it. In the next hundred yards or so, we came across several empty nests, and naturally the usual comment was "too late in the year." But as time went on this idea proved to be wrong, as soon after this we came upon a spot that was teeming with bird life, and on every side calls were made to one another indicating that eggs or young had been found. On one side was a Marsh Tit's nest, and close to this was found the nest of the Lesser Whitethroat, the young having flown, but leaving a clear egg behind. This naturally was brought home as a memento of our ramble. In a tree not many yards from this was the prize of the day, and what proved to be the funniest event of the day, namely, a Jay's nest, no doubt with eggs or young, as the old bird was seen to come off. Several of the party were naturally eager to see inside the nest, but were doomed to disappointment time after time, as the branches were rotten and broke frequently, causing those on the ground great amusement; it was not till one of our members came sprawling amongst us that we decided to give in, holding our sides with laughter. As time was now passing, we decided to push on to the "Owl." On our way we found a nest of the Reed Warbler, with three nice-sized birds in, and at the same time some of our number turned a young rabbit out; this was another amusing item on our programme, when some dozen of our number surrounded poor bunny and then missed him. At last we reach the "Owl," where our host had prepared a sumptuous tea, to which ample justice was done. Both the secretary and assistant secretary made a few remarks on the ramble, saying how pleased they were to see so many present, and it was suggested that next year we should go further afield, and that members might pay in monthly towards the expense if they so wished. This will be discussed at the general meeting. As time was getting on we made tracks for the station. On the way several of our members found plenty of mud, much to the amusement of the rest. On the return journey several Thrushs' and Blackbirds' nests were found, and a great many Jays, Woodpigeons, and one Magpie were seen. On reaching the station we were doomed to disappointment by just missing the train, so with an hour and a quarter to wait, we adjourned to the "Crown," where light refreshments were partaken of, thus bringing to a close one of the society's most happy days. Will members please watch CAGE BIRDS for an August meeting of a social nature.—CHAS. W. LAW, hon. sec.

To Prevent Birds Escaping.
Sent by Mr. Alfred Sharpe, Islington.

I send you a sketch of what I think will be of use to my brother fanciers. It is of a door which I myself find very reliable for preventing birds from getting out. The door is swung by the wire passing through the end hole of the punch bar, while the other end of the bars are filed on the slant so as to catch the first long wire from the door; then get a piece of cage wire to the shape of C, and fix it on one of the wires above the door, so that it will drop down in front of the door; the long hole passes over A, which is a staple in B, the bottom panel of the cage; and then through A you apply D by means of the fastening. The birds cannot then open the door by any means. These doors I fix to all my cages, and find they are very secure and strong. Also they are a preventative of red mite. I think the sketch will explain itself.—A. SHARPE. (Will Mr. Sharpe kindly forward to us his full address?—EDITOR.)

CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet St., London, E.C.

CHELTENHAM C.B.S.

Second First Feather Show held on July 16th. The entries (35) were not so large as we should have liked. This was owing to the bad breeding season, many of our members not having reared a third of the birds they usually do. Norwich and Borders were the most numerous, and some very typical birds were shown. We regret that, owing to illness, Mr. Kilminster was unable to judge, but his place was ably filled by Mr. Hands.

Proctor 14; and Addy and Stell 15. The competition for the season specials was left as follows: Middleton Bros., 31 points; F. Judson, 27; J. Duckworth, 27; Addy and Stell, 26; S. Smith, 22; in the open: C. J. Mitchell, 23; C. Jeffery, 16; D. Jones, 10; W. Pickles, 10; H. Spencer 9 in the novice classes. Mr. F. Armstrong (Halifax) judged and gave every satisfaction. JOHANNESBURG (South Africa).

At the local show of livestock held on June 24 and 25 at Johanneshurg, there was a fine show of cage birds; indeed, the Canaries proved one of the finest sections of the exhibition, and a better show of them, it is said, has not been seen in South Africa. Mr. Cox judged, and his awards gave every satisfaction.

WATFORD AND DIS. C.B.S.

Young bird show, held in the Conservative Hall, July 16th. This is a capital room, with splendid light. The arrangements were perfect, under the guidance of Mr. W. Quantrell, the efficient and enthusiastic secretary. Able assistance was also rendered by the veteran, Mr. J. Goodall and others of the Committee. The quality was excellent throughout, especially in Norwich and Yorkshires, the latter predominating. There were a few neat Crests, and a smart Cinnamon or two. The cup fell to a spanking buff Norwich Plainhead, of beautiful feather, fine head, and type, shown by Messrs. Wright and Fox, reserve for cup being a very nice wing-marked Crest, shown by Miss Hewat, a very popular lady fancier, and an enthusiastic friend of the society. British birds made a fine show, and the competition between the Hon. Secretary and Mr. Goodall was well sustained. Mr. R. J. Watts sent a grand team of foreign birds, including his noted Whydah, a couple of truly magnificent Tanagers, and a charming and large Budgerigar. Mrs. Webb also sent a nice team of foreigners. Mr. Geo. Gardner judged, and got his task over in good time. Cards were up promptly, and the show proved a decided success. The society is progressing in a remarkable way, and members are congratulating themselves on having such a capital secretary as Mr. Quantrell at the helm.

ALWAYS USE OUR

DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the honesties of either buyers or sellers In all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insistedupon.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION. If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT. Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE. The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or, if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

Spen Valley C.B.S.

The first ramble, headed by our late secretary, Mr. R. Bennett, took place on July 17, when a large number of members journeyed to the Baildon district. We took train from Cleckheaton to Bradford; then car from the latter place to Saltaire, where we called at the Victoria Hotel to endeavour to pick up a few bird fanciers. Then we walked through Nab Wood to Cottingley Bridge, where the members were greatly interested in the number of Chaffinches and other birds which were to be seen; also several Seagulls were seen, and the river was at its best. From Cottingley we tramped on to Bingley, past the cricket ground, arriving at Brigg's tea rooms about 4.15 p.m., where the members did justice (without a doubt) to a most substantial tea. After tea we called at the "Ring of Bells" for light refreshments; then walked on to Baildon Old Market place, where the old stocks which are still left were very interesting. From Bingley, we made our way on foot to Eldwick, and some very pleasant things were seen on the way. Then we trudged over Baildon Moors, where a band was playing, and most of the members enjoyed the music. We then went past the reservoirs to Baildon Bridge, where we took car to Bradford, returning home to Cleckheaton per the 9.8 p.m. train. All the members enjoyed themselves extremely well. It was our first ramble, but we hope it will not be the last.—J. H. LEWIS, hon. sec.

East Ham and District F.S.

On July 10 a number of the members went for a ramble through possibly some of the most beautiful parts of Essex. Under the guidance of Mr. Packer, a keen supporter of the Fancy, the party took a short train ride to Grange Hill and thus reached rural surroundings quite early. They then proceeded on foot and traversed through Hainault Forest. The breeding season being advanced, many nests were found, but yielded neither eggs nor youngsters. However, the continuous singing of the birds was ample compensation, and the party soon forgot their disappointment. Many members were experts enough to distinguish the different varieties, except one which a member, in a joking spirit, said, must be a "Wolffle Tit," a bird the worthy chairman assures them he intends to put on the show bench this season. At one time the guide was missed, and then discovered trying to charm a young Robin which was hopping around him. Two members evinced a desire to own it, and gave chase, but no, Master Robin knew the forest too well, and won quite easily. After a call at the well-known "Bee Hive Inn" for a tonic, Colonel Lockwood's beautiful estate was passed, and then the party made a welcome discovery in an old disused garden. What a find!—a regular table d'hote for the birds, wild plants relished by them growing in abundance. Every man jack of us left that garden with a bundle of birdy tit-bits, plantain being "to the fore." The rendezvous, Oak Hill Farm, Theydon Bois, was reached about 4 o'clock, and there mine host provided a thorough good meal. The return journey was made by way of Chigwell, the party arriving home about 7.30, having walked a distance of over 15 miles. The weather, although not ideal, showed an improvement on that experienced lately. Good fellowship prevailed throughout, and thus ended the day, which was both healthgiving and instructive.—B. C. SMITH, assist. sec.

Eccles and District C.B.S.

Our first country ramble took place on July 16. Only about nine members turned up. Several members, including our enthusiastic president (Mr. G. Wilson), were unavoidably prevented by business reasons from attending; but we made the best of it and set off for a fairly long ramble. We took the route known locally as the Moss, where birds and wild seeds are to be found in abundance. Unfortunately the day was windy, which is a bad factor as regards birds, and fewer than usual of them were to be seen. It proved that our ramble was taken a bit late, as the nests were nearly all empty and the birds all recently flown; but with the aid of our veteran chairman (Mr. Dawson) we got to know a lot about the different wild seeds and plants. One member evidently received more than he bargained for; the company were amused for a few minutes watching him smell at a nettle, which came in contact with his nose. We next sat down on a brook side and did justice to the camera which our host at headquarters had kindly brought with him. We then journeyed on till we could break from the fields on to the main road at Orlam, where we put up for some welcome refreshment at the Nags Head. After this we journeyed homewards, all a bit tired with walking. We finished up at headquarters with our host and enthusiastic member, Mr. S. Sims. All agreed that we had had an enjoyable ramble, and we decided it should be an annual affair. A washing competition on August 3; entrance fee 6d., three prizes, one special. Judge, Mr. Wilson. All fanciers heartily welcome. A smoking concert on Monday, August 15, free to all fanciers. Any fancier wishing to join us the fee is 1s. entry fee, 4s. per annum.—H. W. JONES, hon. sec.

Border City (Carlisle) O.S.

The July ramble took place on July 24, but owing to the dull and threatening weather only the following members turned up: Messrs. G. Davidson, A. McDonald, W. Davidson, R. Thomlinson, F. Bell, R. Macartney, J. Robson, jun., and J. C. Bell. A start was made from Eden Bridge, and crossing the Scour we obtained a grand panoramic view of our ancient city. Through Edentown and Etterby we came to Kingmoor, but bird life was very scarce—only a Whitethroat's nest with two young and three eggs being found, and birds in flight were rarely seen, although our moth-hunting friend Mac kept spotting some of his old favourites. The wild rasps were not left to waste by those who found them either. Leaving the moor and crossing the main Glasgow road, we took to a by-lane, past the Harker station, and nests of the Blackbird, Thrush, and Chaffinch were found. The rain hereabouts came down heavily, and we had to shelter for a while. Continuing past Tuefoot Green, we saw several Linnets, Yellowhammers, Peewits, and Skylarks, while in an orchard the Greenfinches were in goodly numbers. Coming to Todhills, another shower overtook us, and thence almost till we reached Rockcliff, the rain stopped our enjoyment and search as we hurried through the wood. Crossing the River Eden by the Ferry, we walked along the bank until we came to Beaumont. The Gulls were flying over the river, and Wagtails, Waterhens, and Snipe were frequently seen. On arrival at Beaumont we sat down to a substantial tea, set to perfection by Mrs. Barnes; to which repast we did full justice, while the "Cinnamon" kept us alive with his jokes and satires. Setting off for home, we passed through Kirkadrews and Grinsdale, and caught the tram at Newtown, arriving in the city about nine o'clock, none the worse after the showery afternoon.—"JUST COME BACK."

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

At the City and Suburban A.C.B. Meeting.

On July 11 a draw of questions took place after the ordinary business had been disposed of, and the following is a selection, together with a brief report of the answers returned by various members. The first question was withheld for the chairman to answer, and was as follows:—"When society has reached your ideal, will every fancier have a birdroom, and also, will you apply for the position of superintendent of a bird shop, so that the members of the C. and S. may have first choice of the stock for nothing?" In the absence of Mr. Burn, our chairman, Mr. A. W. Curtis said he would preserve it for a future occasion.

Question: "Which do you consider the easiest variety for a beginner; and why?"—Answer by Mr. Marley: "The Norwich, because it is within the reach of every pocket, is easy to manage, and a free breeder. With it a beginner would meet with better success, and it was, he thought, the most popular variety at the present moment."

"Which in your opinion is the best green food?"—Mr. F. Ayres: "Watercress By its use he had had great success."

"Give your views in regard to hens deserting their eggs?"—Mr. W. Shepherd: "Have had no experience, having never had one desert."

"What is the difference between clear and addled eggs?"—Mr. Lathlieff: "This was quickly answered in accordance with his own breeding experience—no birds."

"What in your opinion is the reason for the embryo dying at different stages of incubation?"—Mr. V. Wynn: "Either the copulation is faulty or spermatozoa too weak; the non-turning of the eggs, or a sudden jarring noise, are also causes."

"State the advantages and disadvantages of flight cages."—Mr. A. W. Curtis: "All breeders are in need of flight cages, especially in winter, for the purpose of giving hens exercise; they are useful for saving labour; are quite suitable for moulting out in those specimens that are not show birds; are conducive to good health. Some disadvantages are that they have a tendency to create too much draught during the moult through birds flying about in them; are apt to lead to plucking; are liable to create more red mite. The advantages greatly overide the disadvantages."

"Is the top of the room, or the bottom, the better for moulting birds?"—Mr. A. W. Hart: "This depends upon each individual room; ventilation and aspect have to be studied; if a large room, then the middle of the wall is the best; there is always more draught on the surface, and at the top there is generally too much foul air; should consider from 5 to 7 feet above the floor the best. Sheeting down for the purposes of the moult created a bad draught, especially when a room was well ventilated."

"In which round do you consider the most good birds are produced?"—Mr. J. Lloyd: "From the experience of two breeding seasons I consider that the first round is as good as the second."

"In your opinion is it better to run birds in pairs, or one cock with two hens?"—Mr. E. C. Offord: "This all depends upon the cock; if he is very vigorous I would run him with two hens, but if not, then one."

"In your opinion which are the most difficult faults to deal with in a Norwich?"—Mr. A. W. Curtis: "A bad head; the type which runs to that of a Yorkshire; to get short wings and tail, and correct wing carriage."

"What is the use of yellow blood in breeding Crests?"—Mr. G. E. Weston: Comparing the yellows seen on the show-bench with the buffs, it would seem to be of little use, but he had visited rooms of noted breeders whose stock contained a large percentage of yellow blood. The difficulty, he understood, was in getting the right sort of yellows to pair into one's stock. In the Nottingham district they were very keen on yellows, and offered every year a guinea special for the best young yellow Crest at Nottingham Show."

"Do you think it is possible to breed a yellow from two buffs?"—Mr. J. Burton: "Yes, it is; had not experienced it himself; should not, he thought, do it with his Yorkshires."

"Describe an ideal Norwich?"—Mr. A. W. Curtis (for Mr. Clark): A large round head, short flights and tail, chubby body, correct carriage, fair size, and good colour, were all essential. If any one wanted to see a good modern type he should follow the show reports for a bird that won all the season under different judges. Then, if this bird was at the Palace, it should be looked up, for a bird that pleased a number of the best judges was sure to be near the ideal type.—V. WYNN, hon. sec.

CRESTED CANARY CLUB.

The result of voting by the committee of the Crested Canary Club as to which shows are to be supported during the forthcoming season is as follows:—Cambridge, 16 votes; Cheltenham 20, City of Birmingham 18, London C.B.A. 19, Manchester 18, Norwich 18, Nottingham 20, Great National (Palace) 17, and Plymouth 18. This completes the nine shows which it was decided (under Mr. Ley's scheme) should be the maximum for season 1910 and 1911. For the club show at which the silver challenge bowls will be offered for competition, this has been gained by the London C.B.A. by seven votes, Nottingham being a close runner-up with six votes. The Roberts Silver Challenge Cup will be offered at each of these shows, and I hope to announce eleven other societies at which it will be offered, in addition to those mentioned, next week.—J. S. CLARKE, Hon. Sec. and Treas.

YORKSHIRE C.B.S.

Meeting of Council, held at Douglas Hotel, July 20th. Owing to the inclemency of the weather, only a small number turned up. It was decided that the best thanks of the Council be tendered to Mr. W. Sheridan, for taking on the onerous task of judging the Young Bird Show; Mr. Sheridan replied, and said that it gave him much pleasure in doing anything for the society that would help them to make it a success. It was also proposed, seconded and carried that the best thanks be tendered to Mr. W. Hawkins (Cork) for inaugurating the Young Bird Show, and for his generous donation to the defraying of the expenses of same. The Council also expressed their satisfaction with regard to the new staging, which they had had specially designed, and which it is calculated will stage 800 birds. The treasurer also intimated that a balance up to the present (ticket money not being all in up to present meeting) of 30/- stood to the credit of the Young Bird Show.—D. CARROLL, Hon. Sec.

LONDON FEDERATION OF C.B.S.

Council meeting held July 21, at "The Feathers," Westminster. Present: Messrs. R. L. Crisp (in the chair), H. E. Tringham, J. Dewhurst, H. W. Tomsett, H. W. Cook, H. Smith, R. P. Harper, J. Wyatt, W. G. Sanders, J. Bray, J. Tyson, J. Turner, W. Penton, and the secretary, P. Adamthwaite. It was decided, after an informal discussion on the question of the retention of amateur classes at the shows, to let the matter stand over for another year. The balance sheet of the Federation's first year was adopted, on the motion of the Chairman.

The principal business was the report of the sub-committee appointed to consider a scheme for the giving of specials by the Federation at shows held by affiliated societies. The Chairman stated that the committee recommended, "That the Federation offer as a special a gold medal, of the value of one guinea (or any other value, to be decided in Council) for most points won at Federation shows with four nominated birds in one section (British birds and Hybrids to count as one section, and Canaries one section), each competitor to forward a nomination fee of one shilliug at the time of making entries to the secretary of the society, which fees are to be forwarded to the secretary of the Federation; there must be three competitors in each class at least for points to count." Mr. Penton said he thought the scheme a good one, and moved that it be adopted. Mr. Harper seconded, and the motion was carried. Mr. Bray asked if the Federation could not give two medals, one for each of the two sections? The Chairman said that personally he would like it if two medals could be given; but the committee thought that at first it would be the wisest course to provide only one, and see how the scheme worked. On the motion of Mr. Dewhurst, seconded by Mr. Tomsett, it was decided that where there are ten or more competitors in each section, two medals be given for competition. On the motion of Mr. Tringham, seconded by Mr. Tyson, it was also decided that before a medal can be competed for there must be at least 10 competitors. There was a considerable discussion on the question of points. Mr. Harper moved, and Mr. Bray seconded, that points be determined by the number of birds in the class. Mr. Tringham supported. The resolution was based on and embodied the following from one of the rules of the North London C.B.A.: "Points to count, 1st 7; 2nd 6; 3rd 5; res. 4; vhc 3; hc 2; c 1; providing there are seven exhibits in the class. If less than seven, points to count equal to the number of entries, i.e., n class of five entries, points would count: 1st 5; 2nd 4; 3rd 3; res. 2; vhc 1; and so regulated according to entries." The only difference is that "reserve" in each case becomes fourth prize. Mr. Harper's motion was carried by 8 votes to 4. It was further moved by Mr. Harper, seconded by Mr. Turner, and carried, "that in the event of a tie, the member taking most prize money with the four nominated birds to be declared the winner."

The Council discussed the best way of progressing with the matter of obtaining better railway facilities, and it was decided to proceed at once with the collection of signatures. The secretary having been asked to communicate the Council's decision to the Cage Bird and Yorkshire Unions, the meeting terminated.

SUNDERLAND C.B.A.

Usual meeting held on July 23rd, Mr. J. Farrar in the chair. After the business the gold watch to be presented to the winner of the "Watch Competition" was handed round for inspection, and the unanimous opinion of all present was that whoever wins this watch wins a beauty. I shall be glad if those societies who have not yet returned any sheets they may have filled up will do so without delay, in order that we can make preparation for the conclusion of the competition.—W. REID, Hon. Sec.

LANCASHIRE C.B.A.

July meeting held at Rochdale O.C. rooms, when our worthy president (Mr. J. Naden) took the chair. There was a large attendance. We decided to give our patronage to Rochdale O.C. and the Rochdale Good Intent C.B.S. It was decided to give six specials—three for champion and three for novices for most points during the season. We went through a great deal of business concerning the welfare of the Lancashire. Next meeting at Old Boar's Head, Manchester, on September 10th, when we hope there will be a big attendance.—C. WHITEHEAD, Hon. Sec.

DERWENT VALLEY C.B.S.

Meeting held at headquarters on July 23rd, Mr. G. Barkas in the chair. There was a moderate attendance of members. It was decided to write a few judges, asking for terms, and that we hold a meeting on August 6th to elect one to judge our open show. We have opened our draw prize list for open show, and we shall be pleased to see members at our next meeting; and will they kindly arrange in the meantime and let us know what they are able to give for same? The open show schedule was partly discussed, and we hope to get the same confirmed at our next meeting.—J. LINDSAY, Hon. Sec.

PLUMSTEAD & WOOLWICH C.B.S

A very successful meeting was held at headquarters, Trinity Schools, Woolwich, on July 16th, about fifty being present. The principal business done was the election of two new members, and the cancelling of the second young stock show, which was to have been held on July 30th, it being decided to hold a members' show on October 15th instead. This, of course, will not interfere with the open show to be held on January 12th, which Messrs. Robson and Silver will judge. The business over, Mr. C. A. House gave us his lecture on in-breeding, which was well received. A hearty vote of thanks to the lecturer, to which he suitably responded, brought a very pleasant evening to a close.—DIBLEY and MEADES, Hon. Joint Secs.

NORTHERN LIZARD CLUB.

Monthly meeting, held July 23rd, Mr. Reid presiding over a good attendance. Mr. Reid said it gave him great pleasure in announcing that our Vice-President (Mr. P. Hunter, of Bombay, India), had offered us a silver cup of native design for competition among the members. This was hailed with the greatest satisfaction, and a hearty vote of thanks was accorded our generous donor. A discussion ensued re competition for same, and it was finally decided that the cup be won twice in succession or three times in all, before becoming the absolute property of the winner. The club are to present the winner each year with a gold medal. On the question of cages, a long discussion ensued; but as some of the members had a considerable number of a certain kind on hand, it was proposed by Mr. Riseborough, and seconded by Mr. Haswell that the present cage be retained. The remaining time was taken up with considering plans for the furthering of the breed in the future, and a very pleasant meeting concluded with the usual vote of thanks to the chair.—G. DAVIDSON, Sec.

BRITISH ROLLER C.C.

Monthly meeting held July 12th, when Messrs. Lester and Williams brought birds to be listened to. The singing was thoroughly enjoyed. The meeting was not as large as was expected, several members being away on boliday, and others detained at business. Mr. F. A. Lester told us the names of the tours sung, and whether they were good, bad, or indifferent. One thing must be mentioned, which all Roller fanciers should take a note of; in the course of conversation, Mr. Lester, speaking of the team of birds he had brought, stated that he had been feeding his birds on a diet of best part canary seed, with just a little hemp, German rape, and linseed, and that the birds had been kept in open wire cages, and not darkened down. He expressed himself as being satisfied with this treatment, and intended to continue the same. His opinion was that Roller fanciers were too "faddy" with the birds, and that the idea of keeping birds on all German rape to keep the song soft and low was exploded. The team of birds that was present proved his contention, they being soft and low. One bird especially was very good. A few slight faults could be found in the birds, but nearly all birds had faults. A vote of thanks to Messrs. Lester and Williams for bringing the birds, also to the chairman, Mr. Watson, for the able manner he conducted the meeting, closed the proceedings.—J. W. NORRIS, Hon. Sec.

COLOUR-FEEDING AND HOW TO DO IT.

A Lecture given by Mr. T. Gilbert at the Coventry Ornithological Society's Meeting held July 20th.

When asked to say a few words in connection with the feeding of Canaries, etc., for colour, I consented, knowing that we had a few novices and new members in our Society to whom the hints would be useful; so that I shall assume that some of the old fanciers here are not listening, for the information I am about to give is not for their benefit, as I take it for granted they know equally as much as myself—indeed, so many articles and lectures have appeared in the Fancy papers that if they have read them all they may know more.

In Favour of Colour-feeding.

The first thing the novice may ask himself when he finds the amount of trouble (or what we fanciers term "pleasure") colour-feeding is, will be: Is this colour-feeding necessary? But when he visits the many shows he will soon decide that point. Next, if he has paid a good price for his birds and has some valuable stock, he will begin to ask: Is this colour feeding harmful? especially so if he has read some of the articles written by "Anti-Colour-Feeding Fanciers," making such remarks as "it rots the liver and causes all the ills that birds are subject to." But experience will soon settle that point for him. I have myself not the slightest doubt in speaking in favour of colour-feeding, as my contention is that "the birds are better, stronger, and more healthy if treated in a proper manner." What I mean by this is "not to starve the birds to make them eat the colour-food by taking their seed from them." I have heard of this being done, but I can hardly think a true fancier would be so cruel or run the risk of losing his valuable specimens, and I cannot see anything to be gained, as one of the chief points in colour-feeding is to have your birds in good condition—surely taking the seed from them is the right way to put them out of condition. Some fanciers may say that their birds are not good enough to colour-feed, and they will start when they get better ones. My advice is, experiment with what you have, so that you will possess the knowledge by the time you have the better birds.

I will try to explain why I consider that the birds are stronger and better. If you go into a fancier's room (I am speaking of the average), where he does not colour-feed, you will find the birds on seed, and, if they should taste egg, it is quite a luxury. Then take a room where they are colour-fed. Eggs galore, Osborne, Arrowroot or Tea biscuits, maw seed, rape seed, and all the luxuries are to be found there for birds, to tempt them to eat plenty of the colour-food. Surely this is sufficient proof that the birds must be stronger and are better looked after under our present system of colour-feeding.

Some may say: "Yes; but though all these things do good, the feed itself does harm." Well, what is this food? I am speaking now of tasteless pepper. It is purely and simply a vegetable, and undoubtedly a harmless one. Some 30 years ago, when colour-feeding was first discovered (or, rather, the secret of it was given to the fanciers through the Press) it was cayenne pepper that was used, and for years all the birds colour-fed were fed on cayenne. If this was the case at the present time, I myself might possibly join the "Anti-Colour-Feeding Association," but the system on which we feed our birds to-day is very different. I do not think anyone, even those who do not colour-feed, will dispute the fact that the fancier who colour-feeds his birds has an advantage over the fancier who does not. To be "in the race" we must colour-feed.

A Profitable Side.

There is one other point to raise concerning colour-feeding, and that is: when the fancier has the pleasure of selling a well-fed bird, or getting one claimed at a show at a respectable figure, the whole season's expense is wiped out with this one bird; therefore the practice becomes a profitable one. To make it more clear to you. Most of you, as well as myself, have seen members of this Society purchase birds on the show bench at sums of from £5 to £10 each. Now I will ask you to call to mind all the natural-colour birds you have seen at shows (I am, of course, speaking of Norwich Plainheads). How many have you seen claimed at half the amount? How many have you seen in their natural colour for which you would care to pay one-quarter the price that you would give for one well-colour-fed bird? I will venture to say that many of the specimens sold at £4 to £5 would be hard to sell at £1 when in their natural colour. Therefore, I think that this explanation will remove from your minds the thought of expense, and I hope you will look on it from a profitable point—trouble we are not going to consider, as it is a pleasure in our case. We could hardly say we kept birds for the "trouble" they gave us; we say we keep them for the pleasure they afford us.

The Art of "Mixing."

We will now start with the mixing of the food. The more simply this is done, the better. Get a hard-boiled egg; add the usual amount of bread (or biscuit) as used for feeding the young; then get your pepper, which should be, of course, the best you can buy (pure tasteless); add about three heaped up teaspoonfuls to the egg and biscuit. This "feed" I always mix lightly; add a little sugar. Some days put a little maw seed in, other days a little rape. One teaspoonful of the mixture per day will be found sufficient for each bird. Why I mention mix lightly is because I find the birds then take to it much better.

Respecting oil. I don't know of any feed in the market which requires it. They all appear to me to have quite sufficient. I have been in a fancier's room before now when he has complained of the birds not eating the food. On looking at it I have found it more like raspberry jam than egg and bread mixture, and on enquiring how he has mixed it, I find he has added a certain amount of oil and then thoroughly mixed it according to Mr. So-and-So's instructions, or the directions given by some other gentleman. What I want to impress upon you is to make the "feed" palatable for the birds and you will find no difficulty about their eating it; and you will find there is little in the "art" of colour feeding.

A Chapter of History.

To bear out my statement that colour food is not injurious to the birds, I will give you the history of a bird I had. I was visiting a fancier and offered to buy a well-fed, ticked buff cock, also a very nice hen. He sold me the cock but would not let me have the hen. He told me the cock was the father of the hen, and as the hen was not an unflighted one, the cock must have been at least three years old. I kept the cock three years, breeding from and exhibiting him with the greatest success. I then sold him to a gentleman who visited my rooms. He kept the bird one or two years, exhibiting and breeding, then lent him to another fancier, who bred a winner from him. After that I lost sight of the bird, but during the whole time I kept track of him he was colour-fed, and he bred each season. I do not think a natural-colour bird would work like this—on seed and water only.

Hot pepper is not necessary, though a little may be added in finishing off the moult. I do not think hot pepper will fix the colour in any way, but it may hasten the moult of a bird that is late. If the bird is healthy and early in moult, there is no necessity to use the hot feed.

These remarks also apply to British birds and Mules. In feeding Mules I do sometimes add a little hot pepper—not more than two ounces to the pound of tasteless. Birds with a large percentage of green blood in them take the colour better than clears, but the birds should be bred from a Norwich Green or a Norwich with green blood in it. You can have Greens that are simply useless, as Greens may be bred from a clear mated to a Cinnamon, but Greens so bred would be of no use at all; the colour must be obtained from a true Green. The admixture of Cinnamon blood will be of no use as a means of getting colour. It would be much better to have a heavily-variegated bird bred from a Green. I do not like birds with veiny feathers, but prefer a good bright self-green, with the colour in the web of the feather.

I received Part 2 of "Our Canaries." I may say that the coloured plate of the clear Norwich Canary is alone worth the trifling sixpence charged, and no bird-room is complete without this model.—C. J. FAITH (Banbridge).

Curious Nesting Place.

A Thrush's nest containing 3 eggs was found on July 9, under a third-class carriage, on the top of a buffer spring, at the carriage and wagon department of the Midland Railway works, Derby, writes Mr. H. Bamsey (Derby). The carriage had been brought about 30 miles for repairs.

Just read this from one who tried another colour food last year and lost scores of prizes through being short of colour: Mr. Godley, Rishton, writes: "July 4th, 1910.—Mr. T. Sandiford, Dear Sir,—Please forward half hundredweight of your Royal Red feed. This season I shall use your feed exclusively."—(Advt.)

I have recently received quite a number of applications for price lists, etc., from persons who have either omitted to give their address altogether or have given an insufficient one, writes Mr. W. Gore, the well-known dealer, of Birmingham. One, a Mr. Wilson, of 42, Lower Gloucester Street, omits the name of the town, and he has written twice. Kindly ask all persons (through the medium of CAGE BIRDS) who have not received replies to kindly give full address so that I may write them.

Has it ever struck you how foolish it is to spend money on good birds and then attempt to colour feed them on a second grade colour food? If a bird is worth feeding you might just as well feed it well, and to colour feed well you must use Ramsden's Puro Peppers, which are acknowledged to be the acme of perfection. Shun imitations and substitutes, often offered by dealers in order to make a larger profit. Ask for Ramsden's, and see you get Ramsden's. —Advt.

Curry, of 60, Grosvenor Gardens, Newcastle-upon-Tyne, is the Hon. Sec., whom intending members should write for particulars as to membership.

At the third annual First Feather show of the Kings Lynn C.C., held on July 13, writes Mr. A. R. Kent, the hon. secretary, we had over 200 entries, which constituted a record for this town; and the fact, too, that the exhibits were more than ever up to the standard of good colour and quality, and were put down in excellent condition, speaks well for our society.

The Southall and Dis. C.B.S. have decided to amalgamate with the Southall and Dis. F.S., thereby making one good strong society, which we trust will be for the benefit of the Fancy generally in Southall, writes Mr. A. E. Argyle, the Hon. Sec. of the amalgamated society. OBITUARY.

We learn with regret that Mr. V. Wynn, the hon. secretary of the City and Suburban A.C.B., has suffered the loss of his father. The deceased gentleman had attained an advanced age, and passed away peacefully in his sleep. The many friends of Mr. Wynn will sympathise with him in his bereavement.

I have used for some time an exercise book in which I paste interesting and instructive cuttings from your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS. At the end of the book I keep an index of the same. The idea is very simple in itself, but what one has after a comparatively short time is an encyclopaedia of birdy ailings, refreshers, cures, etc., all trustworthy knowledge to which one can refer at a moment's notice.—E. C. LUXON (Upper Tooting).

We expect a large number at our next meeting on August 4th, writes Mr. T. C. Crawhall, Hon. Sec. of the Newcastle C.B.S., to hear Mr. Grey, of Morpeth, give us his experiences on the Norwich Plainhead. Few have been more successful than Mr. Grey, and those who are struggling to reach the top in this variety should not miss the opportunity. The meeting is free, and we will welcome all fanciers, whether members or not.

The Corncrake's "Cussed" Croak.

No Keats or Shelley hymns its vocal breast,
Indeed, no bard at all has ever seen it.
For prudent nature finds it pays her best
To screen it.

Behind our tent it sang concerted parts
(Bringing relations with it as a chorus),
Till from our sleep, with murder in our hearts,
It tore us.

It threw a bright preliminary croak
Among us as we sat at evening, smoking,
And thence, till 5 a.m. was on the stroke,
'Twas croaking.

It seems to sing from cussedness of heart,
From single-minded pleasure in a rumpus,
At least to me its lay has neither art
Nor compass.

FLACCUS (In the 'Manchester Guardian.")

I should be pleased to receive any applications from intending members as early as possible to ensure their names being inserted in the new handbook, which we are desirous of publishing at an early date, writes Mr. F. Armstrong, Hon. Sec., of the National Green Marked Y.C.C., 78, Pear Street, Halifax. Novices please remember that we were the first to cater for you. Show your appreciation of our efforts by joining, and securing two chances of prizes instead of one. All applications, together with this year's subscriptions, 2s. 6d., should be forwarded to me.

Thrush Eating Shell Fish.

In a certain part of the Hebrides the Thrushes are known to eat two species of shellfish which abound along the coast. They crack the shells on a stone in the same manner as they do the snail, and extract the contents.

A White Swallow.

Those interested in freaks of nature who would like a pleasant trip into one of the most beautiful parts of Herefordshire, should go to Bringstye, about 2½ miles from Bromyard, where a white Swallow is to be seen, writes Mr. H. B. Oakley, to the "Hereford Times." It was hatched at the cottage of Mr. George Griffiths.

A Correction.

The ownership of the Melba Finch depicted in our last issue should have been attributed to Mr. F. Howe, the well-known Wellingborough enthusiast, and not to Mr. Beaty, an error which we regret. Mr. Howe informs us that the bird followed up its win at the Scottish National Show by securing second prize at the Crystal Palace, where the competition, it will be remembered, was very keen.

The Yorkshire Show-Cage.

We hear from a reader, Mr. J. H. Jowett (31, Westminster Place, Stanacre, Bradford) that he has had made a Yorkshire show-cage that has three improvements which he describes as having been long wanted in this particular kind of show cage. He is open to sell his three ideas for a moderate sum to anyone in a position to put them upon the market. We have not seen this cage, but Mr. Jowett says that he is convinced breeders and show officials will be highly pleased with it.

Another Parrot Story.

A certain lady exhibitor kept, we understand, in addition to her pet Canaries, a talking Parrot. "Polly," we regret to say, was addicted to swearing. One day a visitor remarked to the lady, "How well your Parrot talks?" "Yes," she replied, "but she persists in saying naughty words." "Well," answered the friend, "she is easily broken of that. Each time she swears take her and the cage into the garden, and turn the hose on her. You can afterwards place her before the kitchen fire to dry." Some days after this, the Parrot happened to have a swearing fit, so her owner promptly gave her a ducking, and then stood her in the kitchen. About the same time a Canary was being washed previous to being sent off to a show, and when finished this bird was also stood down in front of the kitchen fire to dry. Polly looked at the new-comer sympathetically for a moment, then stretched out her neck and said: "Poor little devil; have you been swearing too?"

"Our Canaries."

Part 4 of this very interesting publication is on sale this week-end. The literary matter deals with the management of out-door bird-rooms, about which Mr. A. Thomas, of Loftus, writes in a very practical and interesting manner. The main part of the number is taken up by the chapter on "Exhibiting," to which such experienced fanciers as Mr. J. W. Ramsden, the Crystal Palace show manager, Mr. Geo. Gardner, the well-known metropolitan judge, Mr. A. G. Filby, of London Fancy fame, Mr. J. Fairley, the successful Scottish breeder of Belgians, Mr. J. S. Wilson, one of our oldest Border breeders, Mr. Jas. Little, a veteran in the ranks of Scots Fancy exhibitors, Mr. V. H. Deacon, one of Liverpool's leading Green breeders, Mr. J. C. Barnes, the popular Yorkshire judge, and Mr. W. Shakespeare, of London. These gentlemen go thoroughly into the intricacies of the art of exhibiting, and much will be learnt both by novices and old fanciers from a perusal of their notes. Part 4 may be had post free from the offices of CAGE BIRDS (price 7d.), or through any newsagent or booksellers (price 6d.). Ask for "Our Canaries."

Nests of Birds, Poultry, etc., should be regularly sprinkled with KEATING'S POWDER, especially when hens are sitting. Don't forget to do this just previous to the eggs hatching, to destroy the Red Mite. It kills all insects, harmless to everything else.

Training of Young Birds and Colour-feeding.

A LECTURE DELIVERED BY MR. SAMUEL DEAN BEFORE THE BRADFORD WEST C.B.A. ON JUNE 11TH.

It was with somewhat mixed feelings that I accepted the pressing invitation of your secretary, Mr. Western, to come here and give you my ideas on the training of young birds, and on colour feeding, seeing that your Society is one of the most advanced and successful in the West Riding, and has amongst its members some of the oldest fanciers in Bradford, many of whom were fanciers long before the times of general colour feeding.

When to Begin Training.

In the training of young birds it is almost impossible to start too early. As soon as you see that the youngsters know their way about the stock cage and are able to find the food easily, you may begin by hanging on the show cages. Then when you go into the room and find one or two of them have found their way in, put your hand underneath and gently lift the show cage away, talking quietly to the birds in the meantime.

Get them used to your voice as well as to your person. Should you find one of them sitting in the doorway, insert your magic wand and gently coax the youngster into the show cage; but no hurry mind. "Slow and sure" must be your motto. Once they become afraid of you, no amount of trouble will get them steady again. Also do not be in a hurry to close the cage door. Keep your hand or stick in readiness, and should the bird come down towards the door place the stick or hand near, to get it back. Then when the birds are from five to six weeks old you should be able to run them in or out at will. You can then discontinue hanging on the show cage, as this, if persistently used, makes the birds always in a hurry to get out—down they flop towards the door every time you run them. Therefore, as soon as you think they are fairly steady, only give them a run out two or three times a week until moulting time, when they are perhaps best left alone.

Begin training them again as they get nearly through the moult, and if the cage is hung on for a few days, and the birds are run out a time or two, they will soon be quite steady again.

"Once steady, always steady," is nearly always true in this respect, barring, of course, a bird that gets a fright and is thus made nervous.

Colour-feeding a Simple Matter.

Now we come to colour feeding. This nowadays is a very simple matter, and here I am able to show you specimens of peppers (hot and cold) in the fruit (in a dried state, of course). The hot you will see is a long and elongated seed pod about 1 to 1½ inches long, and if you taste either a little of the skin or a seed you will agree with me that it is pretty hot. The cold, or tasteless, or, as it is sometimes called, the "sweet" pepper, is as much like an old and dried tomato, as anything I know, and has a very greasy appearance, in fact, if the pods are in good condition when they are ground up, the pepper is quite oily, and does not require anything additional to moisten it for use. I am able to show these samples by the kindness of Mr. J. W. Ramsden, who kindly sent them on to me.

When the young birds are about 8 weeks old, I look round and decide whose colour I am going to use, and having done so, I buy sufficient food to last me all through, and a little over.

I generally reckon to have 1 lb. of colour for say 15 birds, this to be on the safe side. Say I want 7 lbs., I get 6 lbs. of "sweet" pepper and 12 ozs. of hot, and mix them well up together. I buy 2 lbs. of the best linseed meal I can get, and blend well with the colour food; and as soon as the young birds attain the age of 10 weeks, I am ready to start.

Begin in Good Time.

Begin in good time; it is better to be a week too soon than a week too late. Get the colour fairly well into the blood of the birds before the feathers begin to come off, and you will be alright; and only give it very mild at the start, gradually strengthening it each day until you get the birds on to food, that when mixed, is of a good deep red colour.

What do I mix it with, and how do I mix it? Well, I used always to mix it with egg food, but now I mix it with bread or biscuits without the egg, and find that they do well on it, and that I get a good colour. One day a week I miss giving the colour, and supply a little egg food all round. During the other days I give mixed seed, a little green, or other tit-bit, but always in small quantities, just for a change to keep the birds from being glutted and tired of colour mixture.

The young birds usually show their first new feathers at the wing shoulders, and at each side of the breast, and it is here you can form your idea of the colour you are going to get.

Of course, there are other things that can be used for colour feeding, and our old fancier friend here (the chairman, Mr. W. A. Cowgill) will doubtless know more about them than I do, as he was a fancier and had to colour feed before the advent of pepper, and he will probably have used marigolds, nasturtiums, dandelion heads, turmeric, etc., etc., in trying to improve colour. Of those mentioned none are of any use as against pepper, except, perhaps, turmeric, but even that requires special treatment if one is to get the best results out of it. Just to show this I will give you a little experiment. Procure a half glassfull of water, put in a quantity of turmeric and then add a little of this white powder, thus: stir round and in a "jiffy" the yellow ochre colour is turned to a deep red. Of course, I have done this at good strength so as to do it quickly, but even a small quantity will do all that is necessary. What is the white powder, you ask? Nothing but common washing soda which when added bleeds the turmeric, and gives you the result you require. If you use this in its natural state you simply get a lemon yellow on your birds, but by the above method you get a bright blood red, and on some birds it will go a long way to improve the colour, and the appearance of quality also to a very great extent; in fact, if your birds are bricky in colour it is a most welcome and useful addition.

An interview with Mr. William Shakespeare, of Kentish Town (a descendant of "the Bard of Avon") who relates interesting reminiscences concerning the "good old days" of the hobby, and the men who then played leading parts in the Fancy.

"You will have seen great changes in the Canary Fancy in your time?"

"I have, and no mistake. When I began it was very difficult indeed to pick up any wrinkles at all. You had to find them all out yourself. Then, as I have said, no thought was given to the novice. Now he is courted and feathered on all sides. Special classes are put on for him at shows, lectures, and washing exhibitions are arranged, so that he may have every opportunity of knowing what is to be known. A new man coming into the Fancy to-day can soon learn a lot, and if he has a bit of cash and is not afraid to speculate, he can get to the top of the tree in a very short time. He has none of the dreary years of drudgery, and learning from bitter experience, like the old hands used to have.

"Looking back over the years that are gone, and comparing things of the past with those of to-day, in which direction do you consider the greatest change is to be found?"

"Without doubt the greatest difference between the past and the present is connected with the colour question."

"In what does the difference consist?"

"Well, years ago, before colour feeding got such a strong hold of the Fancy, birds were of much better quality in feather than they are to-day."

"You mean to say that the fanciers having found that colour feeding was easier than colour breeding, they have taken a short cut to reach the winning post?"

"Yes, that's just it. In the old days breeders mated their birds to produce colour and quality, as well as type, the two going hand in hand, but since colour feeding became the vogue quality certainly has deteriorated."

"I agree with you to a certain extent, but don't you think the reaction has set in, and that fanciers have discovered they were on the wrong tack, and are getting back on to sounder lines of breeding?"

"Yes, there are evidences that quality is being more largely considered now, and also type, but fanciers have a long way to go before they get back to the beautiful silky quality of feather which we used to have in the Norwich Plainheads of thirty years ago. At the time when birds were K.N.-fed, we also had Natural Colour and Non-Fed classes, and, generally speaking, the young birds were shown in these natural colour classes, and then fed upon K.N. in the second and subsequent seasons. This being so, colour, which was bred for, had great value."

"But these so-called natural colour birds were fed to improve their colour, were they not?"

"Oh, yes! You know that well; for I remember when the late W. A. Blakston disqualified at a show away in South Wales a number of birds shown by yourself, and also some from the late John Thackrey, of Windhill."

"Perfectly true. But those same birds won under Blakston, Bexson, Barnesby, Bemrose, and other judges, both before and after."

"True, and I remember there was a lot of newspaper talk in the "Live Stock Journal," because Mr. Blakston acted as he did on that particular occasion. Still, as you know, such things as marigolds, nasturtiums, saffron, turmeric, and mustard seed were used to assist and improve the natural colour birds."

"You seem inclined to follow Roosevelt. I came here to interview you, but you are turning the tables somewhat."

"No, certainly not; but I could not resist the temptation to call to your mind Mr. Blakston's action."

"Yes, and, Rooseveltian-like, to take a laugh out of me. Never mind, I forgive you. Now, I would like to know a little more of your views on this colour question. You say colour must be bred for if success is to be attained?"

"Undoubtedly. If a man wants to establish a strain of birds which shall last, he must breed for colour. My reason for saying so is this. In breeding for colour he will also breed quality. Some of those who were the earliest to practise colour feeding, that is high colour-feeding, soon found this out. Their birds began to deteriorate in quality, and they found that whilst K.N. and other things did undoubtedly put a lot of colour into one's stock, the birds were hardly up to the old standard in feather. They thought feeding would do the trick, but they found their mistake. They discovered that if you wish to bring colour out in the feather you must breed for it. As the old proverb says: 'If it's bred in the bone it will come out in the flesh.' This, the colour feeders soon found out, and they began breeding for colour again. History, they say, repeats itself, and what occurred long years ago at the time of the K.N. craze, has been repeated in these latter days, when the colour question is left open."

"Reverting to the time of the K.N. feeding, can you remember what price was charged for the pepper used in those days?"

"Yes, it was called 'Bird Pepper,' and there were very few places where you could buy it. One such was Copeland's, of Leadenhall Market, and it was from them that I used to get my supply when I lived at Birmingham. I used to give 5s. per lb., and this was a pretty general price. I might say it was all hot pepper; we had never heard of tasteless pepper in those days."

"Would you object to telling me how the birds were fed in the Midlands at the time of which you speak?"

"The general system which was adopted by the fanciers of my acquaintance was as follows: The pepper used to be given in a stiff paste of egg and bread, or egg and biscuit. Some fanciers used both bread and biscuit with the egg. The birds were all covered over with a cloth, and the practice was to moult two or three in one cage, the reason being that they feed better than when kept singly during the moult. At the commencement of putting the birds on "feed" one teaspoonful of pepper used to be mixed with one egg, and the usual quantity of bread or biscuit; this was gradually increased until the birds were on what was known as "full feed," which was two tablespoonsful. When the birds reached "full feed" the seed-box used to be taken off in the afternoon. One of the colour-feeding wrinkles was the saffron infusion. Three-pennyworth of saffron was placed in a stew-pan with three-quarters of a pint of water, and it was gently stewed until the water was reduced to half a pint. It was then allowed to cool, after which one tablespoonful of castor sugar and half a gill of rum were added. A teaspoonful of this mixture was given in the drinking water daily, and the same quantity used to be mixed with the colour food each day. I have often been asked by present-day fanciers if our birds now are as high in colour as they used to be years ago. My opinion is that they are not so deep in colour. They lack the brightness, and sheen, too, which used to be seen on the exhibits of the olden days."

"As to the lack of sheen, I agree with you; but don't you think that it is more a matter of breeding than feeding?"

"Yes, I believe you are right, because the birds are coarser and heavier in feather than they used to be, and the sheen that used to appear on the top of the feather was really the result of the system of breeding for colour and quality which the fanciers of the olden days used to pursue.

The Feeding and Treatment of British Birds for Exhibition.

A Lecture by Mr. G. MORTLOCK before the North London C.B.A.

(Concluded from p. 9).

Colour of Show Cages, etc.

Another important point to study is the colour of the show cages. You who are beginners, go to some of the shows and see how some of the winning birds are shown. Take notice of perches, size, and distance apart. If your bird has been used to a certain jump, see that your show cage is the same, or train your bird to the jump of the show cage, for the bird will show himself much better when he has confidence in his jump.

Then, again, some birds require washing for shows. If they have fairly large cages, where they can use their wings and bathe, in my opinion washing is unnecessary.

Do not overshow your best birds, because the knocking about on the railway journeys takes a lot out of them.

Again, different judges prefer different styles of birds. Years ago we used to think the best kind of Goldfinch for showing was the long, snaky type, but to-day most judges go for the thicker and larger bird; so much so, that in some cases one would think these birds ought to be wrong-classed. I have in my catching days taken a good few out of the nets, but never any so large as I have seen win. Possibly I was not lucky enough to find the spot where the large ones were feeding.

I would like to say that I think the fancier who selects and moults out his birds and shows them successfully, is deserving of greater credit than the fancier with the long purse who buys them all ready for show, without the trouble and risk of moulting; but, at the same time, this class of fancier is very useful, for there are plenty of poor working-men who may be lucky enough to get a first-class specimen, and can't afford to show it himself, to whom a pound or two through the sale is very acceptable.

Hand-rearing Britishers.

I do not know if any of you have ever tried hand-rearing British birds. Since my early country days I have, I think, hand-reared most of our hardbills very successfully, and a good few softbills, but the great difficulty with the softbills was the finding them proper food, but to-day, with the number of food specialists who pack food for softbills, there is no trouble to keep them for years in the best of health. Hand-reared birds, I find, take more kindly to cage life than young ones which are hatched out under Canaries. I have had British thus reared just as wild as fresh-caught birds, and in many cases just as hard to steady.

In my opening remarks I said it was more to the novice I wished to speak; I must say that he has a much greater advantage when starting than I had. To-day we have the Fancy Press, whereby the beginner can gain knowledge, and in a very short time compete with and whack some of the oldest. Years ago men had to work matters out for themselves, and anyone who did know a thing or two kept it to himself. But I believe the true fancier is the one who tries to enlighten some of his more unfortunate fellows.

If I have not explained myself clearly to you, and there are any questions I can answer, I shall be only too pleased, and this being my first attempt, please overlook my shortcomings and any omissions I may have made.

The Discussion.

Mr. CAWTHORNE: What kind of wild seed would you give British birds, and how would you get it?—Almost any kind. Go into the country, and take your field glasses with you and try and see what the birds are feeding on. I usually take a large knife, and cut the rough seeding stuff, knobweed, thistle, shepherd's purse, etc., and thresh it out.

Mr. HARPER: Is it the best time to go for wild seed when the threshing is taking place?—Yes, if the stack of corn being threshed has plenty of wild seed in it, but not if it is a very clean lot. When I was in the country, and we saw a field of corn that had plenty of thistle and other wild seed amongst it, we used to keep our eye on that, and were there when it was threshed out.

Mr. WILLIAMSON: Do you think there is as much benefit derived from the dry seed as from the green?—Yes. Of course, you cannot get the green seed all the year round and I do not think I should give green seed if I could. Now ripe seed of the various kinds I have mentioned is much enjoyed by most British birds.

Mr. MARLEY: I think a lot of Finches feed on insects. I throw wild seeds in the cages, roots and all. How would you bring a Goldfinch into colour? Would you give groundsel?—Yes, they do feed their young when first hatched out on insects. If you get some shepherd's purse, pull it up by the roots and give it to your birds like that. You will see they will go for the small insects very quickly that are on it. As regards the latter part of your question, the only thing I know is proper feeding combined with health, and the bath and fresh air.

Mr. HARPER: Do you give the birds the ordinary stock mixture, as well as the wild seed?—Yes, but you will find they will not eat much of it if they have a fair supply of wild seed, and as I said in my paper, you must not overdo the wild seed, or when your stock runs short you will have a job to get them on the other seed.

Mr. MARLEY: Do you give Linnets teazle?—Yes; some Linnets take to it more than others, and I think it has a tendency to keep them in good trim.

Mr. JONES: If you gave a Linnet colour-food, would it bring out the red or the black most?—It would not bring out the red on the breast, if that is what you mean. It would make the bird darker, but I do not hold with colour-food for British, as I said in my paper.

Mr. LACEY: Are British birds often faked, and how do people fake them?—I have seen Siskins and Redpolls that have had a bib painted on, but how it is done I do not know.

Mr. COLLINS: Do you think that Bullie hens are liable to egg-binding?—I have not found them any more subject to it than other birds; I have never had one suffer from it, nor do I have much trouble with my Muling Canaries.

Mr. MARLEY: I think that hen Bullies are the freest layers; I have had one hen lay from 25 to 30 eggs in one season.—Yes, it is surprising what a number some Bullie hens will lay. I have never had one lay the number of eggs Mr. Marley states; perhaps his hen was a double-barrelled one.

Mr. COLLINS: Do you think there is any way to feed hen Bullfinches to prevent egg-binding?—The only way I know is to feed them judiciously, keep them out of draughts, and give them plenty of room, so that they can have plenty of exercise; but, as I said before, I have never had any trouble.

A Matter of Disposition.

Mr. COLLINS: If you pair a cock Greenfinch and a hen Bullfinch, do you think it is best to leave the Greenfinch with the hen all the time?—That entirely depends on what sort of chap the Greenie is; some are very rough with the hen, also the nest and eggs, but, of course, you must treat him as circumstances require.

Mr. WILLIAMSON: Are hen Greenfinches good feeders?—I have had hand-reared birds feed excellently, and I have had some that would not; but the majority, I believe, will feed

Mr. COLLINS: Don't you think that sunflower is too fattening for British birds?—All oily seeds given too freely are fattening, so you must be sparing with them, and not give too much.

Mr. COOK: Which is the best kind of hemp seed, and how long do you think it keeps good?—I like the small, full seed better than the large. The birds do not throw so much out; they can crack it easier. This seed will keep good for a very long time if stored properly.

Mr. LACEY: Does rape seed improve by keeping?—I believe it does. Some of our best Canary fanciers keep their rape seed twelve months before using. I believe the seed matures by keeping, and it is far better for your birds to have fully-matured seed.

Mr. MARLEY: What are the benefits derived from rape seed?—Judiciously given with other seed, both English and German rape I have always found very beneficial. The properties of rape seed I cannot tell you.

Mr. COLLINS: How would you stop a Goldfinch from "twirling"?—I know of no remedy to cure a "twirler." I have had them, but unless they were exceptionally good specimens I let them go. I have had them do less twisting in a large flight, but when caught up and put into a smaller cage, have returned to the old habit.

Mr. MARLEY: What would you give Bullfinches after they have got through their moult to improve colour?—I would give plenty of privet and blackberries, and almost any kind of winter berries they will eat, which will greatly improve them.

A Working-man's Experiences with the Scotch Fancy Canary.

By ALEX. PURVES (Edinburgh).

Being a breeder and exhibitor of the Scotch Fancy Canary, and a working man withal, I should like to give readers of CAGE BIRDS my experiences of the same This Fancy is very expensive for the working man, but he can produce for himself a very good strain with patience. I started with two pairs of common Canaries, and bred with them. I think I had seventeen or eighteen young ones. These I sold at 4s. 6d. and 5s. per pair. This gave me a good start.

When Choosing the Stock.

In the first place you must get the birds as cheaply and yet as good as possible. I think the best way to buy Scotch Fancies is to do so at an open show, out of the limit class 20s. Get a yellow cock and a buff hen, or vice versa. This pair will cost you £2. For a safe guide to the beginner let him choose birds that have cards on their cages; he can then depend upon their being worth the money. Watch their feet and see that the legs and toes are clean and smooth, which shows that they are young birds. When the feet are thick and have big scales on them, they are old, "done" birds. When the tail is narrow and tight together it denotes good health, but when it is spread out like a fan, and the small body feathers are slack and puffed out, these denote bad health.

Of course, there is the fancier who offers you what he calls "strain." He tells you the birds will throw good, hard up progeny, that the birds come off the best blood that money can buy, and that they are worth double the money, although they are small and stiff. But it is not strain alone you want; it is not strain that wins. You will do better to get the birds that show their strain. Then you know it is there.

When you have settled on the birds of your choice, it is best to find out if possible if they are cold-room bred or not, for if they are bred in a warm room, and you put them into a cold room, you will send them into a soft moult; they will cast feathers all the year round, and your breeding will be spoiled. But if they are bred in a cold room, you can put them into a warm room and do no harm if you keep them there. Cold-room birds, however, are best.

April is quite early enough to think of breeding. It is a very good plan to put the birds together on the spring holiday. To keep on the safe side have a pair of feeders, or even one common hen for each pair of Fancies you breed with; this makes more sure of your breeding young birds.

I never feed or force my birds into breeding form. When Spring appears the birds come into condition themselves. Just before putting the birds together I cut their claws; this saves having bad results afterwards. A hen with sharp claws pierces the eggs, so that the young fancier thinks the cock has sucked the eggs. I think the cock gets the blame for a lot he is not responsible for. Many cocks do, of course, eat both eggs and young, and some hens will even do this.

To cut the claws without bleeding them hold the bird up to a light so that you can see the red vein which runs through the claw, then just nip off the sharp points, keeping clear of the blood line.

Food for the Pairs.

Having got the birds paired, I give them a few grains of hemp seed, and every second day a little egg chopped with rice biscuits, and by way of green-food I supply a piece of apple or lettuce; or, better, if I can get it, chickweed, but I always see that it is not frost-bitten. I also give a little boiled German rape seed. This I give till the hen has laid.

I take away her first three eggs. Sometimes she will miss a morning, and lay the next, but I sit her on the evening of the day she laid her third egg. This allows for all the young coming out at the same time, otherwise they would be coming out on different days, giving you large and small ones. The small ones in a nest will get crushed down by the large ones, and besides, do not have the same chance of being fed. It is necessary to give ten drops of glycerine in the drinking water two or three days before the hen lays; this helps her with her first egg, especially if she is a young hen, never having been bred with before. I put a good thick layer of Keating's powder in the nest-pan and make up a nest before I set her, covering the powder with cow-hair: this keeps the red mites out of the nest. The mites may cluster round the edge of the nest, but cannot remain inside. Cow-hair is the best stuff for nesting; it does not cling to the hens' feet, the same as "wad" or heather will do, causing the hen to pull her eggs and half her nest out when she comes off.

Nesting Matters.

Having set the hen, I take away all extra food and give her plain Canary seed. This plain feeding makes her more keen in breeding her eggs. On the other hand, if I continued to give her hemp seed and egg-food, she would probably become too proud, and would come off her eggs, build in the seed-box, and pluck the feathers out of the cock, etc.

There is no need to keep the hen sitting cramped up for fourteen days on clear eggs. When the hen has been sitting for one week, any one can tell if the eggs are fertile or not. There are many different ways of doing this. One way, and the simplest and best, is to hold the eggs up to a light. If they are black, with no clear parts visible, they are fertile. Another way is to place the eggs in a saucer with enough luke-warm water in it to just more than half cover them. If they roll about or move in any way they are fertile; if they don't move at all they are unfertile. All fertile eggs, too, have a salt taste. But experience goes a long way. Any fancier who has bred birds for a few years can tell fertile eggs by looking at them in the nest; they have a different colour, being a darker blue, and look more solid. One knows this better than he can explain it.

I keep the cock with the hen all the time she is on the eggs, but I take him out when the young ones come out, and I keep him out for eight or nine days. Of course, I hang him in a small cage on to the breeding cage—an old show cage will do—where he can see the hen and all that is going on.

I find that with Scotch Fancies taking the cock out is a good plan, for when you leave him in it is very often the case that he feeds the hen, and she never thinks of coming off the brood, but sits on them and "sweats," crushes, and starves them. When he is out she must come off to feed herself, and this gives the young ones time to get air. And if you give her nice fresh food she will eat greedily. She will fill her crop, and when she goes back to the nest the young ones will gape and she will very likely give them some food.

If there are only one or two young ones don't break the other egg; it acts as a pillow for the young, and keeps the hen from crushing them. When the young ones are eight or nine days old I put the cock in again, and he usually takes them in charge. By this time the young will be able to work their way up through the side of the hen and gape; they will not then be so easy to crush or sweat. They can at that age almost lift the hen up when they all start to gape.

The morning is the proper time to give them a good fresh supply of egg and green-food. I keep a big supply of chickweed in a bath well sprinkled with water, and if I can get home to meals I give them a handful of this every time. This makes the parents eat more greedily, which gives the young a better chance of getting fed.

Wild Bird Life.

A Bird of the Night.

The rearer of game birds has the Owl upon his list as one of the "Vermin" to be destroyed at sight. Fortunately for this interesting bird it seldom appears in the daytime. In past years when the ground upon which part of the village of Carshalton stands was an extensive park, well timbered with fine old oaks, elms and walnut trees, Owls were fairly plentiful. The greater part of this land is now built upon; but several of the grand old trees still stand, and a few Owls breed in them and haunt the open ground. We frequently hear them at night, and occasionally see one in the dusk of the evening, silently gliding among the trees or houses, for they are by no means wild. The other night one settled on the corner of our house, but as I was rather too eager to get a good view of him, his big round eyes detected me, and he was soon gone to a less exposed position. I have seen the great Wood Owl fly across the road on a dull day several hours before sundown, although as a rule he is a bird of the night, and seldom wanders abroad before evening.

The habits of such a bird as the Wood Owl are rather difficult to observe. The best time to do so is when the moon is nearly at the full, for although the bird shuns daylight, the light of the moon makes no difference, and with a little care one is able to get fairly well acquainted with his ways. We station ourselves under one of the old trees soon after sundown, choosing an oak that has several dead branches, for these are sure to be used as resting-places by these interesting hunters. Standing closely against the trunk of the tree we are apparently unseen, for during the evening one settles within a few yards of us. He comes gliding through the trees without the slightest noise, and even as he settles we can hear nothing but the sharp click of his claws as he clutches the boughs. He is quite still for some time, evidently listening intently; then he hoots loud and clear, and floats off into the gloom. His mate answers from another tree, and during our stay we frequently see them hawking to and from over the grassland and under the gloom of the trees. Rats and mice are plentiful in the district, and we sincerely hope nothing will disturb our useful birds of the night, causing them to desert the trees which have been inhabited by their ancestors for many generations.

Migrants and Nesting Boxes.

The Redstart and Flycatcher are almost the only birds of all our migrants that will occasionally nest in boxes. The remainder prefer the rank herbage of the woods and hedgerows. Wild birds appear somewhat suspicious of these artificial nesting sites, and frequently let a season or two go by before taking possession of them.

Favourite Spot for Wild Birds.

The seacoast around Wells, in Norfolk is probably one of the most interesting in England to naturalists and bird students. It is the alighting place of swarms of immigrants, and the breeding haunt of many Waders and shore birds. In the district they have a local protection society, which is doing good work in preserving some of our most beautiful species.

London Sparrows.

Born and bred in the hustle of the town, London Sparrows must either live and jostle with the crowd, or look down from the house-tops and die of hunger. Naturally enough they prefer the former; and everyone can testify to the cool intrepidity with which this familiar bird will pounce upon a bit of bread, or some other tempting morsel, which happens to catch its eye upon the pavement. And with what triumph and exultation it bears it off to its mate; seated on some window sill or coping-stone above, or followed, perhaps, by three or four disappointed companions, who were a moment too late in seizing the spoil.

CANARY QUERIES.

Accommodation and Colour.

Lisbon (Novice).—(1) Twelve birds is the limit; and with this number you will need to pay strict attention to cleanliness. You will gather then that you have it overstocked beyond all reasonable limits, and until you can reduce the overcrowding you should pay the utmost attention to cleanliness and general hygiene. Clean cage daily, and keep floor thickly strewn with clean sawdust or sand, and see that food and water—particularly all soft food—are quite pure and fresh. The danger is that if you get a single case of infectious illness, you would lose birds at a fearful rate. Glad to hear you have been so successful by closely following advice in our "Annual." For feeding, give plain canary ad lib Every second day, in addition, allow a tablespoonful of summer rape to every ten or twelve birds; twice a week a similar quantity of hemp, and on two other days a similar quantity of crushed biscuit, or sponge cake, given dry, or an equivalent quantity of bread and milk, well strewn with maw seed. Do not give moist foods or egg food liberally whilst so overcrowded. (2) The above dietary will suffice for moulting, but when the moult begins, as you are colour feeding, you must give the crushed biscuit food daily in rather smaller quantity, and make up the bulk by adding the colour food and well blending all together. Add a little soft sugar to the colour and sprinkle freely with maw seed. Keeping them warm, and adding a few drops of whisky and a few blades of saffron to the drinking water three times a week, and supplying the bath regularly until the moult is well advanced, should be all that is necessary to help on the moult.

Weak Logic.

Market Cross.—You seem to be well aware that the bird's position is the cause of its condition, and that it has been exposed to variations of heat and cold and draughts; if you now suspect these combined causes, you are correct in your surmise. But when you argue that it has stood the same conditions all right for two or three years, and evidently consider it should go on indefinitely unharmed, you are wrong. And because you give an elaborate seed mixture as a staple you must not imagine that this supplies the place of a varied diet. There is always the old sameness in such a diet. It is doubtful if the bird will ever recover its former health and song. But try following for a few months, and note effect Remove bird from window, and keep it in a nice, bright position, quite out of reach of draughts, and where it will not be exposed to fumes from burning lights or extremes of heat and cold. Feed for a fortnight on plain canary only, with a spray of green food daily. During the first week give 12 drops of whisky and as much Epsom salt every second day as will cover a sixpence; repeat this dose twice the second week. In the second week give also 6 drops of tincture of gentian and 4 of tincture of steel every second day After this time add a fourth part of summer rape to the staple diet; give a pinch of a mixture of equal parts hemp, inga, teazle, and millet twice a week; a small teaspoonful of egg food, or crushed biscuit, sprinkled with maw seed once a week, or an equivalent quantity of bread and milk sprinkled with soft sugar. Give a little green food daily, keep a supply of clear gritty sand in the cage, and see no insect pests are present If bird does not show signs of singing in a few weeks hence, write again, referring to this reply.

Young Rollers Dying.

Perplexus.—If another dies, send the body for post mortem to our post-mortem examiner, in order to be quite on the safe side if the disease should by chance be anything contagious. I don't think it is, but it is always best to know. I think your trouble is chiefly dietetic, and, perhaps, a chill during the recent unseasonable spell affected them. The bare places may be due to feather plucking on the part of one or more of the birds, coupled with the moult, which would still be in progress. As a staple diet, give a mixture of two parts canary to one part summer rape. Twice a week give about two teaspoonfuls of hemp to every three birds; every second day until the moult is nearly finished a small teaspoonful of maw to every three birds, and on each alternate day for the next fortnight a small piece of bread soaked in milk, drained, a few drops of cod liver oil emulsion dropped about it, and sprinkled with soft sugar. Withhold all green food as long as there is any looseness, and afterwards give only such things as seed stalks of shepherd's purse, plantain, and seedy sprays of chickweed. Keep a piece of cuttlefish in cage for them to nibble at, and strew cage floors with clean grit's of sand. In the drinking water give 20 drops of whisky and 4 of tincture of gentian for a day or two. Should any show signs of going off, at once put it or them in a small cage, and keep in a nice warm place, add 20 drops of whisky to the water, and give bread and milk as above, with the addition of a pinch of maw seed daily until better or the inevitable comes. If they should die, thoroughly disinfect this cage by well boiling it at once.

About to Moult.

W. Battey.—If the bird of which you speak is about to moult again after being in soft moult, it affords you an excellent opportunity for restoring it to a normal condition. You must on no account hang it outdoors. If it went outdoors at all the only rational plan would be to turn it loose again in the aviary, where it could get plenty of active exercise. But if kept in the cage, you must keep it indoors, quite away from windows, or constantly opening doors, and altogether out of the way of draughts. Do not hang it high up near the ceiling, nor over burning lights in the evenings, and do not expose it to extremes of heat and cold. Keep it fairly warm, and equable. Hang a bath on its cage frequently, and he will probably take to it in a few days. Feed on a mixture of three parts canary to one part summer rape as staple. Every second day give a quarter teaspoonful of maw seed, and on the alternate days a half teaspoonful of egg food or crushed sponge cake, and twice a week slightly dust this with flowers of sulphur and mix in four drops of sherry. Twice a week until the moult is well advanced, add twenty drops of whisky and a few shreds of saffron to its drinking water, and towards the end omit this, and give instead a few grains of the phate of iron the size of a split pea in the water. The bird will not sing until it has completely recovered from the moult.

Brevities.

Outdoor Failure (Salix).—I find the reply appeared on July 16, under heading "Success turned to Failure." You may look up this reply, and also read the one to "Hunt" in same issue. There is nothing to be added to what is there said, and, after all, I fear it is the season rather than any detail of management which is responsible. Your experience is by no means a novel one this season, and as it is now getting too late to amend misfortunes, the best you can do, if the advice given in former reply does not bring more success, is to live in hopes of your star of good fortune shining propitiously next season.

Whose Fault? (J. G. M.).—As the hen has gone to nest naturally, and laid no less than four clutches of four, it is certainly no fault of hers that all have been infertile, assuming, of course, she accepted the attention of her mates, notwithstanding the fact that she has been tried with two cocks, one of whom has properly fertilised the eggs of another hen. It is too late to try her again this year, besides which she has already done enough for one season, or, perhaps, a little too much for a young hen. By all means try her again next year, and mate her with a strong, lusty one-year-old cock, and I should be pleased to hear result of her next season's performance with a reference to this reply.

Weeds and Oil (Blyth, Northumberland).—(1) The one specimen is shepherd's purse, right enough. The other, I think, is one of the Rattle grasses, but am not certain, not being sufficiently well versed in botany to identify every dried sample. I should not hesitate to give it Canaries as a treat, as it contains a nice large seed. Perhaps Mr. Weston will name it for you. See his replies. (2) I do not remember seeing the advice, and so cannot say to what article the writer referred. I believe there is a pine wood oil sold by most chemists at 1s. per bottle, which is used for various purposes, including embrocation. Fir tree oil might also have been the article indicated, which may be obtained from most dealers in birds' foods and requisites at from 3d. per bottle upwards. The latter is also used for destroying red mites.

Not Singing (Henry Purslow).—Although the feeding is most to blame in your case, you might read the detailed remarks to "Market Cross." Feed the bird as advised there, except that in your case a week only on plain Canary and green food, with Epsom salts in water, is sufficient as a preparatory stage. After this, go on to feed as advised at end of that reply and in the drinking water give 20 drops of whiskey, 10 of glycerine, and 2 of eucalyptus oil, well shaken together, every second day for a week. In the following week give 6 drops of syrup of rhubarb and a pinch of Epsom salts every second day, and the following week again repeat the mixture given in the previous week on alternate days. The bird should go on well after this without further treatment. (Kindly note that our letter was posted unstamped, and so cost us twopence. Editor.)

Nesting Diarrhœa (G. Harris).—The cause is very obscure. Almost invariably, and certainly in your case, it arises from an inherited weakness of constitution, and neither the diet nor the feeding capabilities of the parents can be held to blame. You can do very little; the best result's I recommend from stopping the ordinary egg food, giving all green food, and substituting a little bread soaked in milk, pressed nearly dry, and liberally strewn with maw seed, and a pan of crushed plain biscuit, given dry, and a supply of crushed hemp seed. See the hemp is thoroughly sound and good in the kernel, and all the other seeds and foods supplied perfectly sweet and fresh. If the hen does not seem very keen on trying to feed the young, they should be fed by hand for a day or two until they regain sufficient strength to rise for food vigorously, when the hen will generally resume her duties and rear the young satisfactorily. You should not allow the hen to go to nest again this season. Next year there is no reason why she, and her young, should not do better.

Various (Novice Crest).—Thanks for report. In the circumstances you could not have done anything more. Make the perches for the Border Fancy show cage of a flattened oval shape, five-eighths of an inch by three-eighths through greatest and least diameter respectively. Certainly you may cease giving colour feed to the Norwich, as you now wish to keep him natural colour. If he has not commenced to drop feathers when you cease giving it, what he has already had will not perceptibly affect his colour. If he has begun to drop feathers, any new ones that have started, or that start within, say, a week of the discontinuance of the colour food, will be more or less highly coloured, and you will have the bird showing two shades of colour, perhaps in patches, until it moults again if you do not go on with the colour food.

Keeping Borders Outdoors (Anxious).—There is no reason why your Borders should not thrive in an outdoor bird-room. If you read part 3 of "Our Canaries," you will see what has been done in this direction with far more delicate breeds than Borders, and I have since received ample proof from as far north as Scotland. Doubtless much may depend upon the locality and position, so that I cannot lay down hard and fast rules in any particular case. There is, however, one item in your proposed place which you would be well advised to alter; instead of lining the inside with stout cardboard, on which to hang damp-proof paper, use thin boards, which would probably come as cheap, and make a better job. The space between the inner and outer shell of boards you should fill with sawdust, ashes, or slag wool, as you proceed, and thereby make walls which will offer great resistance to cold and be practically impervious to draughts. Do not forget to fit in ventilators as you proceed.

A Slight Mistake (H.D.W.).—The reply does not refer to a similar case to yours, but to one which differed materially. As your hen has nested naturally four times and laid clutches of eggs close up to the average number each time, it should be obvious she has duly performed her part. The fault lies with the cock, if with either of the birds physically. He may be past his useful days, or may have been temporarily out of condition. Or the infertility may have been indirectly due to the cold snaps which have been so frequent this season. It is too late now to allow them to go to nest again, and besides, the hen has already done as much as she ought for one season. It depends upon the age of the cock whether he is worth trying next year. I can only advise that if he shows signs of age by large coarse, scaly feet, or has any difficulty in getting through the mould quickly, discard him in favour of a young lusty bird in good stout song.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., etc.

A Correction—Is it unwell? (R. Charnley).—In this reply I am made to say, "Get this from your chemist,. etc." It should read, "Get from your chemist a box of honey and borax, and put a little on the tongue of the Parrot daily, so long as the supply lasts."—W. T. P.

Food for Chinese Bunting.

F.M.D.—Canary and white millet seed in equal parts should form the main dietary; a little of the following mixture may be given once or twice a week as a change: rape, hemp, sunflower, and kibbled oats in equal parts, with a pinch of maw seed occasionally. Also supply ripe fruit. You must ascertain by experiment what kind they will eat, but apple and pear are usually readily eaten by all species. A couple of mealworms per bird daily should also be given; during the summer these can give way to any smooth caterpillars, beetles, flies, spiders, cockroaches, etc., you can capture. Such garden pests can be given ad lib. Dried flies and ants' eggs may certainly be given, slightly moistened, and a little crumbled sponge cake stirred in.

Breeding Cutthroats, etc.

Market Cross.—Your aviary is not large enough to contain two pairs of the same species, even when they agree together tolerably well; they interfere with each other's breeding results. If you part them undoubtedly the pair left will breed almost at once, as the males are displaying to their mates. Zebra Finches are the easiest of all foreign species to breed in captivity, but again only one pair should be kept, and I should think you would succeed in breeding some, if you confined your stock to the following: One pair each Cutthroats, Zebra Finches, Bengalese, and a hen Striated Finch as a possible mate for the cock Silverbill. Silverbills are irregular breeders in captivity, that is while they breed freely in some aviaries, they make no attempt to do so in others where the accommodation is equally good. You give no detailed list of what birds you have in the aviary, so I cannot be more definite, but, if the Cutthroats have the aviary to themselves, they are interfering with each other; however, they have barely had time to settle down, and may breed even yet, but it will be better to separate.

Shedding of Feathers, etc.

R. Owen. Practically no preparation is required save a wash, but you must exercise care in this, as some birds are very excitable and resent the process; in some instances there have been fatal results as the result of the excitement, in other cases the birds enjoy it so you must be governed by the demeanour of your bird. If the bird can be handled without excitement, wash and partially dry it on a cloth; if you do not consider this safe, you must be content with well spraying the bird and let it preen and dry its feathers before putting it in the show cage the washing or spraying should take place at least half a day before the bird is despatched to the show. Unseasonable shedding of feathers appears to have been very prevalent this season, and rather difficult to eradicate. Every third day—so long as the voidings are not watery loose give the following in lieu of the drinking water: Dinneford's Magnesia one part, water two parts, and on the other days well colour the drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food. Anoint any bare places daily with Spratt's "Pannacure," and spray twice a week with quassia solution, till the plumage is properly renewed. At this period many Parrots are moulting, but carry out the above treatment in any case; heat is not necessary, but draughts must be avoided, and as far as possible the temperature should be equable—also the position of the cage should be a light and airy one.

Budgerigars Not Breeding.

J.M.P.—I am at a loss to understand your birds not breeding; your treatment is correct; it would appear either that you have got strile birds or those lacking in stamina. Diet your birds as advised to another correspondent, "Budgerigars shedding plumage," in this issue, as a change may help matters a little. Apart from this I can only suggest a query or two. Have you an equal number of each sex? The males have blue ceres, the females have ruddy brown ceres when in breeding condition. Were your latest purchases young or adult birds? Were your purchases all made from one source? If you care to send me full particulars of your birds, whence obtained from, young or adult when obtained, are they using the husks at all, and their general demeanour in your aviary, per the editor, I may be able to help you further. I can only say on the information to hand that I should consider the birds procured last year of no use for breeding, as with your accommodation they must have started breeding ere this.

A Recovered Cockatoo.

M. K. T.—I am obliged for your appreciative remarks, and note with much pleasure the complete recovery of your bird, and that it is in "beautiful plumage" again. There will be no need to continue the medicines regularly, unless there should be a recurrence of the trouble, which I do not anticipate; however, a little of the chemical food in the drinking water once or twice a week cannot do harm, and is really beneficial. Also, the bowels should be kept regulated (that is, moving freely) by a dose of Dinneford's magnesia. With some Parrots and Cockatoos the moult is just over, with others it is just beginning. With the above precautions your bird should now keep very fit, but the temperature should be kept fairly regular, as violent or sudden changes induce an unnatural moult. The Sulphur Crest is a hardy species.

Birds for an Aviary.

G. M. E.—You have accommodation for about 50 birds the size of a Norwich Canary. With small Waxbills double the number may be kept in the same space. Yes, you can keep in it Foreign and British species. Foreign species: Zebra and Ribbon Finches, Grey and Green Singing Finches, Rufous and Long-tailed Grassfinches, Common and Green Avadavats, Zebra Waxbills, Bronze and Magpie Mannikins. British species: Goldfinches, Linnets, Siskins, Redpolls, and Bullfinches. A pair of Diamond Doves (very small) you would also find an attractive addition. I take it you have a shed at one end of aviary for the birds to retire to at night and in severe weather; if not, you should have wood and glass shutters made to put in front of the wire netting for the same purpose. Ventilation must be provided, but there must not be a draught. Foreign species required to winter out of doors should be turned out as soon as possible now. Choose from the above, but only one pair of each kind should be kept.

Erecting an Aviary.

New Subscriber.—The recess should answer well and give you a sheltered and useful aviary. The design is immaterial, so that it is weatherproof, that is, well boarded, so that roofs will be rainproof, and the walls damp and draught proof. You had better send me a rough plan of the ground, with a stamped addressed envelope—in accordance with rules—and I will send you a rough plan. The walls need not be covered. No heat should be necessary, unless you are in a far northern county. You must not have a glass roof, the design of the front can be according to taste; unless you are troubled with rodents, the earthen floor will be best. Roof, double boarded and covered with felt. If I understand you aright, your intention is to wire in the pool, and to erect a shelter against the brick wall. You may take it as a general axiom in aviary construction that of the total floor area, one-third should be a weather proof shed, one-third with netting front, but covered in roof, and the other third entirely open wire netting—slight modification is, of course, permissible to meet special conditions. You cannot have growing plants in a Parrakeet aviary; they soon cut them to pieces. You cannot keep Parrakeets and Finches together with safety. Let me know which you decide on, and I shall have much pleasure in giving you a list.

Brevities.

A Reforming Feather Puller (Mrs. Cooper).—Many thanks for appreciative remarks; am pleased to note so satisfactory a result has been attained, and trust there will be no recurrence of the trouble. Continue the treatment advised till the bird is in perfect feather again; then the remedies can be discontinued, though a little chemical food in the drinking water once or twice weekly is really beneficial, even under normal conditions. Also the bowels should be kept properly regulated at all times by an occasional dose of Dinneford's magnesia.

Budgerigars Shedding Plumage (L.N.).—They are mostly in the moult, and I do not think you have any cause for anxiety over yours. Give a liberal diet Canary, white millet, spray millet, and a few kibbled oats twice a week, together with an unlimited supply of flowering (seeding) grass. Keep a piece of clean cuttlefish hanging within easy access, and if they care for it let them have a piece of some kind of ripe fruit to nibble at. You do not state whether they are kept in cage or aviary; I conclude the former In such case they should be kept in a room with a fairly equable temperature. They are a hardy species, but soon go wrong if subjected to draught. A suitable temperature will induce an unnatural moult.

Cutting Claws of Macaw (H. H. Barker). It is very difficult to explain without seeing a bird, but personally I always err on the right side in such cases; where the claw is dark that you cannot see the vein, cut back too little rather than too much; in fact, cut back only sufficient to give the bird relief. A sharp pair of nail scissors or pliers is the best object for the purpose. Have a little Friar's Balsam ready in case of mishap, and promptly anoint the wound with it. If there should be a mishap, and the claw be made to bleed, this will promptly stop the bleeding and prevent damage to the bird The other course is let your local vet cut them for you

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

A Trio.

Avis.—(1) You do not state the size of the cage, which is the all important point. If of fair size, the two Goldies ought to moult together without trouble. Given wing room, they do not fight much at moulting time, though they will no doubt "talk" to each other. I put my own Goldies together in a big flight cage to moult. I am not a believer in all wire cages for Britishers, however. (2) This hen should do to pair with a Goldfinch very nicely. I have frequently known ticked birds to throw good light Mules especially hens which are ticked (or grizzled) on the surface of the plumage, and yet have clear underfluc. This kind are apt to crop up in muling (in-bred) strain. (3) I don't think there is anything the matter with the Bullie hen; this bareness often becomes apparent at this time of the year. When she moults it will all be altered. I see no reason why she should not do to pair with a cock Goldie next season.

Young Linnets.

J.H. (Pengam).—There are several things which may have upset the young Linnets. Drinking too freely of water at first, having their soft food stopped before they could properly feed themselves on hard seed, being given unsuitable seeds, or food that is tainted (soaked seed, for instance, can soon turn sour in "muggy" weather, and should never at any time be mixed with the other seeds). Of course, the egg and milk, etc., mixture can also quickly turn sour. When feeding themselves you need not go to the trouble of making this; a little oaten biscuit, moistened slightly with milk, would answer splendidly; but "soft food" of some kind they must have for a time. Give shepherd's purse only. The stock seed mixture should not be a packet one, but the following: Canary two parts, teazle and summer rape one part each. It is a very good plan to at first lightly colour the drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food, a fine tonic and strengthening medicine for birds. When they commence to pick about for themselves, offer (in addition to soft food) maw seed, lightly cracked Canary and hemp seeds, groats, or coarse oatmeal, shelled and broken up sunflower seed. Don't, at the same time, forget grit and cuttlefish, likewise old, crushed mortar.

Red-backed Shrikes.

D.E.J.—I hope you will be successful in rearing the youngsters to maturity. In the adult male the colours are (broadly) head bluish-grey, back light chestnut, under parts buff, with a rosy tinge, tail feathers black, tipped white. A conspicuous black frontal band and black eye-streaks add a finishing touch to a really pretty bird. The young all resemble their mother, but (as you will know) are barred on the upper parts with blackish-brown. The dense black eye streak alone is sufficient to proclaim the adult bird a male, to say nothing of the pink suffused breast (yellowish-buff in the hen). They require a good insectivorous mixture of biscuit meal, ants' eggs, dried flies, and meat meal—or puppy meal, or "Melox" would answer admirably as the basis—moistened with grated raw carrot, etc. Finely scraped, or minced, raw lean beef or mutton must be regularly given, especially during the moult, also hard-boiled egg. Live ants' eggs are relished, likewise cockroaches ("black beetles"), mealworms, and most other insects (including bees), mice and tiny birds. They improve at the second moult. In captivity the males make really excellent songsters, and will acquire the notes of many other birds. When giving mice or birds, the sharp point of a nail should protrude through a perch (at one end) and on this the birds will impale these creatures while they "dissect" them.

A Thrush for Exhibition.

Malvern.—Size is the chief point in an exhibition Song Thrush—but the bird must be well-proportioned—though markings and colour come very close up. It is certainly important that a Thrush should be very large to become a "big winner"; but a decent sized bird, if well built (thick set), and good in colour and markings, stands an excellent chance. The bird should be as big and stout as possible, standing up boldly from the perch, showing a broad, well-rounded chest, evenly spotted (moonec) from the throat right down to the flanks, and well between the legs. The moonings to be dense black (or, perhaps, brownish-black), as free from grey as possible, and distinct, i.e., not confused, running one into another so as to appear blotchy. Head long, but broad (not narrow skulled), eye large and bold. The colours of the plumage (roughly upper parts olive-brown, under parts a light yellowish-brown, running to white between the legs) to be as rich and pure as possible. Wings and tail must be carried tight and close, the former free from any suspicion of crossing. The bird must be in good condition, scrupulously clean and sleek, and carry a satin-like sheen on the plumage. Keep your bird in a good-sized stock cage, to guard against possible fraying of the plumage, the tail and wing flights especially. I have known a small point like this lose a bird first position more than once in these days of hot competition.

About a Cuckoo.

G.B.—You say you are a novice; well, I do not advise you to start bird-keeping with a Cuckoo, especially with the idea of exhibiting it. It is a softbill, and could compete as a British bird, certainly. But Cuckoos are not recognised as "desirable cage birds" by the National British Bird and Mule Club, they are very, very seldom shown—they do not live long as a rule, they cannot stand the cold travelling to and from the shows, and they soon break their plumage, which is very easily damaged (wing and tail feathers broken, for instance). Then it is listless, and lazy, with no interesting traits, and worst of all, very dirty in its habits, its cage becoming offensive unless constantly attended to. When the Cuckoo commences to feed itself, it will thrive on a good insectivorous food, made up in the usual way with finely-minced green food. Give all the live food you can, in addition. My own bird had a little minced lean meat now and again, and some chopped-up ripe fruit, too. A fair supply of live food regularly is essential if they are to thrive for any length of time. In a back number, not long ago, a most interesting account was given of the Cuckoo in captivity.

Three Items.

J. H. Murray.—(1) What a curious omission—you ask about the feeding of young birds, and do not even state what kind of birds they are. I really shall have to take lessons in the art of "second sight." If young Mules, or Canaries, then the cod-liver oil food and egg-flake mixed would no doubt answer admirably. Have never tried it, though, my own food being fresh, hard-boiled egg and bread crumbs (or biscuit). Melox is a dog food containing meat, all right for large softbilled birds like Thrushes, Jays, etc., but certainly not newly-hatched Canaries or Mules. (2) Possibly the dandelion heads are not sufficiently ripe when gathered; they should be well open, on the point of "blowing," in fact. If then placed in a large brown paper bag, and well shaken up, the seed will fall to the bottom. What do you mean by "dried them well"? The heads do not want drying by artificial heat, but any not sufficiently open should be spread in the sun (whenever we see it) to open. That is all. (3) The close season for Nottinghamshire is March 1st to August 1st, and Derbyshire March 1st to August 12th (according to Trower's "Bird Catcher's Guide"). Some species may be protected all the year round; for these you will have to refer to the local by-laws.

Hand-feeding Hybrids.

Name Mislaid.—I have mislaid the letter of a correspondent who asks about the hand-feeding of Hybrids (they were Goldie-Bullies), but I trust that the following answer covers the points raised. It is not a difficult matter, providing one has the necessary time and patience, and takes care to have the food always fresh. If the feeding is undertaken at a very early age (two or three days), then the youngsters require food very frequently, and but little at a time, and they must be kept warm (the latter is highly important). The best possible food for these very tiny babies is hard-boiled yolk of egg, and live (fresh) ants' eggs (equal parts) made "sloppy" with new milk. On this I have hand-fed them without losing a single one; and have been entirely successful with it, too, in the case of such delicate birds as Tree Creepers and Wrens. When about a week old I commence to add the white of the egg, and a little crumbled Osborne biscuit, or home-made sponge cake (stale, or dried). At a still later stage I squeeze out a few mealworms amongst the food frequently; later still, I add soaked (germinating) summer rape and sunflower kernels (mashed up in the food). The seeds, of course, are for seed-eating birds only. Any small house-flies one can capture are also relished. A drop or two of water (not quite cold) can be given after a "feed" when the youngsters are well grown. Often I put in the feed a good pinch of Plasmon powder, which I am never without in my bird-room. To obtain soaked and just sprouting summer rape: Steep the rape seed in cold water, which thoroughly change every day. It will soon begin to germinate (burst), and is then ready for use, dabbing it as dry as possible in a cloth before mixing it in the food. When the birds are getting well feathered, I mix in every two days or so a small quantity (say, a tiny saltspoonful) of crushed cuttlefish. It is a very good plan, when they first commence to drink, to lightly colour the drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food, a fine tonic and strengthening medicine for birds. When they commence to pick about for themselves, offer (in addition to soft food) maw seed, lightly cracked Canary and hemp seeds, groats, or coarse oatmeal, shelled and broken up sunflower seed; also seeding heads of chickweed, and shepherd's purse, and thistles in season. Don't at the same time, forget grit and cuttlefish, likewise old, crushed mortar.

Brevities.

A Weed (Blyth).—Mr. St. John has sent one of your specimens to me. It is penny-cress (related to shepherd's purse), but I have never tried feeding birds with it. The seeds of most cruciform plants are liked, however.

More Weeds (M. E. Palmer).—No. 3 is Shepherd's purse. No 2. is the field pepper-wort, a near relative, and the seeds of this are much appreciated by birds. No 1 is penny-cress (note reply to "Blyth").

Feeding for Song (L. A. D.).—You should invest 2½d. in the "Nutshell" booklet on the "Song Thrush and Blackbird" which gives splendid information on feeding both for song and for show condition. Hand-feeding, cages, and management generally are also dealt with therein at full length, and the information is thoroughly up to date.

"Sharps" (E. V.).—Sharps (often called "middlings") is a coarse, husky meal, of just a little better feeding value than bran, and I do not think anything of it as a food for such birds as Larks, Thrushes, etc. Far better use barley meal; in any case, do not use much sharps.

Chaffinch in Indoor Aviary (L. C. B. S.).—A cock Chaffinch would do very well, I think, in the indoor aviary mentioned, especially if a steady (tame) bird. Still, he might turn somewhat quarrelsome in the late spring or early summer.—He will do on the same seed mixture as is given the Canaries, with the addition of a little sunflower and wild seed mixture now and again.

A Mule Problem (F. Pinnock).—Even in dark mules just out of the nest, the Goldfinch bars and buttons are to be traced on the wings; while the beak has a sharpened look, which is also the result of the Goldie cross. These things should enable you to at once identify the youngsters. On Linnet mules such wing markings would not be found. Young Linnet mules have plain wings (comparatively), just showing the edging to the flight feathers. Mules alter very much at the moult, especially Goldie mules, which then develop the "blaze," while the body colours get distinct and rich.

Baldness (H. A. Collyer).—This "baldness" is very frequent about the middle of the summer, and no notice need be taken of it, for the moult is then close at hand, and the new plumage puts matters to rights. One of my Bramblefinches went quite bald 4 or 5 weeks ago, but he is now moulting fast, and the new feathers are already covering the bare place. It is not "catching"; if there were any diseased condition of the skin, however, it might be.

Two Kinds in One Nest (R. Baty).—Thanks for your interesting letter, which I am having published for others to peruse. The fact mentioned in it no doubt explains some of the cases of Canaries which are exhibited as Light Mules. I have myself (as I have stated before) had both Gold finch and Linnet mules in the same clutch of eggs.

"Clear" Linnet Mules (E. Birchall).—It is quite possible for a Canary mated with a cock Linnet to lay eggs which were fertilised by a cock Canary if she were in the society of the latter some few weeks before being paired to the Linnet. The fact that you have bred a clear buff and a ticked yellow seems suspicious, and when you state that the surviving clear buff is "very steady," this serves to heighten the suspicions, as genuine young Linnet mules are the reverse of steady, being very "racketty" little beggars indeed, generally going off like squibs, so to speak, when one goes near their cage. You ought to have the bird seen by someone who can really distinguish between a young Canary and a young mule. It may save you the disappointment and mortification of seeing the bird "wrong classed" when you exhibit it. Anyway, don't "lecture" the judge should he reconsider it his duty to pass it; some of them, like myself, are tender-hearted.

The Magpie (H.G.H.).—The Magpie has a chapter devoted to it in Part 2 ("Softbills") of Mr. Norman's "British Bird Manual," where you would find given all necessary particulars. Price 1-1 post free. I dealt myself with the feeding in the last number but one of CAGE BIRDS. Young Magpies can be bought for a few shillings each; they are often being advertised. An adult tame bird might cost anything from 10/- upwards; newly-caught adult birds usually have the plumage broken, owing to their unsteadiness in a cage. A hand-reared bird undoubtedly makes the nicest pet.

Concerning Goldies (T. Pile).—If you use a Mule, it must be one singing the pure Goldfinch song. You might try a steady hen which "calls" freely. The most certain plan is to secrete the call-bird at the foot of some thistles, among the tops of which a few limed twigs have been judiciously placed. Goldfinches can be bred in an aviary, and also in a big cage, and this season's Greypates would be excellent birds to put up for the purpose. Read the "Nutshell" booklet on the Goldfinch (post free 2½d.).

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 2, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. And bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

C.G.—Your history is very curtailed. What I should like particularly to know is whether you have lost any others recently. The reason I ask is because the post-mortem symptoms are very much like those seen in the initial stages of septic fever, but not sufficiently pronounced to enable me to arrive at a positive diagnosis. The actual cause of death was pneumonia, both lungs being badly diseased. The bird, owing to the existing disease involving principally the liver, would be a ready subject to lung affliction, as it can be readily understood how the recent windy and changeable weather would act harmfully on a depleted system. This is what has occurred in the present instance. Your system of management I cannot criticise, but I would certainly advise you not to attempt systematic dosing, or too lengthy administration of drugs, which must necessarily in the long run produce injurious effects. You do not say how long your treatment lasted; this might have afforded a little guidance in diagnosis.

F. Miller.—Parrot died of cirrhosis, or hardening of the liver substance. This organ was much enlarged, very solid, and hard to cut. The disease is brought by the formation in the liver of white fibrous tissue, which in time interferes with proper physiological actions. It is slow in its course, and has been existing some time, although you may have not noticed any indispositiou. It is caused by irritants in the food. In humans it is spoken of as the drunkard's liver.

Aviary.—Pneumonia as a sequel to ovarian disease was responsible for the death of Canary, due to cold winds. Your birds must be well sheltered and kept warm during the present windy weather. It is accountable for the loss of many hen Canaries. No, there is no septic fever, nor is there anything of an infectious nature. Any ailing birds should at once be placed in a warm room, and stimulants administered. A course of the following medicine will be found of benefit in such cases as call for treatment: Carbonate of ammonia, 1 drachm; aromatic spirits of ammonia, 2 drachms; tincture of squills, 3 drachms; glycerine, ½ ounce; and water up to 6 ounces—one teaspoonful to be given each night and morning in the drinking water.

J. G. Boardman.—Your losses arise from pneumonia of an infectious type. It is a pity you have allowed the disease to spread, for the longer it is allowed to exist in one's premises so much more virulent does it become. At this stage isolation of affected birds is all that you can do, and even now it is rather late in the day for this to be of much avail. Sick birds must be kept as warm as possible, whilst a course of iron tonic, 3 to 4 drops twice daily, should be given in the drinking water. It is a very fatal disease, few responding to treatment.

GENERAL.

Answered by THE EDITOR.

A Suggestion (G. Davidson).—We have in the past published one or two such articles, as probably you will know. However, we will see what we can do in the matter, and thank you for bringing it to our notice.

Second-hand Indoor Aviary (L. C. B. S.).—We think that if you advertised your requirements in our "wanted" columns you would be likely to get into touch with someone who has such an aviary for disposal. Or, you might drop a postcard to the cage and aviary makers advertising in our pages. The question of price we cannot answer, as everything depends upon the class of the article.

Exhibiting Budgerigars (A., Holloway).—The entrance fee varies; it is usually 1,6, but sometimes 1/- and 2/-, the amount offered in prize money generally determining it. Both fee and prize money will be found clearly stated in the schedule of the show; particulars in brief are printed in our columns under the heading, "Review of Schedules." We cannot say in what manner any particular advertiser makes his cages, drop him a line direct. You can no doubt have them made to suit your own requirements.

The Wrong Bird (J. H. Murray).—Evidently you are not aware of the fact that the law of libel, as it at present stands, renders it impossible for us to publish a letter couched in the terms you employ. If you will conform to rule 8 we shall be glad to write the man on your behalf. Why not have used the deposit system? You can, of course, get your money returned through the instrumentality of the County Court, failing satisfaction by other means. Our deposit system would have saved you all this trouble.

Food for a Thrush and a Blackbird.

SIR,—Could any of your readers kindly let me know of a recipe to make food for a Thrush and a Blackbird?

JAMES CULLEY.

[Our correspondent will find valuable recipes and other information in our "Nutshell" booklet No. 4, entitled "The Song Thrush and Blackbird," post free 2½d.—ED.]

The Making of Flue Nets.

SIR,—Could any of your readers tell me the way to make a flue net? I have seen them mentioned and illustrated in your columns several times during the last five years, but cannot trace any description of how to make them. Do you have to net them straight away, or can they be made from bought thread netting? Thanking some kind reader in anticipation, and wishing CAGE BIRDS every success.

AMATEUR.

Mules and Canaries in the Same Clutch of Eggs.

SIR,—As I had a (to me) curious experience in Mule breeding this year, I thought perhaps it might be uncommon enough to be of interest. I had a cinnamon-marked buff Yorkshire hen which I paired up to a yellow cock, and though together for about 3 or 4 weeks she showed no signs of nesting. So I separated them for a little over a week, and as I had the cock in use then, I placed the hen with a last year's Linnet. She at once commenced nesting, and laid 3 eggs. These all hatched, and, of course, I expected 3 dark Mules as usual. But when they commenced to feather I was surprised to find one almost clear, one marked head and wings, and one dark. Now they are on the perches, and I have no hesitation in saying I have 2 pure Canaries and 1 Mule. I have read queries in the fanciers' papers "Can, or does, a cock fertilize more than one egg at a time?" but, of course, this settles the question. It is a surprising thing to find fertile eggs after a separation of at least 8 days.

ROBT. BATY.

A Recipe for a Washable Distemper.

SIR,—I should like to inform Mr. Rook that my attention was directed to his recipe by hearing two other fanciers talking about his letter and, by the way, enjoying a good laugh. Why your hurry, Mr. Rook, to send this recipe? You say your cages do not want doing out at present; then why not wait and try it yourself and prove its worth? Then if you think it worth passing on, by all means send it along to our worthy journal. Mr. Rook does not appear to understand my query. Perhaps it will surprise him to learn that this distemper is capable of acting on both the birds and the cage. Mr. Rook says that if I had given a recipe to beat the one he sent I should have done more good than merely writing a lot of empty bounce. I would, in fact, rather be writing "empty bounce," because its being empty there is naturally less in it than if I had written a recipe I knew nothing about, seeking to gain knowledge at other people's expense. There is something in that, Mr. Rook. Further, I would like to impress upon your mind the fact that I am always willing to learn, but I want as my teachers those who know what they are talking about. Remember that a little knowledge is a dangerous thing.

A. BARNES.

Shows and the Guaranteeing of Prize Money.

SIR,—Now that the show season is fast drawing near, it behoves me to ask you the indulgence of your columns in bringing to the notice of the Fancy generally the fact that something ought to be done to check the insane idea of giving away more than you can afford to do. The mere fact of "guaranteeing" is an undertaking to pay in the event of a non-successful show or otherwise. This, however, is only the shell of the trouble, though some do not pay out their guarantee. What it really means is this: the committees and secretaries become guarantors, not for themselves, but for the rank and file of a society's membership, three-fourths of whom they probably have never seen. In the event of a failure they are expected to put their guarantee into substance, which they cannot in many cases afford to do, and, if they can, do not wish to. These kind of affairs do the Fancy no good, as it is productive of making a hobby a very expensive amusement. The general notion is that shows do not pay, and this idea in reference to the open has a great deal of truth, as a good many fanciers know to their cost. We have also had during the present year a magisterial decision in reference to these guarantees, and that fact alone, I trust, will act as a deterrent to those who would dangle the "big bait." Failures are due to many reasons, but principally the "gate," which is dependent in its turn entirely on the weather, and at the time of year when the annual shows are on, the weather is such that you cannot place reliance upon it. Not only this, but the later shows are almost certain to decrease numerically because the exhibitors generally know in the first few shows exactly where they stand in the money, and if on the "out of the money" side, are naturally unlikely to pay away cash to somebody else. Consequently, I take it the gate money ought not to be considered an asset with the liabilities that a large hall and printing of catalogues demand. November and December hold out no guarantees of fine days. That you cannot alter, but you can alter your liabilities. The way some of the shows run into the fire is marvellous. The prize money ought to be based on the entries of the small classes, and not depend upon the hope that there will be a superabundance in the novice sections. The word "guarantee" becomes quite a paradox in a large number of cases, and unfortunately in many the exhibitors take the result as sportsmen only can. The moral is obvious, and "Punch's" dictum—"Don't"—was never more true in the running of bird shows, especially when the risk is borne on shoulders of those whom the Fancy of to-day have no right to expect to bear it. If you can't run an open show, don't worry about it, because if you do, the exhibitors who are attracted by your prize money will naturally want it; and quite right, too. What a nice little nest egg I would have if only I could gather the losses of the last few years. The large fees that are asked for the use of the halls are absolutely ridiculous, and that on top of the printing of the catalogues is such that you can hardly expect under fair circumstances to make a profit, and however you juggle with the amalgamations and cancels, you only disappoint the exhibitors, who are not likely to send again. Do let show officials, for the sake of the Fancy, remember that "guarantee" means an undertaking to pay out.

IPSO FACTO.

Sexing Young Canaries.

SIR,—Will any kind readers let me know their methods of sexing young Canaries? I have 28 young, their ages varying from 2 to 9 weeks. Most of the birds are in a large flight, and none have moulted. I have heard no birds sing until the moult is over, therefore I have to trouble more experienced fanciers to know if there is any other definite way of telling the sex.

A LADY FANCIER.

Proposed Northern Counties' Norwich Plainhead Club.

SIR,—A meeting was held on July 21st in Lockhart's, 65, Grainger Street (near Monument), when a good number of fanciers attended. Mr. R. W. Smith, of Gateshead, was elected chairman (for this meeting only). The Chairman having explained the reason the meeting had been called, it was proposed and carried unanimously "That we form a specialist club and add the Cinnamon as well." The radius from which to receive members was next considered. It was proposed and carried that we confine our membership to the four Northern Counties, viz., Northumberland, Durham, Cumberland, and Westmorland; and the annual subscription was fixed at 2s. 6d. per year, to be paid by the end of September. The society is to be named "The Northern Counties Norwich and Cinnamon Plainhead Club." The next item was the election of secretary, and on the proposition of Mr. J. Coutts, seconded by Mr. A. Hermiston, W. Curry was elected unanimously. It was also decided to hold monthly meetings, the same to be held on the third Wednesday in each month. Our next meeting will be held on August 17th, at the same place, at 8 o'clock, when the election of President, Vice-President, Chairman, etc., for the ensuing year will be proceeded with. I hope there will be a good attendance of members (25 names have been given in already) and those intending to join. If any fancier would like further information regarding this specialist club, will he please apply to me? I will only be too pleased to give same.

Colour-feeding the Green Canary.

SIR,—In your answers to correspondents under heading "General," in last issue, in reply to a query by "Weekly Subscriber," you are made to say "It is necessary to colour feed Green Canaries." Surely there is some mistake here. It is one of the strongest points made by the Green Canary Association when giving its patronage that colour-fed birds are not eligible to compete in Green classes. So you see that to colour-feed Greens is to make it impossible to show them, especially seeing that outside the patronage fixtures of the Green Canary Association it is very rare for a Green class to be put on at any show. Not only is colour-feeding a bar for show purposes, but it is also fatal to the variety from a colour point of view. Colour-feeding, as generally understood, is by the use of hot and cold cayennes, which give a red tone to the birds fed on them, and this redness destroys the beautiful, rich, soft green colour which is so desirable in the variety. However, I hope this is only a misprint and that you will correct same in your next issue. I may add that Greens kept in clean conditions very rarely need washing.

S. HADWIN.

[There was no misprint, but we must plead guilty to not making our answer sufficiently clear, for the Green Canary (as a variety) was not the bird in question. We had in our mind green-marked Norwich Plainheads as distinct from the Clear Plainheads.—ED.]

SIR,—In answer to one of your correspondents you say that "it is necessary to colour-feed Green Canaries," etc. Although I have had no experience in keeping Greens, I have always considered them one of the most beautiful varieties of Canary we have, especially the Yorkshire type, and I have read with interest anything appearing in the Fancy Press relating to them. I do not, however, recollect ever having read that it was necessary to colour-feed them (using the term in its generally accepted meaning), but on the contrary, that any attempt at colour-feeding destroyed the true green colour and imported a bronziness to it. The Green Canary, in its different varieties, is, I believe, increasing in popularity, and perhaps some of the successful exhibitors of the present day would be kind enough to give the Fancy their views as to whether colour-feeding improves the colour of the Green Canary, or otherwise.

H. C. BROOKS.

More Mules from Mules.

SIR,—It is not difficult to understand why so many cases of Hybrids proving fertile have been recorded this season. There appears to be an opening of the mind of fanciers to the subject, and with the show of credibility the doubting Thomases who have not accepted the negative assertions of the wise men, are more hopeful of having their achievements acknowledged and are not so ashamed to let the fact of their having tried to do what was considered impossible be generally known. The subject has been discussed time after time, and while it has stimulated some to probe the matter further, the general result has been to fall back into the same atmosphere of bigotry from which the savants have been disturbed. It is the general principle in the Fancy in relation to exhibiting, to consider all men honest until they are proved fraudulent; but in respect to the process of breeding in the Hybridising sphere, it would seem to be the maxim to consider a fancier a deliberate liar or, at the least, untrustworthy. What evidence can anyone have that merely beholds that is half as valuable as that possessed by the breeder? Still, it matters not; even if the veracity of the breeder is unimpeachable, unless the birds show characteristics so pronounced that the veriest novice can discern them with ease, the verdict has been "Impossible." Many years ago Dr. A. G. Butler wrote on this subject, and latterly Mr. F. Finn, F.Z.S., has written both in CAGE BIRDS and elsewhere on the same question. There is plenty of evidence extant for those who have an open mind. Then, again, is it quite correct to say that a cross is half-and-half? For my part I reject this theory. I have seen Hybrids that bore by resemblance more than half of one parent. Does either chemistry or biology give us a measure by which we can gauge the elements of each parent to be found in the offspring? Can either science tell us how the results of the combination differ so widely in one brood when the two principals and the process are the same? When we know more of these two sciences, coupled with the third, which is now rising into greater prominence and known as psychology, perhaps we shall not be so arrogant. That there is more in heaven and earth than is dreamt of in our philosophy, stands undisputable, as proved by the march of science in modern times. It may not be out of place for me to inform your readers that I have tried the cock Yellowhammer with a variegated Canary. A more docile and lovable bird no one could desire. In a breeding cage 19 by 17 by 9 he would fan upon his partner by dropping his wings and spreading his tail, at the same time gracefully moving about her, quickly responding to her solicitations with ardour and precision while I stood within two feet of them. The first season I tried one nest, but got only one thickened egg in the clutch. The next season I ran them together with the same result, getting no further than finding the contents of one egg to have been affected to the extent of having an addled appearance without any other bird being with the hen. I have even experimented with rats; but it would almost need one to be a farmer to keep two or three dozen rats in addition to between fifty and sixty birds just for pleasure.

G. W. MACPARTLING.

A Reader's Experiences with Foreign Birds.

SIR,—I have taken CAGE BIRDS now for about three years, and I am pleased to say I have found nothing but good and helpful advice in its pages. I think bird-keeping is one of the best of hobbies, being within the reach of the working man as well as of the man with plenty of superfluous cash. My fellow readers may be interested to hear of my experiences. My first bird was a cock Chaffinch, which was the joint property of myself and my brother. We paid 6d. for it in Nottingham market. But it died shortly after. When I became a few years older—about the age of fifteen—I caught a young Magpie, which I hand-reared. It would fly about the house and yard all day long, returning to its cage at night and for food during the day. I had had this bird for 12 months when I sold it to a friend of my father's for the great sum of threepence. I next had a pair of Budgerigars, having seen a pair, which I greatly fancied, in the possession of my brother, and I think they would have taken some beating for beauty of colouring and marking. I can thoroughly recommend anyone to purchase a pair of these charming birds. I had the Budgies for about eighteen months, during which time they became very tame, and would come out of the cage and feed out of my hand. Being nineteen years of age at this time, I realised the ambition of my life and enlisted for the army. Of course, this put a stop to my bird-keeping for a few years. But as soon as I was married I bought another pair of Budgies. Since then I have had the following species of Foreigners: Pairs of Zebra Finches, Orange-cheeked Waxbills, Fire Finches, Golden-breasted Waxbills, Green Singing Finches, Nonpariels, and one Red-crested Cardinal. I have at present two pairs of Budgies in a box cage, 4ft. by 2ft. by 18in. deep; from these I am expecting eggs in a few days' time. I may say that I find it a great help in getting Budgies to breed in a living-room to cover up the front of the cage with thin muslin. When I have a new pair of birds come, instead of giving them water to drink, I give them a drop of warm milk, which I think helps them to throw off the effects of the journey; and I may say that I have never lost a pair of newly-purchased birds yet. I have not had much luck myself in breeding Foreigners, my nearest approach being six Zebra Finches hatched out; but my curiosity would not let me leave well alone, and I had a peep at them, with disastrous results. The hen forsook the youngsters. I took one of the young ones, which was no bigger than a spider, and put it in a nest of newly-hatched Canaries, where it was reared to the age of eight days, eventually getting thrown out of the nest by the young Canaries. I am pleased to say that my wife is as fond of bird life as I am myself, and she has bred ten Yorkshire Canaries this year from one pair of birds. They are the first round, hatched out on February 22nd. I do not consider this bad for her first attempt. I am sorry to say that I shall have to part with nearly all my birds in a few weeks, as we are going to Cork on change of station, but I shall get some more as soon as I get there. Wishing CAGE BIRDS and all fanciers a prosperous and happy time in the future.

A Netting Needle and How to to Make it.

SIR,—With regard to above, I must thank the writers of the letters, but must inform them that it is not every novice who understands the use of the soldering iron, so something must be substituted for it. I have used a needle made similarly to Wm. Proctor's, but it is tied or bound up with string. I think his is what is called a double one, and mine is single. I enclose a sketch of mine, and trust it will explain itself.

AN INEXPERIENCED NETTER.

SIR,—I enclose a sketch of a netting needle and mesh stick. These, I think, you will find solid, substantial and serviceable, and also of much use when you are nearing the end of thread. Wire is too easily bent, and would be awkward in net making. The sketch, I think, will make the idea clear.

A. M. PENFOLD.

The Production of Hybrids.

Advice to Would-be Breeders.

SIR,—I like a cage for Hybrid breeding better than an aviary, and I prefer to use the double-breeder. In a cage you have your Hybrids more under control than if you have them in an aviary. My double-breeders are 30in. long, 16in. deep, and 12in. wide, with a sliding partition so that I can part the birds at any time. My birds for Hybrid breeding are a Greenfinch cock and a hen Bullfinch. I like a nice hand-reared Greenfinch and a good house-moulted Bullfinch, one that has been in a cage or aviary (a cage-one is best). I like to get as good a Greenfinch as I can lay hands on—the bigger the better. I prefer them well marked and in colour a nice golden grassy green; the flights of the wings and edging of tail feathers I like to be a rich deep yellow. The bird I have is a very fine one. It was hand-reared. The tamer we can get the birds, the brighter will be our hopes in the hobby. I do not myself believe in keeping birds in a small cage all the winter. I like them to have plenty of exercise all through the long dark days. Birds in the dead of winter should be as lively as if spring were close upon us. I treat my birds the same as I would be treated myself, and my birds know me quite well. A gentleman said to me a short time ago that he wished his birdroom was as clean as mine. Red mites do not trouble me very much, as I find the cleaner the cages and birds are kept, the less trouble red mites are. I give my birds canary, linseed, hemp, charlock, rape, sunflower, niger, teazle, thistle, ash, and dandelion seeds, and a few ants' eggs. By way of green food I give lettuce, groundsel, dandelion heads, chickweed, shepherd's purse, plantain, and yew and privet berries. I live out in the country, so that I can keep my eyes open to see what the birds eat in their wild state. They are very fond of a piece of apple now and again. If lovers of wild British birds were to study Nature more than some few of them do, it would be much better; they would know then how to treat their little feathered friends properly. In the matter of building, the Bullfinch is rather late; the end of May or the beginning of June is about the time they pair up. I begin pairing my birds up on the first of June. The cock Greenfinch I put one side of the double breeder and the hen Bullfinch the other. I put in a wire slide so that they can see each other through the wires, and then give them a little egg food and a little maw seed. It is not long then before I hear the hen calling for her mate, and when she begins calling there is no stopping her. I then draw out the slide and let the two have the whole cage to themselves. After a day or two I give them some nesting material for them to start housekeeping with. I find that the darker you can keep their nestpan the better. I always put mine in the darkest corner of the cage so that when I go in my birdroom the hen does not see me all of a sudden. I keep Norwich Canaries, so that I generally have one or two hens to spare for hatching the Hybrid eggs if I am lucky enough to get any from the pair: it is not safe to let Mrs. Bullie sit on her own eggs. As soon as she lays them I take each out and put a nest egg in its place; and when she has laid her clutch I put them all under a hen Canary to do the rest—a Canary that I can trust, and that is a good feeder. But I cannot judge it right always. It is not, I find, a play-game to go in for Hybrid breeding. There are many ups and downs in this hobby and I have had my share. As soon as the day for the eggs to hatch out draws near, oh! how our hearts throb. And when we hear the little weak chirp of the young Hybrids we think we have made a mark in the world; and we wonder how many are going to hatch out. I give my young Hybrids in the way of food yolk of new-laid egg for the first 3 days, and on the 4th day I give the yolk and the white of the egg, a little Osborne biscuit, and some crushed hemp; and on the 5th day I give a little greenfood (I like lettuce best). I have, I may say, great faith in lettuce, of which I can always get a good supply. I only speak for myself, however, for each breeder has his different views on this point. We know now how many have hatched out. Now, the hen may not feed our little "lumps of gold," so we are in a tight corner. Then we have to hand-feed them. Oh! what a task for us; but we still fight on, and succeed at last. After all the trouble we have taken with the young Hybrids they turn out, maybe, hens; then we get laughed at by other breeders. But I say: Let them laugh. Be sure you will ultimately win. I started breeding birds only four years ago, which I did with Norwich Plainhead Canaries, with which I did very well indeed. Then I tried Hybrid breeding, but have not got "up to the standard" yet. But I am not by any means downhearted.

Several letters unavoidably held over.

Under the White Rose.

THE principal interest of bird fanciers lies now at home. The work of the specialist clubs and also of the Y.U. has been accomplished for the next season's shows, and would-be exhibitors are eagerly on the watch during this trying time, the moulting season—the time when all care is required, as a minor slip can easily put a possible bird out of the running. To many this part of bird-keeping—moulting—seems a trifle monotonous, but how interest deepens when a few of the "good 'uns" are getting nearly through! What care and attention the "probables" get! There is, indeed, always something of interest in bird-keeping; it is never at an absolute standstill.

IT is expected that the year books of the Y.U. and the Specialist Clubs will be out during the next few weeks. Some I know are already in the printer's hands, and this year, on account of new arrangements as to schedules, the Y.U. books will be specially interesting. My word won't it be bulky!

WILD birds seem to have had a good time this year. Young seem very plentiful; or it is, perhaps, myself who have been more observant than usual? Anybow, I have been delighted to get amongst them.

THIS reminds me of an adventure the other week whilst having a day off round Richmond, in North Yorkshire. During the afternoon I and a few friends set out for a ten or twelve-mile walk, and for a start went up the river side, then across country to strike a road to lead us back. On this road, when turning a sharp corner, I espied a couple of Partridges in the grass within a few inches of the cart wheel marks. Away they went, one just scraping my fingers with its wings; and then, hurry scurry, a clutch of youngsters not more than a day old. They went here, there, and everywhere. We couldn't count them, but I should say there were about 10 or 11. We caught a few, and after having a look at them, popped them all into the hedge bottom. I expected and hoped the old ones would return and call them up. I suppose traffic is very scarce on these roads; anyhow, so it seemed to us, for we went miles and never saw a face.

SOME societies were holding members' First Feather shows on Saturday last; but the time is getting rather late. One judge told me he had had to go through some classes where many were nearly half way through the moult, and one or two were far enough advanced in the moult for old bird shows.

No. 430.

Sent by Mr. J. W. S. Drummond, 100. Links Street, Kirkcaldy.

Some young fanciers cannot make a wire cage very well, or it costs such a lot to buy a large flight, that they cannot afford it. Here is a large flight that can be easily made with an expenditure of only 1s. 6d. All that is required are one or two yards of ½in. (or even less) mesh wire netting, some boards, and some staples. First make a frame (as shown in sketch A); then fix the wire netting all over except at the two places marked X. Then make two frames (C), one to fit the whole end, and the other to fit the lower half of the other end. Cover these with wire netting and hinge on for use as doors. The big one is for the purpose of cleaning out the cage. To fix the drinkers, make holes and finish off as shown in sketch B. Make one or two, and if you have a large flight, fix a seed box at each end. This flight is suitable for almost any kind of birds and especially British birds.—J. W. S. DRUMMOND.

A Perch Suspender.

Sent by Mr. A. Booth, 12, Victoria Street, Allerton Bywater, nr. Castleford.

As a preventive of red mites getting on one's birds, this idea of a perch holder cannot, I think, be beaten. The perch is suspended by ordinary cage wire, and can be easily made in a few seconds, only the two pieces marked A needing to be soldered to the piece marked B, and the piece marked B sharpened and bent to fasten into the perch ends, as shown in sketch C. The two wires marked A should be cut to length that will allow the ends to be bent as hooks to grip the cage wires.—A. BOOTH.

* A Dear Little Robin.

One day a Robin was on our window-sill, and I tried to get as near to it as possible; but when I was about three feet away the Robin was inclined to fly. So I threw it some egg mixed with bits of bread. The Robin enjoyed its meal so much that it came every morning in winter.—Sent by Dolly Hawley, 77, Mile End Villas, Doncaster Road, Conisboro', near Rotherham.

* Dada's Birds.

My dada keeps Crested Canaries. He has had lots of little birds. He showed three baby birds at the bird show two weeks ago, and got three prizes. But the mother of the young ones is very naughty; she won't give my dada any more birds, as she sits on the eggs a few days and then leaves them. So dada says he must put her eggs with another mother.—Sent by Margie Stiles (age 8), 45, Cromwell Road, Caversham.

 A Starling's Return.

One day my father brought a young Starling home, and we reared it by hand. At the end of a month it escaped, for when my father had given it a bath we were surprised to see that it was gone. We were still more surprised when, nine days later, I saw it on the fern case. The Starling then flew into the scullery, and I went in and shut the door. A few moments later I caught the bird and put it into its cage. The Starling is now quiet and contented, and we hope it will not leave us again.—Sent by Arthur Bainbridge (age 12), 4, Elm Street, Gorton, Manchester.

In the Courts.

Taking Young Larks.

James Gallagher, Duke Street, Huddersfield, was summoned on July 19 for being in possession of wild birds recently taken.

Detective-sergeant Townend said that on the afternoon of July 11 he went to the house of the defendant on another matter, and noticed in the window the cage and two young Larks now produced. He asked the defendant if he didn't know he was doing wrong, and he said he did not know, and that he had bought the birds of some boys whom he did not know.—Defendant now repeated this statement in defence.

Inspector Brown, of the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, said the case was brought before the Bench as a warning to others.

The magistrates ordered the defendant to pay 3s. 6d. costs.—"Huddersfield Examiner."

SOME BREEDING RESULTS OF THE 1910 SEASON.

Notes on the results of the present breeding season, or of any interesting happenings, are invited from the secretaries of societies and others, and must be accompanied by the sender's name and address in every case.

I have had fairly successful results from my Borders this year, writes Mr. W. Robertson (Kilmarnock). Although not having so many young as last year, owing to hens not feeding, I have made up for that as regards quality. I have some outstanding youngsters which I hope will be heard of later on.

Many of my friends about here have had rather a poor season, and mine affords quite a contrast to last year's success. The birds have, I think, been in the best of condition, yet clear eggs have been the result in abundance. I shall use great efforts for next season's better luck.—JOHN H. JOWETT (Bradford).

Leamington Spa F.A.

Breeding results obtained by most of our members have been fairly good: Mr. P. Bull, thirty Mules and fifteen Norwich; Mr. A. Bull, twenty Norwich; Mr. A. Loden, ten Norwich and three Mules; Mr. E. H. Wildsmith, fifteen Norwich; Mr. G. Hall, fifty Norwich. As the show season will soon be upon us it is to be hoped some of the above will be heard of again in keen competition.—G. HALL, hon. secretary.

Scottish Items

The Scotch Fancy Canary breeding results in the West of Scotland are behind the average. Two of the leading fanciers who have usually 40 to 50 have only some twenty young birds each. In both cases the quality is promising. Another (who averaged 40 young) has only four altogether. The results are therefore disappointing. Fanciers are already on the lookout for stock, and a few purchases have been made. I have seen several promising young birds of the correct stamp and of good size. The country fanciers have not been fortunate. The common experience has been "clear eggs" and "birds dying in the shell." The Derby competitors are getting together early. The entries may not be heavy, but the quality is sure to be good. The Norwich breeders have done fairly well; some champions have been bred that will be hard to beat on the show bench. The breeders of Border Fancy Canaries have been fortunate; 30, 40, and 50 young birds have been reared, and among them are beauties. In one room only a few have been saved, but they are full of quality. Common Canaries are very numerous. Strange, but true, there seems to be very little difficulty in getting up a lot of this class; they are stronger, I suppose. The Hybrid breeders are busy. Mr. W. D. Hoggs' two Greenfinch-Bullie Hybrids are thriving; they are of good size and shape, and are getting ready for the show bench. Mr. Dunn (Dunfermline) has two young Redpoll-Bullfinch Hybrids. This is the best catch I have heard of this season. This cross usually gets the preference in competition. Hitherto only one or two were known to be living. Mr. Dunn devotes his attention to common Canaries. He reared two good Goldie-Bullie Hybrids two years ago; he has the right strain for rearing Hybrids. Dunfermline fanciers have any amount of perseverance; they only require a start, and with Mr. Dunn so successfully leading the way, no doubt we shall hear more of Hybrid breeding there. A well-known Pollockshields fancier has repeatedly had fertile eggs from a Bullfinch hen by a Greenfinch cock, but they did not hatch out. The pair are nesting again, and the owner is in hopes of getting a nest of Hybrids. A Glasgow fancier has two Bullfinches busy; they commenced to lay in the middle of July, and their eggs are in course of testing. The males are Greenfinches. The British birds indoors have been somewhat late in breeding this year. The drawback now is how to get them reared. The feeding birds are passing into the moult, but some may breed on. August is the best month of the year for Hybrid breeding; the birds come on just when fanciers are thinking of stopping breeding.—SCOTCH FANCIER.

FROME C.B.A.

This society (a branch of the Frome Fanciers') held their young bird show on July 21, when about 70 birds were staged. Mr. R. Pinnell (Warminster) judged, and his awards gave the greatest satisfaction. The feature of the show was a fine feathered Dutch Frill, exhibited by Mr. C. J. Young, which the judge claimed to be exceptional in every way for a bird bred in England. This bird was awarded special for best in show. Special second best was awarded to Mr. P. Edwards, for a very fine Yell. Lancashire Plainhead. Mr. Pickford won special for best Norwich, and Mr. Dodge that for Borders. The show was well patronised, and in every way a success.

SOUTH SHIELDS & DIS. C.B.S.

Young Bird Show, held July 23rd, at the Eureka Hotel, Frederick-street. The poor breeding season has again manifested itself, for the entries were very poor indeed. I fully expected this year to have a record entry, but I have been disappointed. However, we hope for better results in future. A good muster of the outside public visited the show at night. We had a collection box at door, which made a record gate. The cards were placed by Mr. W. L. Smith (South Shields). The secretarial duties were carried out by Mr. Jas. Barrass, assisted by Mr. Wm. BANKFOOT AND DISTRICT C.B.S

The second young bird show was held on July 23rd, when Mr. R. Halliday (Shipley) made the awards, and not the slightest criticism was heard regarding same. The largest attendance of visitors was recorded, amongst whom were a good number of ladies. Some really fine birds were staged, which, if given a good moult, will render a nice account of themselves at the wiuter shows. Mr. G. Hudson again won cup for most points (23); Mr. B. Wilman 2nd, with 19 points; and Mr. F. Gelder 3rd, with 18. This show marks the half-way line in the society's competition. Mr. G. Hudson has a substantial lead with 68 points; 2, Mr. F. The second show for 1910 competition was held on July 23, with an entry of 103. Mr. P. Mason judged to everybody's satisfaction. There were some very promising youngsters amongst them. The majority of our members have done just fair with breeding, but are looking forward to our open show being a success.

VICTORIA (Australia).

The 24th annual show of the Victorian Canary Society was held in the Upper Athenæum Hall, Collins Street, Melbourne, on June 3 and 4. In spite of the inclemency of the weather, the show was in every way most successful. The entries totalled 523 (which is an advance of about 100 on last year's), and the quality of the birds throughout was good; the attendance on both days, and nights, too, was well above the average. Taken on the whole, it was one of the finest exhibitions of its kind ever held in Australia, and if the prosperity which the society is now enjoying continues at its present pace the committee will have to secure a larger hall for the next annual fixture. Our very capable and hard-working secretary (Mr. P. Verey), ably supported by the committee, and a band of energetic stewards, managed all the details in splendid style, and everything passed off successfully. A visitor from the Northern State, Mr. Arbigal, a member of the New South Wales O.S., was present at the show, and took a great interest in the proceedings. A special feature was the exhibition of the world's champion Crest, King of Kings, recently imported by Mr. A. B. Mason, from Mr. F. W. Barnett, of Fakenham, England. The birds were all staged on the Thursday night by 9 o'clock, and judging took place from 8 o'clock till 2 o'clock on the following day, immediately after which the show was opened.

The task of selecting the winners in the Crest and C.B. section was in the capable hands of Mr. E. D. Sharp; total entry 142 in 37 classes. As before mentioned, Mr. A. B. Mason's King of Kings was a special feature of the show—indeed, he was the most important exhibit we had. It is not necessary to enter into a description of this wonderful Crest, now so well known (the bird was placed on view at one of the Crystal Palace Shows.—ED.), but suffice it to say that he was shown in rare fettle, and was always the centre of an admiring group, and the owner was the recipient of many congratulations on the excellence of his bird, and on his pluck and enterprise in bringing to our shores such a magnificent specimen, which will in due course make a marked improvement on our Crested stock in Victoria. The King of Kings puts in the shade the same owner's Eclipse (bred '07), which up till the arrival of his majesty was recognised as the best Crest we had yet seen in Victoria. Amongst other wins Mr. Mason succeeded in gaining 1st in the team class, for best three young Crests. The Crest Club trophy (25 guineas), the Roberts Cup, and the Society's challenge trophy, all for the best young Crest, were won by Mr. George Whaley, with a grand, heavily variegated Crest. Mr. Whaley also won the Crest Club's trophy (15 guineas) and the Society's challenge cup for the best young Crest-bred. The Crest Club's trophy for novice Crests was won by Mr. F. Anderson, while the same Club's trophy for novice's Crest-breds was won for the third time (and therefore outright) by Mr. J. Wales. Mr. Anderson also won the London and Provincial O.S. gold medal for best novice Crest.

Plainhead Norwich, as usual, topped the poll as regards numbers, and the quality right through was very good. Mr. Frank White judged this section, and the breeders showed their appreciation of his sterling worth in that capacity with a grand entry of 230 in 34 classes. In fact, some of the classes in this section were wonderful. In the team class for three birds under 12 months we had 48 birds entered. The Society's challenge trophy for best young Plainheads had 31 birds competing for it, and the two novices' classes for clear and variegated respectively had 16 and 13 entries each (this looks good for the future). The most notable winner in this section was Mr. Hotton, a novice (this being only the second year he has shown). Mr. Hotton was most successful, and amongst other things carried off the Society's challenge trophy, and the L. and P.O. Society's silver medal for best young Plainhead, and also secured the special for the best Plainhead in the show.

Cinnamons are steadily on the up grade. Some very good birds were staged, and there was a total entry of 34 in 11 classes. Mr. A. G. Gardner was the able judge. Our worthy president (Mr. W. L. Thompson) won the Society's challenge trophy for best young Cinnamon, and the L. and P.O. Society's silver medal for best Colonial-bred Cinnamon in the show.

Yorkshires showed a decided (and much needed) improvement in numbers and quality, there being 48 entries in 12 classes. There is no doubt that this variety is now making good progress, and during the past 12 months there have been several importations of high-class stock, which doubtless have had a lot to do with their advancement. Mr. George Colman judged in his usual satisfactory style. Mr. W. J. Myring won the Society's challenge trophy for best young Yorkshires, and also annexed the L. and P.O. Society's gold medal for best Yorks. (Colonial-bred) in the show.—The Lancashire Coppies had only three entries, but this is the first appearance on the show bench in Victoria of any of this variety for some years past.

Mules and Hybrids had six entries (all mules), bred by Mr. P. Alford and Mr. S. Drayton. Hybrids in our shows are now a rarity, but it is to be hoped that our Finch and Australian bird enthusiasts will give this branch of the hobby more attention, as there certainly is a splendid field for exploration in our own native Finches, some of which (notably the Gouldian Finch, and some of the Grassfinches) will more than hold their own for beauty of colour and symmetry of form, with the Finches of any country in the world. British, Foreign, and Australian birds had 22 entries in 10 classes. Dr. Horne judged, and pleased everyone. All the exhibits in this section were very interesting, and were staged in beautiful plumage and condition. The most successful exhibitor was Master Leonard Moore (a new member), who owns a very fine lot of birds. Cockatoos, Parrots, and Parrakeets, as usual, made a fine show in themselves, there being 29 entries, and Mr. Heartland placed the cards well. Some of the fanciers' wives, finding their better-halves too much engrossed with the Canaries, easily found someone to prattle with in this section. There were some fine specimens staged, and they kept up an animated chattering with great vigour. The principal winners were Miss Bamford, who secured the special for best in section, Mrs. Shergold, and Mr. G. Dyer.

All the prize money and specials won were paid out on the last night of the show. The various gold and silver medals won (six in all) were duly presented to the successful competitors at the close of the show by Mr. A. B. Mason on behalf of the president, who was among the winners. Mr. Mason was in a happy vein as he addressed the splendid assemblage in the hall just before closing time. Although a fine speaker, Mr. Mason on this occasion had considerable difficulty in making himself heard, owing to the persistent interjections and chattering of the Cockatoos and Parrots, who evidently were quick to perceive in him a rival talker, and they called lustily to him to "Get Work," etc., until Secretary Verey had to go and severely remonstrate with them, when they immediately recovered their good Australian manners, and were at once very quiet. But they did not forget to vociferously join the applause which from time to time punctuated Mr. Mason's speech. Mr. Mason drew attention to the fact that four of the medals (two gold and two silver) had a special value attached to them, as they had been sent out to our Society by the London and Provincial Ornithological Society, which is the most influential society in England. He also said he was pleased to see the novices capturing some of the medals, as it was to the novices of to-day that we looked for the fancier of the future. All the recipients suitably responded amidst loud applause, and shrieks from the Cockatoos and Parrots, and this brought our highly successful show for 1910 to an end.—G. MAYNARD.

Annual First Feather Show, held July 9th, at Staffordshire Knot, when 40 entries faced the judge. Entries were not so numerous as last year, many of our members having had a very poor season; but what was lacking in numbers was made up for in quality. The challenge bowl class for members resulted in equal points for Mr. W. Mason (11) and Mr A. Emery (11). Mr. Walton (Leicester) judged, and gave great satisfaction.

BIRKENHEAD C.F.A.

The eighth annual young bird show was held on July 16th. Their was only a moderate entry, as the breeding season had not been over grand for a good many of our members, and no doubt we had left the show a little late. But the entries were staged to perfection, and no doubt some of the young birds with a good moult will be seen in the open show. Mr. A. Wellings placed the cards, and gave general satisfaction. Our annual show will take place first Saturday in December.

MUSSELBURGH O.S.

First Annual Exhibition of First Feather Canaries and Mules, held July 23rd, in Brown's Assembly Rooms. The tables were arranged down the centre of the floor, giving the visitor every advantage to see without crowding. The hall is well adapted for a bird show, being lighted from the roof with top ventilation and electric light throughout. Everything was in readiness for the reception of the exhibits quite one hour before the advertised time for opening. Mr. J. P. Lumsden (judge for the Border Fancies) had a very difficult task in front of him in placing the winners, but dispensed his duties in a businesslike manner, to the satisfaction of all. Mr. J. Sneaton, in the unavoidable absence of Pres. Dunn, judged the other classes, and, like his brother-judge, gave decisions which were well received. The exhibits numbered 60, which was not up to the expected standard. They were all partially broken in moult, which made it all the more difficult for the judges. There was a good attendance of the general public, who throughly enjoyed their visit. Mr. Bishop (Stirling) and a few fanciers from the Fife coast were among them.

First feather show, held July 20th, at the Long's Memorial Hall, which proved a splendid success in entries (which numbered 110); and the hall in the evening was simply packed. The secretaries, Messrs. The Yorkshires were a grand lot, and the quality and type surprising. Mr. H. Young (Southsea) judged, and gave entire satisfaction.

Second annual First Feather Show, held July 23rd, at Queen's Head Hotel, and was a success. A nice entry of 32 birds turned up, all Yorkshires, in five classes, and there was keen competition. Mr. R. Garnett (Windmill), an old veteran secretary of the Cinnamon Marked Y.C.C., judged, and gave every satisfaction. Mr. Boulton won Clarke's spl. for best novice, also the Scots' spl for best in show. Well done, Boulton. Mr. J. Bona won the Clarke's spl for 2nd best in show. The society is now getting on its feet, and we hope soon to be again able to take our old position in the birdy circle. We have got some good fanciers, and look like flourishing again. We shall hold a members' winter show, probably in November.

CL.: 1, spl best in show, Boulton; 2, spl, 2nd best in show, Bona, these two birds were grand specimens, and deserved their awards; 3, Bona, nice buff; 4, vhc, Iveson; hc, Casling. TKD. Second Nest Feather Table Show, held at Crown Hotel, Station-street, July 20th, there being 45 entries in Norwich and Yorkshire classes, all other sections having to be cancelled. Special for best birds was won by Mr. Kidner, with a beautiful yellow Yorkshire, shown in novice class; the same exhibit also winning the special for best yellow Yorkshire; Mr. J. C. Caine winning that for best buff. Mr. Dipple secured two specials with his clear buff Norwich, which ran Mr. Kidner's Yorkshire close for premier honours. Mr. Derry won special for best novice Norwich for the second time this season. Mr. Kidner gave a gent's umbrella for most points in Yorkshire classes, and same was won by Mr. W. R. Ankers. During the evening the chairman, in a few well chosen remarks, presented the special to Mr. Ankers. It was a most popular win, and every member present showed his appreciation of the services rendered at show times by this energetic fancier by loudly applauding him. Mr. G. Baker judged Norwich, this being his first—attempt, and his placings were so successful, that the Hon. Secretary got one or two other members to help him coax Mr. Baker to judge at Wolverhampton on July 23rd. Mr. W. C. Wells judged Yorkshires in his usual painstaking manner. A vote of thanks was passed to the judges. It was decided to abandon the third Nest Feather Show, but to have a good Young Stock Show early in October. The secretary was instructed to secure the People's Hall, Hurst-street, for the Open Show, on November 30th and December 1st, and Mr. A. Silver was appointed to judge the Mules, British, and Foreign bird classes.

WEST BROMWICH & DIS. C.B.S.

Second Nest Feather Show, held July 19th, at headquarters, Dartmouth Hotel. Many friends were among the visitors, and many ladies. Some very good specimens were staged, and it gave Mr. A. Jones (Bearwood), who judged the greater part, some difficulty to place the winners; but both he and Mr. Collier, who judged the Yorkshire section, adjudicated to the satisfaction of all. We had a better entry than at our first Nest Feather Show—55 in all, which speaks volumes for some of our more fortunate members.

Annual Nest Feather Show, held at Duke of York Hotel, July 23rd, when a fair number of birds were staged. The Norwich in particular were a fine lot. Messrs. Willoughby, Weaver, and Hampton (a novice) each put down nice exhibits. Mr. Millencamp was again to the front with the Yorkshires, and Mr. Rowley came to the fore with a nice lot of British birds. Specials of Blakemore's bird seeds were won by Messrs. Willoughby, Millencamp, Rowley, for most points. Mr. Baker (Birmingham) judged, and gave every satisfaction.

DEWSBURY AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Second Nest Feather Show, held July 23rd, at Savile Hotel, Savile Town, when about 40 birds were staged for Mr. T. Bentley (Cleckheaton) to judge, which he did to the satisfaction of all. Some first-class birds were put down, and some of them were sold for a good figure. Several visitors came from a distance to see what they could pick up. Mr. S. Taylor won special for most points throughout show and also that for best bird in show. He is going to have a good look in at the winter shows, as he seems to have a very fine stock of young birds. Then comes our friend, Mr. W. Hall, the old veteran in the bird fancy; I should think he has bred some of the best birds in the Fancy. He sold one on Saturday for a good price; it will, it seems, make a fine bird if it goes through the moult all right. He also has a good array of birds for the winter show. Mr. Hall took special for 2nd most points, and that for 2nd best bird in show. Mr. Pollard took special for 3rd most points.

WEST COUNTIES O.S. (Plymouth).

The final nest feather show of the season was held on July 20th, at Boro' Arms, Bank Street, Plymouth, when just over 100 birds were staged. Throughout the three shows the numbers have been well maintained, except in the British bird section. Mules have shown a decided advance, both in quality and quantity. Competition has not been quite so keen as in past years, either in Norwich or Yorkshires, owing to several prominent breeders abstaining from showing. The results for annual competition for nest feather challenge cups were as follows, viz.: Yorks., Mr. L. S. B. Clark, 124 points; Nor., Mr. C. Garland, 112 points; Crests, Mr. J. Barage, 66 points; A.O.V. CAN., Mr. J. Ryder, 56 points; Mules, Mr. R. H. Rowe, 68 points; Brit. and For. Mr. F. Wills, 106 points. The following also won specials: Messrs. Webster and W. Reed, in Yorkshires; Mr. T. Pope in Norwich; Messrs. Haskell, Richards, and Parsons, in Crests; Messrs. Large and Pridham, in British and Foreign. Judges for July show were as follows, viz.: Yorkshires, Mr. W. A. Dyer; Norwich, Mr. C. Dart; Crests, Mr. W. French; A.O.V. and Mules, Mr. L. S. B. Clark; British and Foreign, Mr. F. Snell.

DONCASTER.

Doncaster's annual summer show attracted a fair entry considering the time of the year at which it is held, but, unfortunately, the bad weather was all against a good gate. The first three in the young bird class were honny specimens, two Yorks. shown by Mr. Helliwell, and a Norwich staged by Mr. Axe. The best bird in the show was found in a Redpoll-Bullfinch hybrid, benched in nice style by Mr. Williams. The arrangements were excellent, and the secretary, Mr. F. H. Chafer, and his workers, did their work well. Mr. H. W. Battye (Huddersfield) judged in his usual able manner.

This is a standard work, written by an acknowledged expert, and prepared for publication by experts. It has been designed as an authoritative and carefully practical work, embodying in the simplest and most straightforward language all that there is to be known on the peculiarly difficult and scientific subject of Hybrid Breeding.

There are no less than Sixteen Coloured and Sixteen Art Plates. EACH PLATE IS A PERFECT STUDY OF AN INDIVIDUAL HYBRID—not a pretty group suitable for a child's picture-book, but a plate that shows the correct colour, the correct shape, the present-day type and general characteristics of modern hybrids.

A PRACTICAL BOOK FOR PRACTICAL FANCIERS.

It will, we feel sure, be generally conceded that "Cage Birds" has produced in "CAGE BIRD HYBRIDS" a dignified book on a difficult subject—a standard work of the highest merit and a fitting monument of the hybrid breeder's art.

Ask for Part 4 "CAGE BIRD HYBRIDS," at all Bookstalls or Newsagents, or fill up the attached Order Form and we will send it you packed flat in cardboard, post free for 7d. (Postal Order).

Parts 1, 2 and 3 can also be obtained on the same terms; or for 4/6 prepaid, we will take orders to supply the complete work—in parts as published. Send your order at once, with remittance to

DEPOSIT SYSTEM.

We are not responsible for the statements made in advertisements, nor of the bona-fides of either buyers or sellers in all transactions the adoption of our Deposit System should be insisted upon.

IMPORTANT.

SEND THE FULL COMMISSION.—If the full commission does not accompany the deposit, the vendor will not be notified of its receipt until the amount deficient, plus the extra postage incurred, has been paid to us.

HOW TO REMIT.—Under no circumstances will Cheques or Post-dated Money Orders be accepted as deposits. Uncrossed Postal Orders must be sent and the numbers taken for safety.

RULES.

1.—PROCEDURE.—The intending purchaser should send to this office the amount of the purchase (our deposit fee included), and at the same time he should communicate with the seller, stating what it is he requires sent on approval. We acknowledge receipt of the deposit to both parties. In all cases the depositor should give his name and address, and also that of the vendor, and must write same clearly and distinctly.

2.—END OF TRANSACTION.—The deposit is retained by us until we hear from both parties that the transaction has been completed. If a sale has been effected, we hand the amount deposited to the seller. If a sale has not been effected, we return the amount to the depositor. The transaction must be conducted by the parties themselves. We merely hold the deposit.

3.—AMOUNT OF COMMISSION.—The fee is 6d. for each £1, or fraction of £1, and it must be sent at same time as the deposit.

4.—IMPORTANT POINTS.—The depositor must decide within forty-eight hours of the receipt of the goods whether he will keep or return the same, unless, that is, some other period of approval (of which we must be advised) is agreed upon by both parties. The depositor must at the same time notify us of the fact that he has returned the goods. If the goods are not returned within the said forty-eight hours, we reserve the right to send the deposit to the seller after the expiration of that period. And should the seller fail within three days to notify us of the receipt of his goods back again, the transaction will be treated as ended, and the deposit will be returned to the depositor.

5.—A SATISFACTORY PURCHASE.—When a transaction has been completed to the satisfaction of both depositor and seller, both parties must at once return the deposit receipts as a guarantee of its completion. The depositor must at the same time instruct us to pay over the deposit to the seller.

6.—GOODS ALREADY SOLD.—If the goods are sold before our deposit note reaches the seller, or, if for any other reason he declines to do business, he must at once return the deposit note to us. Failing its receipt, we reserve the right to return the deposit to the sender after the expiration of three days.

7.—FRESH TRANSACTION.—In case no sale be effected, a deposit is available for purposes of a fresh transaction, provided another deposit fee be paid.

8.—GOODS IN TRANSIT.—Goods in transit are at the seller's risk, and any damage or loss sustained on the journey must be borne by the seller. But goods not approved of must be properly packed and returned by the same means as were used in sending the same.

9.—PAYMENT OF CARRIAGE.—The payment of carriage must be a matter for arrangement between the vendor and depositor. We do not undertake to settle disputes affecting questions of carriage. But in the absence of other arrangements the purchaser is liable for the carriage of the goods, and if the goods are sent on approval and returned, each party pays the carriage one way.

10.—DISPUTES.—In case of a dispute, the decision of the Editor is final.

Annual Meeting.

Annual meeting held on July 26th, for the purpose of electing officers and making arrangements as to the appointment of judges. Mr. C. Halliday, who occupied the chair, was unanimously re-elected president, and Mr. J. Harvey vice-president. Mr. R. J. Hamilton and Mr. A. M'Cammon were unanimously re-elected secretary and treasurer respectively. A general committee was also appointed. The president thanked the meeting for re-electing him, and said he would do his utmost to make the society successful. He hoped they would have as good a show as the previous one; it was a society they might all be proud of. Minor business having been transacted, the secretary was instructed to make arrangements for appointment of judges.—R. J. HAMILTON, Hon. Sec.

CHOPWELL AND DISTRICT F.S.

Meeting held at headquarters, July 23rd, Mr. G. G. Gibbion in the chair. Mr. J. R. Slack (Wallsend) was elected to judge the British and Foreign birds at our show on Oct. 7th and 8th, and I hope fanciers will give him plenty of work to do. We had one new member at this meeting in Mr. S. Franks (Chopwell) Schedule for open show: A good classification was given for cage birds, consisting of 18 classes for Canaries, 11 for British and two for Foreign birds. The prize money is to be 1st, 8s.; 2nd, 4s.; and 3rd, 2s.; for 1s. entrance fee. So, fanciers, give us a good entry. CROYDON AND DISTRICT F.A.

Well-attended committee meeting, held July 26, Mr. H. O. Tarrant (vice-chairman) in the chair. The secretary reported the receipt, since last general meeting, of several nominations for election as members, also that he had received an intimation that several more applications would shortly be forthcoming from ladies. The balance in hand was most satisfactory, and was further increased by nearly £3 at the end of meeting. Date of next quarterly general meeting was decided for (subject to arrangements being made) August 31. All fanciers, whether members or not, are cordially invited, as the committee are making arrangements to have it followed with a very attractive lecture by a well known fancier. The business at next general meeting will be to fix date and place of first annual show, and as the committee earnestly desire to make this, the Association's first show, a thorough success, they are looking forward to the help and co-operation of the whole of the members. Intending members would do well to send in their names to the Secretary, 70, Oakfield Road, Croydon, without delay, if they wish to be in time to exhibit. The show will take place in October.—A. C. *Faithful Bullie.

During the repainting of the cannon in Crewe Park the men tilted one of them, and to their surprise out rolled a Bullfinch's nest and young. They gently placed the nest and young in a tree close by, and the faithful mother soon began to feed and care for them.—Sent by Annie Elks (age 12), 99, Cemetery Road, Crewe.

Be-e-Quick.

At the bottom of our garden every morning may be found a fine large cock Thrush which sings all the day long. It is always in the same place. It seems to say, "Be-e-quick, be-e-quick, be-e-quick"; and then it will warble loudly. In a tree is another Thrush, and when the first Thrush says "Be-e-quick," the other will say it in turn.—Sent by E. Bryan (age 14), Parkin's Yard, Codnor, near Derby.

My Two Finches.

I have a hen Greenfinch and a hen Bullfinch in my aviary, with some other birds. They used to feed each other a lot. When the breeding season came round they built a nest, and both laid their eggs in it. The Greenfinch laid five and the Bullfinch four; then they both sat on them—one on top of the other. But they did not get any young ones, unfortunately.—Sent by Harold Tunbridge (age 14), Nethercott, St. Marks, Cheltenham.

*A Strange Nesting Place.

Last spring a Robin and her mate were looking for a nesting place, and flew through a window in a church. The church was very quiet. They decided to build their nest in one of the pews between two Bibles. Then they flew out and brought back their twigs, leaves, grass, and hair. On the next Sunday an old lady went to her place in the church and was surprised to see the nest partly built. A week later the nest was finished, and in it were five speckled eggs. On the next Sunday there were five baby Robins; and in time they flew away into the green fields.—Sent by May Potter (age 12), 29, Broslev Wood, Salop.

In the Courts.

Two Claimants for a Parrot.

In June last a Parrot belonging to Mr. Sidney Smee, of Kingston-upon-Thames, was taken out of its cage to enable it to stretch its wings, when, to the surprise of its owner, it flew away and did not return. Later Mr. Smee recognised the bird by its voice in the cage of a Teddington lockkeeper, who, however, vowed the Parrot belonged to a Mdme. Volkman, of London, to whom he handed it over.

The lockkeeper admitted finding the bird, which, on Mr. Smee's appearance, engaged him in conversation in a Parrot's familiar, if disconnected, style. Mdme. Volkman, on being applied to, stated that the bird had, in turn, escaped from her house.

On Saturday a Kingston Bench decided that the lockkeeper must restore the Parrot to Mr. Smee under penalty of £5.—"The Globe."

Bournemouth and District C.B.A.

First annual summer ramble took place on July 27th, when a small party of members comprising Messrs. W. R. Basten, M. Cook, J. Cutler, R. N. Churcher, H. Goodland, C. Howard, C. Martin, H. Trewin, G. W. Jones (chairman of committee), and W. O. Brooke (hon secretary), drove to Heron Court, the seat of the Earl of Malmesbury. By the kind permission of the Earl (President of the Association), a five hours' stroll round the grounds was thoroughly enjoyed, and many interesting features on this beautiful estate were inspected under the kindly guidance of the Earl's coachman, Mr. J. Cutler. Ample justice was done to a good tea laid by Mrs. J. Cutler on the grass plat in front of her residence. The party returned at 8 o'clock, having spent a pleasant time together.—W. O. BROOKE, hon. secretary.

Should Birds be Kept in Cages?

The Attitude of the R.S.P.C.A. and other Societies Towards the Catching and Caging of British Birds.

In our last instalment we drew attention to the correspondence which had taken place in "Truth," (the well known weekly journal) concerning the destruction compassed on fruit farms by the ever increasing hosts of birds, and Blackbirds, Thrushes and Starlings in particular. In its issue of July 20th, the editor of our contemporary gave his view of the matter. He wrote:—

During the last week or two I have been receiving numbers of letters, and publishing as many of them as I can find room for, on the vexed question of the predatory habits of birds towards the early summer fruit. Men's passions always run on high on this subject with the coming in of the strawberries, and I do not desire to draw the fire of any belligerent on myself. But I wish that my correspondent who maintains that Blackbirds never touch a strawberry till it is over-ripe, and then only in search of the slug that is always there at that time, could tell me why also these exclusively carnivorous vermin attack my cherries. I do not find slugs up my cherry trees, nor any insects inside the fruit. But I observe that the Blackbirds will strip the stone bare in the search for their animal food, and I will swear that they take away what they pick off, even if they don't swallow it. Moreover, while counsel for the defence asserts that they never touch a strawberry till it is over-ripe, I find that they will never leave a cherry till it is really ripe. If I want cherries, then, I must pick them while they are colourless and hard. If I leave them a day too long the Blackbird is up before sunrise, and gorges and chortles till he sees me coming out. I wonder, too, what the bird is that removes—I will not say eats—my red currants the moment they are red, and what sort of animal food he finds inside them.

In the next issue of "Truth" (dated July 27th), the correspondent referred to, the writer under the initials "E.G.E.." seemingly finds the editorial questions somewhat difficult of answer,for apparently he is unable longer to treat the matter in serious vein. Of what value is his reply can be gauged by the following extract:—"I am invited to defend certain Blackbirds against whom a charge of stealing cherries has been preferred. If my much-malignod clients did as alleged, the act was due to their exceeding courtesy. In the innocence of their hearts they entirely believed that the complaintant had provided the cherries for them exclusively, as some consideration for service duly rendered in song. They did not like to hurt his feelings by refusing those cherries, although they would have greatly preferred meat diet—known to the vulgar as "grub." "Complaintant" does not say that he provided animal food in order to test my clients' predilection in its favour; therefore it must be presumed that he omitted to do so—a most culpable omission; for was he not thereby tempting my guileless clients to take that which was in no sense a forbidden fruit, but one thrust ostentatiously before them? If, then, they did unwittingly take those cherries, I say that the onus rests wholly upon "Complainant's" shoulders, inasmuch as the tempter and not the tempted has ever been deemed the actual wrongdoer."

Whether such an "Answer" as this merits being dealt with in a serious vein may well be questioned, but the editor of "Truth" takes the opportunity of summing up the situation in the appended trenchant paragraph:—

"In another column I publish a letter in answer to my inquiry about the Blackbirds who consume my cherries. The theory that the birds suppose the cherries to be provided for them as a reward for their singing is in the highest degree fanciful, both on the part of my correspondent and that of his clients. . . The song of Blackbirds, Thrushes, or even Rooks, like that of human beings, may be very pretty at the right time and place, but becomes an unmitigated nuisance when you are compelled to listen to it against your will, as you so frequently are. In the small hours of the morning it is calculated to awaken the very worst passions in human nature. The opinions of Blackbirds about cherries are clearly revealed by their demeanour. They do not think I plant cherry trees out of affection for birds. They are not even Socialists, holding that the kindly fruits of the earth belong to all creatures in common. They consider that my cherries belong, not to me, but to them exclusively. A year or two ago, when they had not been able to remove the whole of the fruit as soon as it was ripe, I stood under a tree while my gardener went up to gather the few cherries that were left. The Blackbirds fluttered about, abusing him and swearing at him in precisely the same language that they use to my cat when he is out in search of a hot breakfast or lunch. My man remarked that they would have pecked his eyes out if they had seen the chance, and I have no doubt that they would have attacked him had they been in sufficient numbers. Obviously they regarded him as a thief looting their property. I am glad, at any rate, to see that the advocatus diaboli does not attempt to deny that Blackbirds eat cherries. That being so, he will not convince many people that they do not eat strawberries. The impression that I have derived from the eternal controversy on this subject is that birds vary their diet from time to time according to circumstances, and that people who write books on natural history, or letters to newspapers, denying the predatory habits of this or that bird, generalise too widely from limited evidence or evidence which has passed out of date. The enormous increase of wild birds in England since the Legislature first interfered for their protection is very likely to have compelled them to extend their dietary, so that the present generation will eat what their forefathers turned up their beaks at. When this subject was under discussion in 'Truth' a year or two ago a friend of mine related an experience which illustrates this point. He had an argument with one of his men as to the benevolent intentions of a flock of Starlings who were busy in his wheat-field. The man—an elderly countryman—contended that no Starling was ever known to eat grain. My friend fetched his gun, sent a boy into the wheat, and give the Starlings two barrels as they rose. He opened the crops of a dozen or more and found them all full of wheat. He himself, he said, had been brought up in the belief that Starlings only ate grubs and insects, and were "the best friends of the farmer." He thought that this was very possibly true at a time when Starlings were rare in England by comparison with what they are to-day, but that, having increased ten, fifty, and a hundredfold, they were compelled to try new food, and, having begun by eating corn of necessity, they had acquired a decided taste for it. This sounds plausible enough, and I have no doubt that the same thing is true of a great many birds besides Starlings."

We venture to think that this further correspondence in "Truth" serves most conclusively to clinch our own statements that any scheme of complete bird protection must react disastrously upon the interests of fruit and grain growers if it is ever brought to pass. We take leave to question whether any such unreasonable and purely sentimental piece of legislation will ever be tolerated. It is not to the interests of the community at large that it should be. The present Wild Bird Protection Acts are sufficiently stringent to serve all practical purposes—too stringent, indeed, in the case of certain species of birds, as their enormous multiplication (they have become little short of a nuisance in some districts) in recent years conclusively establishes. The provisions of the various Acts might well be brought up to date, we agree, and certain anomalies resulting from their loose construction be put an end to; but any contention that extended protection is needed in the case of our commoner British species is distinctly and absolutely contrary to all real evidence—sentiment is no substitute for fact!

An Interesting Move Made at Cardiff.

Our attention has been directed by that well-known Cardiff fancier, Mr. H. J. Ford, to the action recently taken by the Cardiff and District C.B.S., anent the protection of birds in their town. We will let the extracts from the "Western Mail," and "Evening Express" speak for themselves. Mr. Ford's letter to us is as follows:—

SIR.—Some two years ago the Cardiff Naturalists' Society wrote the Parks Committee, asking that body to stop the catching of certain birds. The result was that shortly afterwards an order came out stopping all catching in the borough of Cardiff (dated the 9th day of September, 1908). A few months back we (the Cardiff and District Cage Bird Society) thought it was the right time to get the law revised, so we appointed a deputation to wait on the Parks Committee at the Town Hall, and the meeting came off on Monday, the 25th of July. This deputation, with our old friend Mr. Sivill at its head, was very kindly introduced by Councillor Dr. Robinson. This is the report of the meeting in the "Evening Express" of that same day:

"Why these laws for the rich and the poor?" demanded the spokesman of a deputation to the Cardiff Parks Committee on Monday. The speaker was Mr. Sivill, who, with other members of the Cardiff and District Bird Fanciers' Society, attended to ask the committee not to enforce the order made two years ago with regard to the capturing of wild birds within the city boundaries. Mr. Sivill said they wanted the committee to restore to them their birthright. In prohibiting the catching of wild birds within the city boundaries they also prohibited the keeping in captivity of freshly-caught birds. He did not know why they, as working men, should be put upon by the Naturalists' Society. The members of the latter said it was cruel, but they might start a little nearer home. They might stop their wives and daughters from wearing the feathers and plumage of the best of our wild birds.

The Lord Mayor: Hear, hear.

Mr. Sivill added that they might stop their sons from collecting the eggs of wild birds from the nests in the hedges. Only last year the eggs from two Nightingales' nests were taken within a stone's throw of the city boundary. Then what about the chasing down of the stag, the fox, and the hare, and the ruthless shooting of the Partridge, the Pheasant, the Grouse, and the young Rook in the tree? Just within and without the city boundaries birds were still being caught by professional bird catchers, and it would take half the police force to stop it.

On the motion of Mr. John Mander, it was agreed to obtain from the town clerk a statement of their powers under the Order and from Mr. Pettigrew a return of the wild birds that frequent the parks. Meanwhile the matter was deferred.

The upshot of the publication of this report was a letter from the Secretary of the Naturalists' Society, which appeared in the "Western Mail" next morning (morning and evening papers belonging to the same company).

Sir,—In reading in the "Evening Express" the report of to-day's deputation to the Cardiff Parks Committee I am struck with the absence, either stated or implied, of any motive the Cardiff Fanciers' Society and their deputation may have for their proposal that the Wild Bird Protection Orders should not be enforced in the city of Cardiff. Is it the wish of the "Fanciers" that their week-ends and spring and summer evenings shall be free to pursue "their birthright" sport of catching and trapping the wild birds in the manner so horribly common in this district before the adoption of this Act? Are our parks to be denuded of the birds which, though rare in comparison with some, are to be seen and heard daily by all and any of those who walk in our splendid open spaces, and to which the "Fanciers" have access in common with all inhabitants of this city? What more do they want? Do they, with the help of the trap, or poor decoy bird and nets, birdlime, or other "sporting" methods, wish to catch these songsters in order that the dealers' shop may be replenished as aforetime with birds that are left to "rot" away a few weeks of life in three cubic inches of wire and wood? It is satisfactory that the committee referred the matter to capable officials, who will, no doubt, consider the matter with the seriousness that it deserves. For serious it is to all who interest themselves in this question in a public-spirited manner? For every six birds caught and trapped scarcely ever does more than one live. On account of their more brilliant plumage during the breeding season many adult birds are trapped and killed at that season resulting in most cases in the young in the nest being starved to death. The brutal practice of "decoy birds" is too well known to need description. For who has not seen the bird in the trapper's hand fluttering out its little life after hours of agonising endeavours to free itself from the tether? These and many other cruel practices will again become recognised sport when the order protecting the rarer birds is cancelled in Cardiff.

Members of this society have known for some time past that our present Lady Mayoress (Mrs. Chappell) long ago, in common with over 150 other mayoresses in England and Wales, willingly promised to refrain from wearing feathers obtained by the cruel destruction of beautiful birds Many members of this society act on the same kindly impulse. This society has not the)honour to number amongst its 500 members Mr. Sivill, the gentleman who backs up a very casual application with very unnecessary and inaccurate innuendo on the wives and daughters of our members, but we can give him a greater number of cases where birds are caught and destroyed and eggs taken than even he has quoted to the parks committee. Do the "Fanciers" wish to join the ranks of these exterminating sportsmen?—I am, etc.,

HON. SECRETARY,
Cardiff Naturalists' Society.

I may say that friend Sivill was not a bit put out about this letter—he knew something about naturalists' ways; they want their share of everything that is rare and beautiful, but we bird keepers must have nothing. This is the answer Mr. Sivill sent along to the "Western Mail" on the 27th of July:—

Sir,—I would like to ask the secretary of the Cardiff Naturalists' Society if it is a fact, as I am informed, that he is the holder of one of the finest collections of British birds' eggs in the kingdom. If so, what about the cruelty and destruction he writes about?

Now, what we, the Cardiff and District Cage Bird Society, and British bird fanciers in general, ask the parks committee to do is to withdraw or so alter the order procured at the instigation of the Cardiff Naturalists' Society two years ago so that we may be able to catch and keep a British bird without being liable to prosecution. We have no sympathy with the catching and destroying of our beautiful songsters wholesale, and we suggest that the chief of police have power to give or to refuse permits for bird catching, and I think it would stop a good deal of the wanton destruction that is complained about, especially by boys and "corner boys" who would rather catch birds than do an honest day's work.

As regards the bird-shop cruelty, the corporation have the power in their own hands if they like to put it in force. Where is the inspector for the prevention of cruelty to animals? The writer is hardly fair when he says that many of the adult bright-plumaged birds are caught in the breeding season. Thanks to the general Act of Parliament and men's common sense, I don't think there is much of that done now. As to decoy birds, I am not going to uphold the cruel practice, as the writer calls it. There is no doubt there have been cases of great cruelty reported, and it has generally been done by inexperienced or boy catchers, but there need be no cruelty, if a tame bird is handled in a proper manner. I may say I know what I am writing about, as I have been a fancier from my childhood, and I suppose I shall die one, with all due respects to the Naturalists' Society, as I am now nearer 70 than 60 years old, and I have no doubt that I could give the young secretary of the Cardiff Naturalists' Society a wrinkle or two if I felt inclined, but I will leave him to his butterflies, etc., while I regain my birthright, which I intend, God helping me, to do.

In answering my friend's last query, which is, "Do the fanciers wish to join the ranks of these exterminating sportsmen?" I may say "No," as I am afraid that their numbers are already too strong for my young friend to tackle. I may say I should be very sorry to imply that the wives and daughters of all naturalists wear feathers in their beadgear; but I don't suppose my friend will go so far as to say that they all refrain from doing so, which is no business of mine, only to remind our friends that there is plenty of room for them, if they want to bring forth the Millennium, to commence nearer home.

J. SIVILL.

The Secretary of the Naturalist's Society has not answered Mr. Sivill's letter of the 27th of July. up to the time of my writing this so I expect the birds' egg business has "knocked him out." It looks very much like it. I should think that a general movement of this kind throughout the country at the present time would prove of great benefit to fanciers and fanciers' society's.

Now that the municipal elections are close upon us it would, perhaps, be as well for those interested to ascertain the views of the different candidates and put the matter before them in a proper light, and get them interested in the subject. It is only by these means that we shall ever keep our birthright.

A Rare Tit.

The White-headed Long-tailed Tit has occasionally been met with in our woods in winter.

The Nest of the Oriole.

Each season we have a pair or two of Golden Orioles nesting in this country. The following notes penned by a well-known naturalist are particularly interesting: "The Golden Oriole very frequently rears its young quite close to houses, and even in towns, in avenues, and pleasure grounds. The site for the nest is usually in an oak, plane, or fir tree, at distances varying from twenty to forty feet from the ground. The nest is invariably suspended, cradle-wise, between a forked horizontal branch, the external materials being deftly woven round the supporting twigs."

GLASGOW & W. COUNTIES CLUB

Annual First Feather Show held July 30th at Templars' Hall, 122, Ingram-street, Glasgow. The weather was wet and dull, and the light not just the best, but Mr. J. Adams, who made the awards, got through the classes in good time, and his awards seemed well received. Six classes were provided—five for Canaries and one for Mule or Hybrid; and while the turnout was good, the quality of many of the specimens was also of a high order.

BANGOR AND DIS. F.S.

Second Annual Show, held July 27th, in the Penrhyn Hall, a well adapted place for the purpose, being well lighted and ventilated, and having ample room. The show being on a larger scale than last year, the entry was nearly double that of last year. Yorkshires headed the list in numbers, the quality being up to the standard. The novices were well to the front. The best class we have seen in North Wales, was that for 1910 birds. Norwich were down in number; a few typical birds, however, were amongst them. Crests, Crest-breds, and Borders were really good, but very few. The Dark Mule class was one of the finest we have ever seen. The winner here took the special for best bird, and for best lady's pet. The carded birds in this class were fit to win at good shows. Goldfinches and Greypates were a very even lot, very little turning the scale between most of the exhibits. The remaining British classes contained some grand birds. The Foreign bird class (chiefly Parrots) was of the highest merit. The members' classes were also good. Mr. Millard (the secretary), Mr. Aitkin (assistant secretary), Mr. Bacon (chairman), Mr. Evans (the treasurer), and a good staff of stewards, worked well together. Mr. J. Robson judged. Specials for most points were given in almost every class.

Young bird show, held July 28th, at Good Latent Mission Hall, Whitworth Street, Openshaw, the bad breeding season being blamed for the small number of entries. Mr. J. INVERNESS O.A.

Annual young bird show held in the I.O.G.T. Hall, Washington Court, on July 30th. There was a big increase in number of exhibits, and the quality showed a marked improvement on that of previous fixtures of this kind. The crest-bred shown by Mr. A. Smith is a bird of particular promise, as is also the yellow Norwich belonging to Mr. Hutchinson, and buff, the property of Mr. Ross. This buff was selected as best bird in show, and is certainly the biggest and chubbiest young Norwich we have seen for quite a long time. Mr. K. Maclean (Forres) judged, and gave general satisfaction.

CAMBRIDGE.

A Great Holiday Show.

Cambridge "Mammoth" Show scored a huge success on Bank Holiday Monday. Magnificent weather favoured the fixture (a pleasing contrast to the state of things that prevailed a twelve-month ago), and the huge concourse of visitors made a sight to be long remembered. The Midsummer Common held plenty of attractions, a good sports meeting included, and the live-stock, flower, etc., displays were, on the whole, very good indeed. In our section the entry was down somewhat, but as every fancier one met had something to say about the early onset of the moulting season, this was doubtless the reason. Still, there was a good number of birds in the Cage Bird Tent, and included were many specimens of outstanding merit, so that the spectators who thronged the aisles practically all through the day, found plenty to interest and amuse them—the latter part of the programme being carried out in great style by the three fine Macaws exhibited by Mr. Stubbings. How the people love Parrots, to be sure! Everybody is at once on familiar terms with them: whether Lovebirds or Macaws "Hore's Polly. Hello, Polly! how are you?" is the greeting! Then everybody smiles audibly. And the joyous shrieks of three Macaws are particularly irresistible. The management of the cage birds was once again in the capable hands of Mr. A. E. Brooks, and this well-known fancier had everything in first-class order, and was courtesy personified. His stewards, Messrs. Gifford, Watson, King, Roff, Dean and Morley, were a hard-working band of thorough good fanciers. The general secretaries, Messrs. T. H. Brown and W. Driver, must have had a tremendous amount of work to get through, and the success of the show was a fine testimonial to their skill as organisers. The local hospital looked like benefitting appreciably through the efforts of the Cambridge fanciers, the profits going to this institution—a right laudable object. Mr. A. E. Brooks won both the local challenge cup and the cup for best Canary, while Mrs. G. E. Weston's Waxwing won outright the challenge cup for best British bird, this bird also achieving the remarkable distinction of beating a really fine Redpoll-Bullfinch Hybrid. Among the other winners of specials were Messrs. Watts, Williams, Watson, Gifford, Cocks, and Stubbings. The judge was Mr. John Robson.

EPWORTH.

The cage bird section of the Epworth Agricultural Show, held on August Bank Holiday, proved not the least interesting, as there were many admirers and plenty of good quality amongst the birds themselves. The exhibition was ably managed, and the secretary, Mr. W. E. Burrows, who was at the helm, is to be congratulated on the success of the venture. Mr. J. Wheldrake (Old Goole) judged the cage birds, and his awards appeared to give every satisfaction.

BEAUMARIS.

Annual show held in the Castle Meadows adjoining the town, on August 1st, in a marquee, this being the seventh show. It improves year after year in numbers and quality. The weather was very favourable in the morning, and as usual the show was well attended. We should be pleased to see a few more classes added to the bird section, especially for 1910 birds. Norwich held the pride of place, although few in numbers; Yorkshires mustered well; Goldies were very fair; Mules or Hybrids and British were few in numbers, the quality of the winners, however, being good. The secretarial reins were held by Mr. T. J. Jones. Special for best Norwich was awarded to Mr. W. H. Williams (Llangoed); the winner was the well-known wing-marked Dark Crest. Mr. J. Kershaw (Llanrwst) judged, and gave general satisfaction.

NEWBURGH AND DIST. G.S.

Annual cage bird exhibition held in connection with the Flower Show in a large marquee in East Shoe Park on July 23rd. After an interval of twenty years the committee restarted a cage bird section and it proved a step in the right direction. The interest taken in the section proved it to be one of the attractions of the show. Fifty-three exhibits were staged. Mr. D. Carstairs (Perth) placed the awards, and gave entire satisfaction. The birds were staged in the centre of the pot plants, and they harmonised well. The weather was all that could be desired, and the show a real success.

From August 8 to October 10, writes Mr. Geo. Goulden, my address will be: Downie Park, Kirriemuir, Forfar, N.B.

Ramsden's pure peppers are the finest obtainable. Ask for Ramsden's and don't be put off with substitutes or imitations.—(Advt.)

Kindly note my change of address from Oakfield Street, Cheetham, to 66, Wiltshire Street, Higher Broughton, Manchester, writes Mr. W. E. Espley.

Colour feed users, see last week's Twitterings for absolute proof as to whose is best in the world. None can come within 20 per cent. of Sandiford's.—(Advt.)

The statement of accounts of the City and Suburban A.C.B. for the quarter ending July 1, which reaches us from the secretary, Mr. Wynn, shows the splendid cash balance of £36 19s. 6d.

I have been elected secretary of the Eastfield Side C.B.F.S., writes Mr. R. Nuttall, and all future society communications must be sent to me at 16, Briggs Street, Forest Side, Sutton-in-Ashfield.

Mr. Walter Bayley, the well-known Border Fancier, will give a paper on "Moulting Birds for Exhibition," before the members of the Altrincham C.B.S., on August 9, writes Mr. P. Drinkwater, the secretary.

Owing to the Bury holidays taking place on August 9, the meeting arranged for that date has been abandoned, writes Mr. H. Jameson, secretary, Bury and Dis. C.B.S. Our next meeting will be held on September 13.

We have engaged Mr. A. Wake, of Middlesbrough, to judge the Canary section, and Mr. F. Marwood, of Thornaby, the British bird section, of our open show on December 17, writes Mr. R. Binks, hon. sec., of the Ferryhill and Dist. C.B.S.

The London and Provincial Ornithological Society are holding a show on November 2 and 3, open to the County of London and members, writes Mr. C. W. Law, the hon. secretary. Messrs. T. Heath, W. Mundell, and W. Swaysland have been appointed to judge.

The first meeting of the new society at Purley will be held at Gardner's Pleasure Resort, Kenley, on August 9, at 8.15 p.m., writes Mr. George Harris (3, Bourne Cottages, Kenley, Surrey). It is hoped all bird lovers in the district will make an effort to attend and help to ensure a successful meeting.

After trying several shops for publications respecting bird-keeping, writes Mr. R. Childs (Portsmouth), I came across a copy of CAGE BIRDS, and finding some very useful hints therein, I ordered a copy to be reserved for me every week. The result was that I was able to get my pair of birds to nest and they had four eggs. I wish CAGE BIRDS every success.

The following gentlemen have consented to judge our open show on October 29, writes Mr. C. C. Irvine, sec. of the Ayr and Dis. C.B.S.: For the Norwich section, Mr. R. Taylor (Preston); for the Border section, Mr. D. Holden (Muirkirk); for the British and Foreign bird sections, Mr. J. Maddison (Newcastle). We shall expect a record entry in return for the heavy expense incurred in bringing the above specialists such a long distance.

I write to thank you for the sketch which you have reproduced in CAGE BIRDS of my Nightingale. I have shown the picture to many of my friends, and it has been the means of their buying CAGE BIRDS. One of the men who work for me told me he had sent his son all over the town to get a copy, which he did after a bit of trouble, all copies having been sold. I might say that my 'Gale has taken five first prizes and several 2nds and 3rds, and I have only been showing him during 1909 and 1910. The bird is now looking very well considering the time of the season.—M. BRISCOE (of Briscoe and Son, Stockton-on-Tees).

HOUSE'S CANARY MANUAL

By C. A. House. Post free 1/2 (postal order).

A thorough and practical guide to the general management and breeding of Canaries, written by a well-known expert and judge. It contains chapters dealing fully with the breeding, etc., of every member of the Canary family, including the German (or Roller) Canary.

An illustration of each bird, by the master Canary artist, Mr. H. Norman, reproduced in the finest art style.

There are also exhaustive chapters on aviaries and cages, breeding procedure, moulting, exhibiting, diseases and seeds—a compendium of knowledge approached by no other book of its kind at the price.

CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

I have been five seasons in the cage bird Fancy, and I have not missed taking CAGE BIRDS one week. It has helped me greatly in many ways, and I wish it every future success. W. J. BAKER (Norwich).

Mr. Battye, of Huddersfield, has been appointed one of the judges for our forthcoming Town Hall Show, writes Mr. R. Blincoe, sec., of the Rochdale O.C. Kindly note that my address is 160, Drake Street, and not 154, Drake Street, as stated in error in a recent issue.

The new secretary of the London and Provincial O.S. is Mr. C. W. Law (9, Oak Villas, Archway Road, Highgate, N.), a letter from whom, addressed to his fellow-members, will be found in our correspondence columns. Mr. Law has gained experience as secretary of that other flourishing metropolitan society, the Highgate, Hampstead, and Dis. C.B.S. (a post he retains). His able management, indeed, has had much to do with the great success attained by this latter organisation.

Will members of the Uddingston O.S. who do not find it convenient to convey their stock to the young bird show on August 13, send them up to Munro and Junor's office, Old Mill Road, any time before 1.15 p.m. on the day of show, when any cages or boxes left there will be conveyed free of charge to and from the hall by a van kindly lent for that purpose by our worthy president, Mr. Thos. Prentice? writes Mr. Jno. Kilpatrick (Uddingston). I hope members will take advantage of so generous an offer. Note, entries will be taken in the hall.

OBITUARY.

We regret to have to announce the passing away of the father of Mr. Chas. Houlton, the well-known Hybrid and British bird expert, of St. Helens, who, we are informed, died on Tuesday last, August 2, in his 79th year, from senile decay. Mr. Houlton, sen., was in his time a great lover of our native birds, and devoted to the breeding of Mules and Hybrids, and he achieved considerable success in the hobby. Mr. Chas. Houlton's many friends in the Fancy will sympathise with him most sincerely in his great bereavement.

Mr. W. Hammacott (Swansea).

It is with deep regret that I have to record the death of Mr. W. Hammacott, of York Street, Swansea, which took place on July 26th, after a brief illness, which lasted only a few days, writes Mr. S. H. George, hon. secretary of the Swansea and Dis. C.B.A. Mr. Hammacott took a prominent part with his Border Fancies on the show bench, and was looked upon by his fellow fanciers as becoming one of the most prominent exhibitors in the country. The funeral took place on July 30th, at Llansamlet Churchyard, and the mortal remains were carried to their last resting place by the members of the society. A sorrowing wife and three little children are left to mourn his demise, to whom the deepest sympathy is extended in their sad bereavement.

I have perused with much pleasure and interest the booklets, "Disinfection of Birdrooms and Cages" and "Ailing Cage Birds—How to Cure them," in the "Nutshell Series" of booklets, writes Mr. Wesley T. Page, our Foreign bird specialist. They are very practical, and should supply a felt need; they should certainly form part of the outfit of all bird fanciers. Intelligently used, they should save the life of many an avian pet. Even in very serious cases, they will prove invaluable in the interval while expert advice is being obtained for special cases.

The London County Council's "island site," which has of late years been such a landmark in the Strand, is soon to be the scene of great activity, for the French Palace Development Syndicate has now practically completed the arrangements for its "Paris in London" scheme. The permanent exhibition of French Arts and Industries, which will be of much educational value, will be housed in the Palace, and the promoters are of opinion that the reproduction of Paris boulevard life (which is a part of the scheme) will certainly tend to brighten London a great deal.

I like CAGE BIRDS, writes Mr. John B. Thompson, South Portland, Maine, U.S.A., very much, and have received a lot of valuable advice through it. I don't see how I could get along now without it. I have, I may say, had a fairly good season with my birds, and have 40 on the perch—2 hatched to-day (July 19)— and I have four more on eggs for the last round this year. I am rather an amateur in the bird fancy. I have a room fitted for them 14 x 20 feet facing due south, sheltered from the north by my dwelling house, with windows on three sides, and a roof window, which make it light, and plenty of sun and good ventilation. I have had three small lots of your British birds brought over, namely, Crests, Norwich, and Yorkshires, but I can't say that I have very good ones, as I have never showed any, there being only one bird show near here, that is, in Boston sometime in January.

The Song of the Woodlark.

Nearly everybody is familiar with the cheerful song of the Skylark, but comparatively few have heard the Woodlark singing in the open. His music is totally distinct from that of the Skylark, being more whistling and flute-like, sweeter in tone, though lacking the power and variety of the commoner bird. Yarrell says of it: "Its soothing notes never sound more sweetly than while the performer is mounting in the air, by wide circles, or, having attained the summit of its lofty flight, is hanging almost stationary overhead."

ALL THE YEAR ROUND

"Cage Birds" Brings Its Advertisers Results.

The replies to my last advertisement in "Cage Birds" were far too numerous for me to answer all.—C. SMITH (Derby).

With regard to my last advertisement, I sold five birds on the Saturday, and have had many other enquiries since, thanks to CAGE BIRDS.—Frank Cole (Dulwich).

I have had a few advertisements in your paper, "Cage Birds," and have effected sales without any trouble, having had many replies. I have been well satisfied every time.—J. PARKINSON (Lancaster).

My advertisement in "Cage Birds" was very satisfactory indeed; I have had replies from all over England and Scotland. I will certainly make use of "Cage Birds" in future.—F. ROGERS (London, N.)

Kindly thank all who answered my advertisement in your valuable paper, "Cage Birds." I had replies from all parts of England, Scotland and Wales. I had nearly a barrow-load of replies, so you see what a task I would have had to answer them all. That speaks for itself what a grand advertising paper "Cage Birds" is.—HY. CLEGG (New Marske-by-the-Sea).

Another White Swallow.

While golfing on Stillorgan Park course recently I observed a white bird flying along with Swallows, writes a correspondent to "The Irish Times." As it flew close by me I saw that, beyond doubt, it was a white Swallow, both its form and action corresponding to those of the ordinary bird.

Are Swallows Polygamous?

For several days past I have been watching the Martins building their nests under the eaves of my house, writes Mr. E. Weaver, to the "Eastern Daily Press." I am certain that in many instances more than one pair of birds help to build a single nest. I have tried to account for this. Are Swallows polygamous, or do those whose nests are finished help their less fortunate fellows?

Did the Cuckoo Eat Peas?

A Cuckoo was hatched a short time ago in a Hedge Sparrow's nest in my garden, writes Mr. E. E. Trower in "Country Life." The Cuckoo is now able to fly, and I have repeatedly watched him sitting on the edge of a seed-box, while the foster-parents flew to and from a row of peas to him and placed food in his beak. On examining the peas I found that my crop had suffered considerably.

Interesting Wedding at Crewe.

On July 27 the marriage took place at St. Paul's Church, Crewe, of Mr. T. L. Hancocks, the well-known Border Fancy enthusiast and popular secretary of the Crewe and Dis. O.S., writes Mr. J. C. Heator, the assistant hon. secretary of the society. The bride, who was charmingly attired, was Miss Lizzie Dobson, fourth daughter of Mr. R. Dobson, of Earle Street, Crewe. The Rev. J. D. Jenkins (curate of St. Paul's Church) officiated. The presents were numerous. After the reception the happy couple left for Scotland, where they were to spend their honeymoon.

The Stuffed Canary.

A jovial machinery broker of Birmingham has been recently getting some fun out of a stuffed Canary, according to a writer in the local "Daily Mail." He states that the great joke of this gentleman was to place the Canary on a beam in the most inaccessible corner of his dusty shop, and then to work upon the feelings of susceptible persons by telling them that it was the particular pet of one of the nurses at the General Hospital, who was crying her eyes out over the loss of her favourite songster, which has escaped from its cage and flown into the shop. Chivalrous young men would clamber over dirty old machinery and brave the dust and cobwebs of years at the thought of a pretty young nurse in dire distress, only to find after they had smothered their clothes and got as black as sweeps that the Canary was stuffed with sawdust. One morning this week, happening to be passing the machine shop, I noticed a small crowd assembled in the roadway staring up at a tramway standard. Following their gaze I espied our old friend the Canary perched jauntily on the spike at the top, and naturally I stopped to await developments. I hadn't long to wait either, for the excitement grew more intense every moment, and one ardent individual quickly threw off his coat and volunteered to have a try to catch the Canary. He laboriously swarmed up the pole, and the onlookers' faces as the man got nearer and nearer and still the bird stood there were a picture to behold. At last he got within reach, and stealthily taking off his cap made a desperate and successful lunge at the bird. With an excited "I've got him," he slid down the pole, but when he reached the ground and looked at his prize words failed him—and the machinery broker, who had been an interested spectator, retired into the dark recesses of his shop to hide his feelings.

THE PROHIBITION OF THE SALE OF PLUMAGE.

In the House of Commons Mr. Alden (Middlesex, Tottenham), in asking leave to introduce a Bill "to prohibit the sale or exchange of the plumage and skins of certain wild birds," said (according to "The Times" report) that the matter was urgent. The President of the Board of Trade and the Secretary for the Colonies were consulting together as to the best way in which legislation could be passed in order to obtain the protection of wild birds exported from our Colonies and Possessions. There were Acts of Parliament in force in nearly all our Colonies and Possessions, but there were certain of our Colonies from which the skins and plumage of rare birds were exported against the wishes of the people. These skins and plumage were, he was sorry to say, exported for the most part to London and Paris. The object of his Bill was to try to prevent the absolute extinction of a few rare birds. The Bill that passed the House of Lords in 1905 prohibited the importation of the plumage of almost all birds. He had ventured to include in the schedule of this Bill only a few birds that were on the point of extinction, but which could be saved if this Bill, or a Bill drafted by the Board of Trade, were passed into law within the next year or two. There was a law in Australia to prevent the export of the plumage of certain rare birds, one of which was the Emu, yet last year over one thousand Emu skins were catalogued for sale in London—all smuggled out of Australia. A number of species of Humming birds were almost extinct. In Trinidad the number of species had been reduced from 18 to five. The skins of 25,000 humming birds had been catalogued for sale in London during the past year, and enormous quantities of plumage of birds had been found in the possession of men arrested for plundering birds in the reservations. In the North Pacific reservations three men had been assassinated while protecting the reservations against the bird robbers. The senior member for Oxford University had introduced a Bill similar to this, and many members on either side were interested in the subject. He believed that if the facts were known there would not be the opposition there was from two or three members to save rare birds from absolute extermination. (Hear, hear.) The wings were torn from the bodies of birds while yet living during the breeding season, and the young were left to starve, and so the species must become extinct. It was a matter of urgency, and he earnestly hoped the Bill would become law. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. Carlile (Herts., St. Albans), was sure they were all in sympathy with the object, but he feared the Bill would not affect what the hon. member desired, the preservation of the birds. The sale or exchange of the plumage might be prohibited in this country, and the result would be that the industry, undesirable as it was in many ways, would be diverted from London to Continental towns. It was useless for one nation to move in this way. A good result might follow an international arrangement among civilised countries who desired the preservation of these beautifully plumaged birds, but that Bill would only result in diverting the trade to other countries.

The Bill was brought in and read a first time with cheers. (We understand, however, that it cannot hope to become law this year, owing to pressure of other Parliamentary business.—EDITOR.)

No Tawny Owl in Ireland.

The Tawny Owl which is found in the wooded districts throughout England, is not found in Ireland. For some unexplained reason this fine bird does not favour the sister Isle, but Ireland is favoured by many birds seldom seen in England which are quite as interesting.

Flight of the Gannet.

The flight of the Gannet is decidedly grand. The bird swoops along at a prodigious rate, one flap of the wings being sufficient to carry it a great distance. At first it appears as a speck on the horizon. The long-pointed wings have a way of swinging it through the air, so that in a few seconds the great bird looms up close, and in a few more is out of sight behind the next headland.

Fruit Pickers.

Blackbirds and Starlings are no doubt the chief destroyers of fruit in our gardens, and some of the Warblers in a lesser degree. But few would suspect the tiny Blue Tit of being a lover of fruit. Yet he will occasionally help himself to cherries and raspberries. But his appetite is small compared to the larger birds', and so he does scarcely any damage, and for that he amply repays by the caterpillars he destroys.

CANARY QUERIES.

Young Dying.

H.C., B.—Your feeding is at fault, and is the cause of your loss. If the bird that was ill when you wrote is still living, put it in a small cage and keep it in a nice, warm position for a few days. But be careful the place is quite free from draughts or extreme fluctuations. Give it a vessel-ful of plain canary, and each day a piece of bread the size of a hazel nut, scalded with milk, drained, and sprinkled with soft sugar. In addition, give a pinch of maw seed every second day, and on the alternate days a small pinch of summer rape. Continue this diet for a week. In the drinking water give for one day six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts as will cover a threepenny-piece, and after this two drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid in the water for one-half of each day for three or four days—give this, say, last thing at night, and throw away and replace with fresh pure water next mid-day. You may with advantage also treat the other young bird on these lines for a week, but you need not move it to a particularly warm place. After this treatment feed both birds on a staple of plain canary. Every second day give each half a teaspoonful of rape, and on the alternate days twice each week half a teaspoonful of hemp, and on two other days the same quantity of egg food or bread and milk. See they have clean gritty sand in the cage. Give plantain stalks or seed stalks of shepherd's-purse in limited quantity, but no other green food for a time.

No Success.

J. F.—The seed of which you sent a sample is a mixture of fair quality canary, good rape, and hemp, bad inga, and good white millet. As a mixture, even if all were good, it is quite unsuitable for young Canaries to be weaned on to. Whether your egg food was good or not I cannot tell from the meagre details you give, but I have little doubt your feeding is the main cause of your loss. It is now too late to allow the hen to go to nest again, but if you have any more young ready to leave the parents, when you remove them place them in a moderate-sized cage for a few days. Continue to give the egg food daily, but gradually decrease the quantity, and keep a vessel full of good sound canary seed—not a mixture—sprinkled on top with summer rape in the cage. Give also a small quantity of cracked hemp. As soon as you see the birds cracking canary easily withdraw the other items by degrees, and get them on a staple diet of plain canary with a pinch of rape every second day, a small quantity of bread and milk, or egg food, twice a week, and a pinch of hemp on two other days each week. If they should then begin to sit thick, at once give the bread and milk sprinkled with a little soft sugar and maw seed daily until symptoms are quite removed. Get the Nutshell booklet, 2½d., from our manager, and read it. It may help you towards success next season.

Lost Energy.

C. W. H. (Dublin).—If you had said how you fed and treated the bird, and where it was kept, I should have been in a better position to advise you. I am inclined to think the loss of energy is the natural outcome of loss of youth, but still, your treatment may also have much to do with it. The overgrown claws should certainly be clipped, and the feet quite clean in lukewarm water, then hold one claw at a time between the tips of the thumb and finger of the left hand, the bird being held with its back to the palm and head towards wrist in the left hand, and hold the claw up in front of a good light. You will see a thin pink streak running part of the way along the centre of the claw, showing how far the blood circulates. Nip the claw off with a pair of nail scissors just short of that pink streak. Treat all alike. Keep the bird in a place well ventilated, and not overheated, but see that it is quite free from draughts and great fluctuations of heat. See that cage is quite free from red mite. Feed on a mixture of three parts canary to one part summer rape as staple. Every second day for the next fortnight give a piece of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut sprinkled with soft sugar, and on the alternate days a pinch of a mixture of equal parts maw and gold of pleasure. Give a spray of green food daily. Allow it to bathe freely if it desires to do so. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and a pinch of Epsom salts every second day for a week, and in the following week six drops of tincture of gentian and four each of tincture of steel and aromatic sulphuric acid every second day.

Brevities.

A Mixed Lot (L.C.B.S.).—You do not say how wide the 5ft. or 6ft. aviary is; but, anyway, Chaffinches and Cutthroats are not very sociable companions for Canaries in such a limited space. You should not overdo the number of varieties of such widely different classes of birds in a small place of this kind. If you do make the experiment you need only add a fair amount of summer rape and canary seed to the usual seed mixture supplied for the other birds, and give a little bread and milk, or egg food, or crushed plain biscuit, now and again for the benefit of the Canaries.

Canary Seed (Rowley Elston).—I cannot presume to say whether any given sample of seed is Spanish or South American. As long as it is sweet and of good quality it is quite immaterial where it is grown. Much of the so-called Spanish canary never rested on Spanish soil. The sample sent is rather small and a trifle thin, but is well ripened, clean, and sweet, and of good quality. As regards the price, you should have said the number of pounds there are in your peck, as this varies. If 20lb. pecks the seed is cheap at the price you name, but if only 14lb. pecks it is only just value for money; which, after all, should please anyone.

Feeding During Moult (Young Beginner).—It depends to a certain extent upon the variety. If a breed that is not colour-fed there is really no necessity to make any more material change than giving a pinch of maw daily during the first part of the moult and substituting a few grains of linseed daily towards the end. A little egg food or bread and milk twice a week is useful, and a supply of nasturtium and marigold blooms will tend to add bloom to the feathers, as also will twenty drop doses of Chemical Food and a few blades of saffron in the water two or three times a week, and at the end a small crystal of sulphate of iron a few times tend to add tone and natural depth. Bathing should be allowed quite freely if the birds do not appear to suffer afterwards. If you are colour feeding, of course egg food with colour must be given daily instead of the above casual allowance.

Canary Querists should send to our publisher for "Canary Breeding for Beginners," 7d.; "House's Canary Manual," 1/2; and "Yorkshire Canaries," 1/-, post free.

Separating Pair (A. B. G.).—Certainly. You should separate the birds as soon as possible now, and by no means allow them to begin nesting again. If the hen will feed the young by herself you should take the cock away at once and keep him out of hearing of the hen, when you might leave the young with the hen until moulting was about to commence, provided she did not ill-treat them; or, at any rate, let them remain together until the young can pick well for themselves. If you know she will not go on feeding if he is removed, then leave them together until the young begin to get on the side of the nest, and then take away the hen, leaving the cock with the young to finish rearing them.

Outdoor Aviary (Constant Reader, W.G.H.).—You give only the height and width of the aviary, so that it is impossible to get at the floor space. Theoretically, a square foot of floor space should be allowed each bird to ensure hygienic and wholesome conditions over any length of time. This limit is frequently exceeded, especially when the space is a good height, as yours is, but it is always adding to risks from insanitary conditions. If the birds have been bred under normal conditions of temperature, I should say, judging from the photograph, that they will succeed very well through the winter in this aviary, which seems to be snugly placed. When winter arrives put up some German travelling cages with the short bars removed and loosely filled with soft short hay near the roof for sleeping places, and there should be nothing at all to fear. Ordinary sawdust would do quite well for the floor when fine sawdust is not available, or you might with advantage use clean, gritty sand.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Collecting Ants' Eggs.

A. W. Rutter.—My own "collecting" has been only of an amateurish nature, and I don't know whether professional collectors gather their live ants' eggs in the same way. The plan I always followed is to stretch a sheet of newspaper on the ground by the ant hill, weighing down the ends, if necessary, with stones, etc. Then drive a spade into the hill, turning the nest completely over, exposing the eggs, etc. Retire very quickly, and go to another nest (if desired) and repeat the operation. On going back to the first nest, after a fair period of time has elapsed, it will be found that the ants have carried their eggs under the paper for shelter—quite clean and free from earth, etc. Scoop them up with something suitable into stout linen bags (or tins; the former are more easily carried) tying them up tightly, for some ants are bound to go in with them. When a nest is disturbed, the commotion amongst the inmates is something wonderful. Care must be taken to keep the ants from running up one's arms and understandings, or trouble may ensue. Pull your socks outside your trousers, and put on stout old boots which can be well greased round the uppers. I have used a mixture of soft soap and garden insecticide. It was very effectual. Cleaning is unnecessary if gathered as above, though bits of stick, etc., should be picked out after drying is over. To dry mine, I put tin and contents into a just moderately hot oven for some fifteen or so minutes, sufficient to destroy all life. The eggs do not want to be browned or shrivelled up. But the heat is easily tested by the hand, and the oven door should not be quite closed. When suitably dried just store away the eggs in tins (or coarse linen bags) in a cool place for future use. Everything depends on how the eggs are gathered—if clean and free (practically) from ants, they could simply be turned out on to an oven shelf covered with grease-proof paper, or, better still, hot bird-sand; or to be dried on hot sand in a frying-pan.

A Show Hawfinch.

W. T. Reed.—Your fancier friend is quite correct—size is an all-important point of the show Hawfinch. It is in this respect that young Hawfinches fail; very, very few can compete against a good adult (two or three year) bird in the matter of size, or, indeed, of colour either. A bird should be kept and given a chance to attain his best. Size, of course, should be consistent with the possession of plumage of silky quality fitting closely, and depth of colour. The ideal colour is as near a rich reddish chestnut as possible, deepening on the back and shading to brownish on the head. The chest and shoulders must be very broad, and the head hold and wide, set on a short, thick neck. A narrow-headed bird, or one "hammer-headed," as it is termed (narrow either at front or back) is to be avoided. The wing markings must be rich and well defined, especially the bars, also those peculiar looking blue-black wing-feathers with the metallic sheen. The bib is a most important marking. It should be as nearly as possible a perfect V shape (although a thumb-nail shaped bib is not objected to), clean cut at the edges, and dense, solid black in colour—the wider and bigger the better. A common failing with otherwise good Hawfinches is to run pale in colour on the forehead—such birds are generally, however, on the pale side in colour all over.

About Bullfinches.

W. F. Wilbee.—You must keep the "wheezy" Bullfinch in a warm room and out of all draughts. Give a course (10 to 14 days) of the medicine advised by our Mr. Yates, viz.: Carbonate of ammonia, 1 drachm; aromatic spirits of ammonia, 2 drachms; tincture of squills, 3 drachms; glycerine, ½ ounce; and water up to 6 ounces—one teaspoonful to be given fresh each night and morning in the drinking water (about three tablespoonfuls). As regards the food when moulting, to get a good result in the way of colour, I fancy many of the owners of show Bullies give them a little sweet pepper. It can be given amongst their seed (crushed) if the bird won't eat soft food, though most of them will do this. If natural colouring agents be used, Bullies should have a free daily supply of all the fruits and berries with colour in them, especially blackberries (in both red and black stages) and privet berries; in addition to these you have straw, rasp, elder, mountain ash (rowan), dew and other berries, black currants, and cherries, etc., to say nothing of the wild seeding plants, I am so frequently recommending, such as ripe plantain, dock, thistles, heather tops (where possible), shepherd's purse, chickweed, mouse-ear, groundsel tops, etc. Let your bird bathe freely. A most important point in the production of gloss on the plumage is a free use of the bath. If your Bullie is lax in this respect, he must be lightly sprayed every day with a fine sprayer (such as barbers use for bay rhum, etc.), which may be bought from most fanciers' specialists advertising in our columns. Never drench the bird. The stock seed mixture should be canary three parts, teazle two parts, linseed, summer rape and charlock one part each, by measure. Sunflower and safflower seeds should be offered fairly liberally, cracked, if necessary. The seed can be run through a seed mill, and have a little sweet pepper mixed amongst it. Don't give hemp.

Jays and Magpies.

W. Jay Stag.—It is hard to understand why readers send me the same old questions week after week; I seem, for instance, to have dealt with the hand-rearing of Jays and Magpies, and their food when adult, about once a fortnight since last spring. Yet here we are again! It seems like a waste of space to be continually repeating the same information. The male and female Jay, ditto Magpie, are alike in plumage. In young birds the biggest and most forward generally prove cocks. In adults, also choose the biggest and brightest coloured birds; the cock Magpie has a more brilliant, iridescent sheen on wing and tail feathers, and the cock Jay is more ruddy. When moulting the Magpie should have live food regularly (a trapped mouse or Sparrow, for instance, house (black) beetles, etc., and the Jay the same, while this bird should have a little tasteless pepper in its soft food daily after its wing-feathers are about three-parts grown; this will bring up its body colour. For adult birds a very simple and economical method of feeding is to utilise table scraps largely. As a stock food, you could use broken-up dog biscuits, or puppy cakes, or "Melox" (or some other similar dog meal). Soak with hot water, giving it crumbly moist, and mixing with it table scraps, cooked meat, potatoes, greens, gravy, etc. Give a few trapped mice, young and old Sparrows, and the like (if you can capture them), but not over much raw meat. You will find them accommodating in the matter of food. Eggs (raw and cooked), nuts (cracked) of various kinds, also berries and fruit are much liked. Beetles are other things they will eat. Jays I always find very partial to ripe fruit, and it is excellent for them; my Magpie is fond of it, too.

Brevities.

A Weed (W. H. Morris).—The plant sent is the hairy bitter cress, a very common weed, the seeds of which are found in most of the "wild seed mixtures" on the market. The leaves and flower stems are often used in salads.

A Weed (J. E. Leavesley).—The weed sent is the pepperwort, on which I have given several notes recently. It is related to shepherd's purse, and its ripe seeds are much liked by most Finches.

Linnet "Bald" (Rutland).—Note the remarks I made last week in reply to H. A. Collyer. I think the sole reason for your bird "sitting quiet" at times is that it is about to fall into moult; it is a very usual sign. You could try the dodge mentioned in the reply given T. Wilkinson this week.

Stuck In the Moult (T. Wilkinson).—"Stuck in the moult" is an expression denoting a bird which has commenced to moult, and has then completely stopped casting its feathers. A chill, or even a sudden change to cold weather, will bring it about. You might try hanging your bird's cage in the sun for a day or two, with just a light cover over to prevent direct rays striking upon the bird; that ought to start it off again.

Two Items (Illida).—Try for a week or ten days painting the inflamed joint with a very little tincture of iodine twice daily (morning and evening). A small brush is handy to do this with. I believe this will put the matter right. The Bullfinch you need not worry about. He will be moulting very soon now; I have five or six (cocks and hens), and only one has as yet commenced. Some birds drop into moult earlier than others. Yes; I certainly like this perfumed notepaper—the scent of the motor cars flowing through the office window does get a bit monotonous.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., etc.

Parrot Out of Condition.

E. Jackson.—I must really ask you to tell me a little more about the bird—how it is fed, and its demeanour in the cage. Please give me all the details you can. In the meantime, give one dose of Dinneford's Magnesia—one part magnesia to two parts water—this to form its drinking water for the one day. Follow this by well colouring the drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food, and if the bird will permit you to handle it, bathe its leg in hot water (not hot enough to occasion discomfort); dry with a cloth, and paint with whiskey. This can be done daily while the trouble lasts. Also examine the foot. It is possible there is a splinter or something similar in it; if so, this must be extracted. If it is merely a strain, do not excite the bird at all; keep it quiet, and Nature will do the rest. If you send me a little more information I may be able to give you more definite help.

Parrot with Decaying Beak.

Percy.—It is idle my attempting to prescribe a remedy from such details. At some periods of the year, there is a certain amount of chipping and paring away, but not to such an extent as you describe, and I cannot even attempt to guess at the cause. Unless you can give me fuller details I can only advise you to let your local vet. see the bird at once, as I should say there is something very seriously wrong. In the meantime you must diet it as under: Indian corn boiled till quite soft (it must be prepared daily, as it soon turns sour), also arrowroot and any other plain biscuit, made quite moist in water and Parrish's Chemical Food in equal parts. For one day let its drinking water consist of one part Dinneford's Magnesia and two parts water; this must be repeated as often as may be necessary at intervals of two or three days, to keep the bowels moving freely—but the voidings should not be watery loose. On others days well colour the drinking water with the chemical food. Note: Keep the beak well cleansed with diluted Condy's Fluid.

An Ailing Grey Parrot.

F. S. Elland.—The bird is suffering from the effects of a bit-of-everything diet, and it will take some little time to undo the mischief. I take it the maize is given dry; if it is boiled you must continue to so supply it till such times as you see it eating heartily of the dry seed mixture. You must not give tea, coffee, or milk sops, table scraps, nor any kind of animal food, or the bird will simply go from bad to worse. Diet: Seed mixture, half the bulk to consist of canary and white millet, and the other half of oats, hemp, maize, and sunflower seeds, the whole to be well mixed and a supply kept continuously in cage. In addition give such ripe fruit as it will take ad lib. Also give plain biscuits and nuts in variety. Keep a piece of cuttlebone and some water continually in cage. For one day in each week let the drinking water consist of Dinneford's Magnesia one part, and water two parts, and every other day the drinking water is to be well coloured with Parrish's Chemical Food. I should also get a box of honey and borax and put a little of this on its tongue daily. You had better persevere with above treatment for a month and then report progress.

Amazon Parrot Unwell.

G. W. Green.—You must send me more particulars. Are the "warts" soft or hard? Do they contain matter? What is the exact position of the one on the back? Also give me full particulars of your seed mixture. I expect the bird's mouth is too sore to appreciate the seed. Give it a little boiled maize daily; boil it till it is soft. It must be prepared fresh daily, as it soon turns sour. Get a box of honey and borax from your chemist and put a little on its tongue twice daily. Also keep the bowels open with occasional doses of Dinneford's Magnesia. Spray or cleanse the nostrils with diluted glycothymoline daily so long as the discharge lasts. A mop camel-hair brush is a good utensil to use, but it must be well cleansed for each occasion, and it should only be dipped into the quantity of solution or preparation required for the one occasion. Supply the information asked for, and I will try and assist you still further.

A Young Grey Parrot.

New Reader, Norton.—Anoint any bare parts daily with Spratt's "Pennacura," and if the bird will not let you handle it, use a long-handled camel-hair brush for the purpose. Continue to spray with the quassia solution. It will take to the dry seed in due course. Try putting a little under the boiled maize (principally for a young bird—canary and white millet seed, with a little hemp and a few oats); also give a piece of plain biscuit, slightly moistened with water. It will be all the better for ripe fruit regularly; try it with different kinds, it will find something to its liking among them. Most species are fond of apple cores and cherries. Continue to use the Parrot grit and cuttlebone. If it has hard water three times a day, you should be able now without risk to leave it in its cage. Give say, six doses of Dinneford's Magnesia—one part magnesia, three parts water, with three days' interval between each dose, but if the voidings become unduly loose, then a longer period must be left between. When not giving the magnesia, lightly colour the drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food.

Aviary Queries.

L.C.B.S.—Have this aviary as large as your convenience will permit, but I certainly advise its being made 3 ft. wide. If 3 ft. wide by 6 ft. long, it could contain 18 birds the size of a Norwich Canary, or, say, 6 of that size and 24 small Waxbills or Ornamental Finches. Use half-inch mesh wire netting, and see that ½-inch is not imposed on you as half-inch. I cannot advise keeping the Chaffinch with the others; they are very variable and uncertain in their demeanour, and rather liable to run "amok" among small birds. Spice Birds (Nutmeg Finches) are hardy and pretty birds. The outward sexual distinctions are infinitesimal, but the male is usually the more robust looking and cleaner marked bird, and his plumage more glossy; also his beak is slightly more stubby than that of his mate. A nice selection would be: Pairs each of Zebra and Bib Finches, Rufous-tailed and Long-tailed Grass-finches, Common and Green Avadavats, Grey and Green Singing Finches, Gold breasted and St. Helena Waxbills, Spice Birds, Bronze Munikins, and Silver-bills, with, say, two pairs of Canaries. Use natural branches as perches. If breeding results are to be the main aim, then only keep half the number given above. Diet: Canary, white and spray millet seeds, paddy rice, and a few oats. Green food: Fresh and tender lettuce, flowering (seeding) grass, groundsel and chickweed. A little of any kind of ripe fruit they will eat is very wholesome. Soft food when they are feeding young.

Parrot with Fits.

"Horace."—It is evident you are, in a measure, able to anticipate the occurrence of the fit; at such periods give a dose of bromide of potassium—three grains dissolved in a little syrup. This may be given two days running, and then after a day's interval. It should suffice, till the recurrence of another period of undue excitement; but these should become less pronounced and at longer intervals, and gradually disappear. In conjunction with the above give the Dinneford's Magnesia twice weekly, for, say, a month, so long as the voidings are not unduly loose. Dose: One part magnesia, three parts water. After an attack, treat as you previously have done, but give as little stimulant as possible. It should have ripe fruit daily ad lib. Seed mixture: Canary and white millet seeds two parts of each, and one part each hemp, oats, paddy rice, dari, and sunflower seeds, well mix the whole together and keep a supply continuously in the cage; a little of some good Parrot grit may with advantage be mingled with the mixture. A piece of plain biscuit, slightly moistened with water, is appreciated by most species of Parrots. A clean piece of cuttlebone should be continually hanging in the cage.

Grey Parrot Indisposed.

Hulbert.—In the case of a valuable bird, such as yours, I should advise you to let a fully qualified vet. see it without delay. However, if this is not convenient, give it, on receipt of this, a little milk sop daily. Prepare this so: Put, say, a tablespoonful of crushed biscuit, a teaspoonful of sugar and two tablespoonfuls of milk into a pannakin and boil in the usual way; when cool, stir in a little Scott's Emulsion, and supply to the bird. It must be prepared fresh daily. As soon as the bird takes to its seed again, the milk sop must be discontinued, as it is not wholesome as a regular item of the diet. Let it have ripe fruit ad lib. Give a little chilled, very weak brandy and water, twice a day as a stimulant; if it will not drink this give a few drops from a quill; also give four drops of Dinneford's Magnesia from a quill. Repeat this as may be necessary, to keep the bowels moving regularly. You should have written earlier, and I now much fear it is too late, and that the bird will die; in such case send the body off at once to our Mr. Yates for post mortem; he will tell you at once the nature of the disease, and whether it is of long standing or of recent origin, which I cannot do, from the details you are able to supply. Get a box of honey and borax and put a little on the bird's tongue daily; it will help to keep its mouth clear. You had better repeat query in seven days' time and report progress with fullest details, though I am fearing the bird will be non est when this reaches you. However, we must hope for the best, and if it still lives, should think there is some hope of its recovery. Infection sometimes is latent for a longish period, and then a chill, etc., causes it to suddenly develop, but only a post mortem would reveal this.

Brevities.

Budgerigars not Breeding (J. M. Parkes).—I fear I can add but little to my previous reply; some of the birds are evidently young, and I can do little more than counsel patience. Let nature do its work—your stock is from varied sources, and I take it one pair of them at least are imported, and these should ultimately settle down and throw off a fine robust progeny. Even if they do not breed this season, their keep is not a serious item and the result next season should be all the better. However, I should say some will be reared this year. I can only advise you to treat as advised in my previous reply, emphasising the need for as much seeding grass as you can obtain, and leave them to themselves. You might let me know how matters are progressing in a month's time.

Gray Parrot Unwell ("Oblidg").—Bathe and well cleanse the nostrils with diluted glyco-thymoline daily till the exudation ceases. Procure a box of honey and borax and put a little on the bird's tongue twice daily, so long as it lasts. Also for one day give the following as drinking water: Dinneford's magnesia one part, water two parts, and repeat this as may be necessary, at intervals of two or three days, to keep the bowels well regulated, but if the voidings become watery-loose you must stop giving the aperient. Diet: A seed mixture of two parts each canary and white millet, and one part each hemp, oats, dari, and sunflower seeds. Well mix the whole together; this will form the staple diet, but you must also supply ripe fruit, plain biscuits and nuts in variety. Keep a piece of cuttle-bone in the cage, and if it is accustomed to water, leave it in the cage constantly, if not, let it satisfy its thirst three or four times daily.

Crimson and Aurora Finches (E. M., Burlingham).—Crimson Finches are extremely beautiful birds, but very dangerous in a mixed company, and under any conditions two pairs must not be kept together. Their prevailing colour is various hues of crimson, irregularly spotted with white. They are about the size of a slim Canary. The Aurora Finches, on the other hand, are amiable, and also beautiful, slightly smaller, and of a little stouter build than the Crimson Finches—their plumage is a greyish-brown, softly undulated with lighter markings of the same colour. The larger wing feathers have their outer webs crimson, which is also the colour of the upper tail coverts. Diet for both species: Canary, and white millet seeds, also millet sprays, and I have also found them rather fond of "Paddy" rice; greenfood, little ripe fruit and a mealworm or two, or other insects, according to the season. Insects and soft food would have to be supplied liberally when they were feeding young.

The officials would do well another year to increase the number of classes for same. The day was fine, and the tent was crowded with visitors. Messrs. Gray and Bros. (Coundon) judged, and we heard no adverse comments.

OAKHAM.

Annual Show, held August 1st, in connection with the Rutland Horticultural Society. There was a nice display of cage birds, considering the awkward time of the season, when birds are not at their best. This accounts for some noted winners taking a back seat. Mr. Judd judged, instead of Mr. Bexson, who was unable to attend; and his awards gave general satisfaction.

WELLINGBOROUGH.

A nice show was held on August 3rd in conjunction with the Horticultural Society in the Dog and Duck Grounds. The birds were staged in the Pavilion (a very suitable place, it being quite free from draughts), under the capable stewardship of Messrs. Charlesworth and R. J. Howe, with Mr. W. Howe, the genial and enthusiastic secretary, at the helm. Several classes had to be cancelled, the cause, no doubt, being that so many birds have already dropped into moult. Although the number of exhibits was not numerous, the quality in many instances was really AI. Mr. T. J. Ambrose made the awards.

A White Swallow and Its Untimely End.

Sir,—While I was out for a ramble on the outskirts of Workington (Cumberland) with Mr. R. Lewis, we observed a White Swallow flying about. As we thought that it was a very rare occurrence, I decided I would write and let you know about it. But I am sorry to say this bird did not remain long with us, as it was found lying dead on the road by the head gamekeeper of the Workington Hall estate. It had evidently struck a telegraph wire and been killed. The gamekeeper has had the bird stuffed, and it has attracted a lot of attention. Wishing CAGE BIRDS every success, H. M. BELL.

A Warning Against Paint and Painters.

Sir,—I had just got a fine lot of young Canaries on the perches when the painters came and did the outside of our house. In less than three weeks I have lost 65 birds, both old and young. I find that I, like many others, did not know that the smell of paint and varnish would kill the birds, so I am anxious to warn breeders and fanciers, and I think it would be as well every now and again to put it in large type in CAGE BIRDS, especially just at the commencement of the summer. I hand-reared 12 lovely birds; now I have only four left, which I am trying my best to save, but it is very doubtful. I could make this letter very long with my tale of woe, but it would be useless. My object is to save others from the grief as well as the heavy work which I myself have had. I must put in a word for CAGE BIRDS. It is the best paper I know of, and I have learned a lot from it.

An Appeal to Members of the London and Provincial O.S.

SIR,—Having taken up the duties of secretary to the above society, may I, through your columns, make an appeal to all its members? Will you, fellow-members, do your utmost to support me at all our meetings and shows held throughout the year? It is quite evident that a secretary is powerless without the practical support of all his fellow-members. I am quite willing to devote my time and energy to the interests of the L. and P.O.S., and in return I shall expect all members to "buck up" and try to hold the position in the fancy which they have attained through the enthusiasm and hard work of their present and past officers. We are holding a show in November for members, and also open to all fanciers in the County of London. We are looking forward to holding a record show. Will you please help, and thus give me a good start with this, my first show as secretary of the L. and P.O.S.? We are giving increased prize money, besides numerous special prizes. I want plenty of entries, lots of money (tickets sold), and as many specials as you care to give. I trust that all members will accept this appeal in the right spirit, and at the same time remember the old motto: "United we stand, divided we fall."

In Praise of the Magpie.

SIR,—Permit me to give your numerous readers my experiences with Magpies. Our big black and white friend, the Magpie, we all admit is a very handsome and a very crafty fellow to deal with. Magpies frequent the high hedges of our fields, and also the underwoods. It is no uncommon sight to see Maggie perched up on the highest of our trees, for he and his companions are always on the alert, and keep an eye open for the wily gamekeeper and his gun, as they are one of his biggest enemies in the season of the rearing of young birds, and are continually sought after to be destroyed. My opinion is that there are two varieties of these birds, although both are of the same colour and habits; the difference is that those we frequently see about the fields are larger than those that inhabit our woods. Take the "Hedge Maggie," as we call him. He is a fine fellow, with his glossy sheen and long black tail conspicuous as he darts about among the flocks of sheep, alighting on their backs, and pecking among the wool for a few stray ticks, which they are very fond of. Now get to his nest, and you may be sure of having to encounter a rough time among the thorns, as the nest is usually built in the thickest part of the high hedges. The nest itself is a structure of thorns built over at the top so as to form a roof, with just a small hole at the side for "Mag" to enter by. The inside is lined with bits of wool and string of various colours, with a few dry roots as well, and if it is not molested in any way it is used, after being relined, for a number of years. The Magpie, as a rule, lays from five to six eggs, and you will find that the birds are very prolific, as they hatch and rear their young in a masterly manner. To espy one of these nests is not an easy job when the hedges are full of leaf and everything in Nature is in its Spring clothes. You will, however, see Mr. and Mrs. Maggie in the vicinity some weeks before house building operations commence, and they are always together until about the middle of May; then you will miss one of them (except in the early morning, when you may see them again). Now, to find their nest. If there are several high hedges round about you must watch them closely and you will find (if there are trees growing in the hedgerows) that the birds will fly towards one of these in leisurely fashion and will go down from one to another till they are close to their nest, when one will disappear from view altogether. You may by chance see "Mag" slide off from her partner, and you may not. But you will soon be afforded the pleasure of seeing Mr. "Mag" take himself off for a fly round the adjoining fields. Examine the hedge a few yards either side of the tree, and you will be sure to find Maggie's home. You will not disturb her very easily unless you are making up to her home, which I advise your leaving for some future time. The young ones are easily reared from the nest. Don't take them away too young; leave them in the nest until they are nine or ten days old. When you have them, put them in a large box with a few wood laths nailed across the front about one inch apart. Then put the box in the hedge. I advise laths in preference to wire netting, because there is no danger of their hurting their heads when reaching for food from the old ones, who will follow them as long as the box is in the hedge; and they will do the rearing for you. When you have had them caged a few days start to feed them yourself by placing bits of lean meat inside the cage. But this method must only be adopted when the weather is suitable, as if it is a very wet time you will find that they will be seized with cramp. We will suppose that we have got the birds safely home. They will now be able to cater for themselves, and you may congratulate yourself that you have some birds that always do well on the show bench if they are nicely staged; and if you don't want them yourselves, you have only to advertise them for sale in CAGE BIRDS, when you will have a small army of would-be purchasers.

T. W. PALMER.

Can it be a Chaffinch-Canary Mule?

Sir,—I have a young German hen Canary paired to a Chaffinch in an outdoor aviary. She built a nest in a "travelling cage" and had six eggs, all clear; but she afterwards made another nest and laid one egg only. This has hatched out, and the youngster is now nine days old. The remarkable thing to me is that the Chaffinch is over eleven years old. I have other younger cock birds in the aviary—Bullie, Linnet, Greenie, and three Redpolls—but this Canary ignored them and paired to the old bird. This is my first experience with bird breeding, not being able before to build an aviary or to keep many birds. Is this hybrid rare? A. MILES.

[Considering the circumstances under which the above bird has been bred, we are afraid our correspondent cannot with any confidence set it down as a Chaffinch-Canary Mule, a cross of which the Fancy has yet to see an accepted example. We know personally of a case in which a Canary apparently paired with a Chaffinch in an aviary, built, laid and hatched, the Chaffinch paying the young every attention and feeding them. Yet when they grew up and moulted, they proved to be ordinary dark Goldfinch mules—one of the Goldies in the aviary had seized an opportunity of fertilising the eggs of the Canary hen. No bird but the Chaffinch was observed to pay her any attention (ho would not tolerate them near his spouse); but the young "spoke for themselves," as it were. Mr. Miles had better wait until his bird matures before he comes to an opinion as to its parentage on the male side.—EDITOR.]

Feeding and Keeping Parrots in Health.

SIR,—An ideal way to keep Parrots is to have them on perches fastened to same at the end of long light chains, which give the birds great freedom. If a cage is used for your birds it should be roomy and of strong (unpainted) wire, with a swing and a perch or two in it. Eating and drinking vessels should be of glass or china, and not of zinc. The cage should be cleaned out every day, and the bottom sprinkled with coarse sand. Bread and milk may be given once a day. Indian corn, boiled and then drained dry and allowed to cool, may also be given. Seeds, berries, fruits, and nuts may be supplied in moderation, but too much soft fruit does not agree with Parrots when they are caged or in any way confined. Grains of almost every kind may be given, and the birds will be delighted with a bone now and then to sharpen their beaks on. Meat or salty food should be avoided, as this may bring on scurvy, which would cause the bird to tear out its feathers. A plentiful supply of fresh water for drinking and bathing purposes is absolutely necessary. Parrots should be kept warm, and a cover should be thrown over the cage at night in cool weather. When teaching Parrots to talk, the first word of a sentence should be repeated until they begin to say it after you It is best to teach them in the dark.

A Recipe for a Washable Distemper.

Sir,—Perhaps Mr. Barnes will be so good as to tell me how the distemper acts injuriously on either the birds or the cage after reading the following. I have kept and bred Canaries for fifteen years. During that time I have tried enamel, paint, and washable distemper (as sold by colourmen, etc.). This last seven years I have used nothing but limewash, made with freshly burnt lime, to which has been added one part salt to two parts lime, and the whole slaked with boiling water to a cream. I have given the cages two coats of this mixture; then put them before the fire to dry; and as soon as they were dry the birds were put back into them. And not the slightest sign of injury to either cage or bird has occurred. I think I can say without wishing to be thought egotistical, that I know whether a bird is alright or not. I can also tell Mr. Barnes that one of the biggest advertisers in CAGE BIRDS, a noted bird specialist by the way, says that nothing is so good as limewash for the inside of cages, and this gentleman has had more birds through his hands than have been seen, in all probability, by either Mr. Barnes or myself. My recipe only substituted silicate of soda for salt, with the idea of making the wash more durable; and (as Mr. Barnes knows) the soda is used for preserving eggs, so that it cannot be a very dangerous item. In the face of this, Mr. Barnes—and what I have written is true—kindly oblige a practical joiner by telling him how limewash, if made and applied properly, injures birds or cage. F. J. ROOK.

The Hand-rearing of Skylarks.

SIR,—A few lines on the hand-rearing of that beautiful songster, the Skylark, may be appreciated by your numerous readers. I am not going so far as to say which is the best kind of feed to hand-rear these birds on, but just wish to give them my own experience. Some years ago, when I started first raising these birds by hand, I followed an old book on birds, which gave the following: Dried and grated boiled sheeps' heart, and breadcrumbs and then finished off with the German paste which consisted chiefly of pea meal. I found that by that treatment I lost too many birds, chiefly from cramp and diarrhoea. But give them whatever you will they are very subject to cramp, and when they once get it there is not much chance of their recovery. Two years ago I brought up a fine nest of five. These were fed on a Lark food advertised in CAGE BIRDS which I happened to have by me. This I mixed with equal quantities of hard-boiled egg, and three spoonfuls of soaked ants' eggs. These eggs were soaked in cold water for 10 minutes. Sufficient of this mixture was made in a sloppy state by adding newly boiled milk just sufficient for the day's feed. The birds wanted feeding every two hours from 5 a.m. to dark. I don't think I have ever had any young ones before that came on so quickly. I always like best to get the early hatched birds, as I find that these are more cocks than hens. Plenty of chopped hay should be put in the basket so as to keep them clean, and they should be cleared out every day, or, if time, after every feed. After they are transferred to a cage they should have a shallow box put in their cage with dried road sweepings, as the birds are very fond of a sand bath. When they can feed themselves put in two tins, one with the soft food and one with seeds in. The hemp seed should be crushed. As there have appeared of late several very good recipes for Larks, it is hardly necessary for me to recommend any one particular. But plenty of ants' eggs should always be given. Also supply grasshoppers, spiders, and other various insects. The birds are also very fond of grated cheese and grated suet. Like other hand-reared birds, they should, as soon as possible after they are well on their feed, be caged separately, and hung out of doors. A box cage is best. I had one of my first reared birds live to over 15 years, and then he died through an accident. Some say that the adult caught bird makes the best songster, but I have had some good ones of both, and I much prefer the hand-reared one.

NIMROD.

One of Scotland's Successful Hybrid Breeders.

SIR,—I notice in last week's CAGE BIRDS that someone styling himself "Scotch Fancier" writes you regarding this year's breeding results. He says that I have bred two young Redpoll-Bullfinch hybrids, which is quite true, and that I bred two Goldfinch-Bullfinch Hybrids two years ago. Well, two years ago I bred nine Goldfinch-Bullfinch hybrids, six of which lived till the moulting stage, three of the six being clean moulted, and of those three I have still two left. He says that I confine myself to breeding common Canaries. May I inform him that I would not waste my time on such a fancy? No; my forte is hybridising, and has been since 1879, when I made my first attempt at breeding birds. I can tell him that I bred Goldfinch-Bullfinch hybrids nearly thirty years ago, and showed one at that time. I dropped the Fancy for many years, but I always took notice, when the opportunity occurred, of the progress made in mule and hybrid rearing. Five years ago I started again with the same idea of hybridising, and have been so far successful. This season I have bred five Canaries, and I don't think they are exactly "common" in the true sense; at least, if I had to buy muling Canaries, I would have something more than a common price to pay for them. I have a nest of mules from that same hen that these five Canaries are off, which might surprise "Scotch Fancier" by their markings. So, he might have consulted me before he sent in his report to your paper, and he would have been a little more accurate.

A Sick Sparrow in a Scullery.

SIR,—The following story of a Sparrow's devotion to its young was sent by a correspondent in Edgbaston to the "Birmingham Evening Despatch," and I thought it might interest the numerous readers of CAGE BIRDS: A few days ago a young Sparrow was noticed hopping about the garden in a pitiable condition. The bird was wet and shivering and apparently in pain, and the correspondent took it into the house. With careful attention it revived considerably, and was placed in a cage, which was hung on the wall at the rear of the house until it should sufficiently recover to be released. The Sparrow was soon noticed by its mother, who throughout the day would hover round the cage and bring its young one proper food. At night the bird was taken indoors and the cage was placed in the scullery so that it could be seen from the outside. The correspondent states that before he retired to rest he left a plate of food for the bird in the scullery in readiness for the morning, but when he came down he found the plate had been cleared and the old bird was fluttering about the scullery. It had entered through a small hole, not more than an inch square, in one of the glass panes and had fed its young one from food left on the plate, but was unable to return the same way as it entered the room. The following days the Sparrow fed its young one while in the cage outside, and two other nights it entered the scullery and fed it from the food left handy, but to the surprise of the occupants on the fourth morning they found that not only had the food been eaten up, but the young one was missing. Evidently the old Sparrow, after feeding the youngster, had moved the cage away from the wall so that the captive one could get out of a hole on that side of the cage and then assisted it in some way in getting through the broken window pane.

Concerning Goldfinches and Linnets and their Treatment.

SIR,—Perhaps I may bo permitted to say a few words on the favourites among British birds, as a catcher of 35 years. First I will deal with my old favourite, the Goldfinch—firstly, becauso it is undoubtedly the most popular and most widely known of any of our British birds, and is a great pet in all parts of the United Kingdom. As in the case of other birds, it has many different names; some call it the "London tailor" others "proud tail" and others "thistlefinch" (I suppose, because it is so fond of the thistle seed). The beautiful red face of the Goldfinch, with its black collar, yellow wings and rich brown back and chest, make it one of the prettiest coloured of British birds. The Goldfinch is found in every country. Some say that the finest are to be found around the hills of Cumberland and Westmoreland. I have had hundreds of both, but I can say that there is in Wales and here in Carmarthenshire as good a lot of Goldfinches as you will find in any part of the British Isles; and, again, I have caught in Somerset County as fine a lot as anyone could wish to see. The species will nest practically anywhere. Some say that it will nest in a holly bush, though in all my time I have not, I may say, seen one in such a place. But you will easily find a nest in a nut tree. Last season I had as many as seven nests within 20 yards of each other. You can also find the nest on the outer branches of oak trees. But the birds favour sycamore trees better than any, as its wide leaves hide the nest from the passer-by. The Goldfinch is the best of all Finches for building its nest small and neat. Some will tell you that the same nest is not used more than once, but I can prove that the same nest has been used to hatch two clutches of eggs, with just a little more dandelion tops to line it with. The young are easily taken with decoys and nets, and, thanks to my old favourite paper, CAGE BIRDS, and its advice as to the proper way of feeding birds in cages and newly-caught ones, hundreds are saved from careless or thoughtless treatment every season. It is utter folly to try and rear wild youngsters on hard hemp seeds, for instance, after they have been used to soft seeds. I have always soaked my hemp seed before cracking it, and I give a little inga seed. If I have had the birds off the hard seed I always give them hardheads with the other two seeds, but if from thistles I always give thistle with the other seed. Then I wean them from it, and I will guarantee that you will save 95 per cent. by this means. Another favourite bird of mine is the Linnet. Although dull in colour, the Linnet, by reason of its sweet song, is a great pet amongst lovers of British birds. I have had a good many Linnets in my time that could give an excellent account of themselves, and could sing with any Mule I had. Being of migratory and gregarious habits, they are found all over the country, but the finest place in which to find them is around Cumberland; that is, as far as size in the birds goes. But you get both big and small birds in all parts. The nest is a compact and neat little thing, but not like that of the Goldfinch. It contains from four to six eggs of a light silvery-blue colour, marked with pink and reddish-brown spots and stripes. They generally rear three or four broods yearly. In cage life the Linnet becomes very tame, learns to know its mistress or master, and will sing when you take a little tit-bit to him. Feed him just like you would a Finch—with more rape seed, a little hemp and teazle seed, and linseed. Knapweed they are very fond of, as well as hardheads and their seed. Good singers fetch a good price, but as it is so common in quality you can get them very cheap. They are easy birds to decoy, and hundreds are taken yearly. But I regret to say that many die every season through the carelessness of the catchers in not giving proper seeds; the birds die through bowel troubles, caused by their eating dry seed after being used to damp seed in the fields. But thanks again to CAGE BIRDS, and its able answers to querists, the trouble of losing fresh-caught Linnets is very nearly a thing of the past.

THE CAGE BIRD UNION.

Meeting of Delegates to be Called at Leicester.

SIR,—Would you kindly announce that a meeting of delegates will be held on Saturday, August 27, at Leicester, at 4 o'clock, place to be announced later. Invitations will be sent to all societies that have withdrawn from the Union, or that have not paid their current subscription, to give them an opportunity of stating the views of their members as to the reason of their withdrawal, so that, if possible, arrangements can be made so that these societies may be induced to again join the Union. I enclose copies of the agenda. I have received a letter from the secretary of the Clapham and Dis. C.B.A., in which he says: "The Clapham Society has always been in favour of the Union. So pleaso let it be known that at least one London society has paid its subscription, as I saw it reported that not one London Society had done so. I trust mine will be the means of inducing others to rally round the Union and pay up." I would be glad if you would kindly give this publicity.

GEO. W. F. LYTHGOE, Secretary.

A Draught Preventive.

Sent by Mr. W. Newell, 62, Princess Street, Abertillery, Mon.

Here is an idea which, though very simple, is good. Get a large gimlet and bore a few holes in the top of the frame of the window; then go to your plumber and get a few lengths of lead pipe, which put through the holes and bend up towards ceiling, as seen in sketch; and it is surprising how sweet and pure it will keep the air in the room. I have tried this idea and prove it a great success. It costs about 2s. in all, and no draught at all can get to the birds. —WM. NEWELL.

A Tool for Boring Holes.

Sent by Mr. G. R. Ashman, 13, Roseberry View, Thornaby, Yorks.

This simple idea with sketch may be of use to some of your readers; I have found it of great service. The main thing in fixing or hanging anything, and especially a cage, is to make it safe; and a difficult job it is nowadays with jerry-built houses to avoid damaging the wall. I find this home-made tool makes a clean hole even through the centre of a brick without splitting it; and it saves making a lot of dirt, for the chippings all enter the tube and can be dropped out on to a tray. The hole made, cut your plug a shade thicker than the tube, point the end and drive it home. Saw off level with the wall and it is ready for the nail. To a handy man this is a better way, but requires time. After making the bole, insert in it a good big screw, and fill up with plaster of Paris, allowing it time to set. You will find this screw cannot be pulled out. To make this tool, the cheapest and best way and open to everyone is to go to a marine store, find a piece of steel pipe (¼in. bore and about 9ins. long is the best); file one end as in sketch, and the other fix in a bolt head. It saves splitting the pipe when striking. It costs about 3d. When boring do not strike heavily, but frequently, and keep turning the tube a little with each blow.—G. R. ASHMAN.

Wild Bird Life.

Whitethroats in the South.

Although the first half of our all too short summer has gone, some of our wild birds are still busy at their nesting duties. In many cases these are birds which naturally have more than one brood, and consequently extend their nesting operations right up to the period of moulting. The Finches are particularly prolific, especially the Linnet and Greenfinch, and their homes may be found snugly located among the brambles of the overgrown hedgerows, while the harvesters are busy collecting the golden crop; in fact, it is no unusual thing to find fresh eggs during this time, so that the birds are busy right until they go into moult or are checked by early frosts. Where a single brooded bird has had the first nest of the season destroyed, it is soon busy upon a second venture; but beyond this, single-brooded birds seldom proceed, two disappointments generally being sufficient to cure them of the natural desire for propagation.

While we were walking up a by-road bordered by open fields and a few bushes and rough undergrowth upon either side, the scolding cry of more than one Whitethroat attracted our attention. The Whitethroat is not by any means a brightly coloured bird, and yet is graceful and attractive. His raised crest and scolding cry show plainly that he resents intrusion. In this case it happened to be the Lesser Whitethroat that was seen, and after a time its nest, containing three fresh eggs, was found. It was built entirely of grass stalk, lined with a little cow hair. Excepting the Reed Warblers, we know of no bird which builds such a deep nest as this species; so deep is it that a view of the eggs can only be obtained by leaning quite over it. The Lesser Whitethroat is not nearly so common as the Greater bird, but is quite as interesting, though perhaps hardly so graceful, as it is somewhat thicker in the neck. It is not a difficult matter to distinguish these birds, as the Greater has a brownish back with a white throat, and the Lesser a grey back with a white throat; and the latter bird is somewhat smaller. Both are fairly well distributed over the Southern Counties in gardens, orchards, commons, and hedgerows bordering cultivated fields, but the Greater bird must be slightly hardier, as he is found further North than his congener. The Lesser species seldom appear beyond the county of Yorkshire.

A Vanishing Species.

A century and a half ago Gilbert White, of Selborne, wrote of the Stone Curlew, "In manners analogous to the Bustard," and as "abounding in parts of Hampshire and Sussex." But showing how bird life has changed, Professor Bell (who, for thirty years occupied that naturalist's old home) tells us that during that long period he has never once seen a Stone Curlew alive or dead. Although many of its old haunts have been sadly disturbed, still the Stone Curlew is not quite extinct, and may occasionally be met with even in Sussex and Hampshire, but in nothing like the numbers of former years.

The Eagle's Nesting Habits.

The Golden Eagle is one of the first birds to see going about nesting. Winter still reigns amongst the mountains when this noble bird begins to build his nest; and the eggs are often laid when the moors and hills are buried deep in snow.

Habits of the Greenshank.

The haunts of the Greenshank are the moors and desolate islands, especially those where there is an abundance of water and swamp. When its breeding grounds are invaded by man the Greenshank becomes anxious and noisy, careering wildly about the air, uttering its wild double-note, or alighting on the moor and running along the ground.

Extraordinary Migration.

One of the wonders of bird migration is that of the Godwit, a brown, slender-billed, long-legged bird. The Godwits arrive in New Zealand in October and November, and spend most of their time on the mouths of rivers, mud banks, and sandy shores. They remain during the Southern summer, and at the end of April collect and start on their Northern migration. Their destination is the North Polar regions, some ten thousand miles from the Antipodes. To accomplish this journey, vast tracts of land and sea have to be crossed, which includes several different countries.

My Views on the Norwich Plainhead.

By THOMAS POPE (Plymouth).

The questions of what should be the ideal type of Norwich Plainhead, and the adherence of the judges to the correct type, have been kept before the Fancy in the columns of CAGE BIRDS very considerably, and as a great admirer of this variety of Canary I propose to add my quota to the many opinions that have been published.

On the Right Track.

Here in the West of England we have, I consider, kept to the type of bird that is usually put forward as an ideal Norwich. You can go through the Norwich classes in most western shows without seeing an exhibit that has more of the Crest-bred characteristics than the Norwich Plainhead. It is said that size is lacking and that the colour is not what it is at northern shows. This is probably correct, and no one admires more than I do a good big one. But in putting type first I am certain that western fanciers are on the right track.

In judging any variety of cage birds, or, for the matter of that, any livestock, the judge, though he may be quite familiar with the ideal type and the value in points placed by the specialist club of the variety on the different properties of that variety, cannot really stay to actually add up and balance the points he may judge. Having a knowledge of the good points necessary, he adjudicates between them instinctively without recourse to actual adding up of points, having all the time his ideal present in his mind's eye. I have seen Plainheads out of the money, and, in my opinion, rightly so, which, if taken point by point according to standard would be sure to have stood in.

And this is one thing that I wish to emphasise, viz., that there are certain faults any one of which ought to practically disqualify a bird as a show specimen, however good it may be in other respects, even should the good points in actual reckoning of points over-balance these possessed by a competitor which has not this fatal fault.

To enumerate these I should put first, looseness of feather, especially round the thighs. This is a fault that is much in evidence in very large buffs, and it, of course, destroys the whole contour of the bird. Second, very long flights and tail, the flights generally crossed. Third, very small head. I have seen birds with this fault that were good in shape, both big and cobby in body; but a small head is undoubtedly a bad failing in a Norwich Plainhead. Fourth, a small bird generally; for though I am a great believer in type I hold that a bird can be too small for show, and in the district where I reside I have seen very many beautiful-type birds absolutely too small for exhibition.

Veritable Traps for Judges.

There are some Plainheads that are veritable traps for a judge. Perhaps when he is judging the class the bird in question is a good big buff, tight in feather, and a winner; but later in the day, when seen by keen criticising fanciers, a very fine pair of trousers are in evidence. I have in my mind a buff which was shown three times without winning owing to this fault; but at one show he pulled himself together and secured first and special as the result.

Again, on the question of crossed flights; nearly every bird crosses its flights at some time during the day, and my remarks in regard to this being a fatal fault only apply to a bird that has this fault always.

I suppose it is hardly possible to get the head of a Plainhead too big, as long as it is not flat, for a big flat head is ugly and has usually as an accompaniment a disposition to browiness and a somewhat sour look. But here again most big birds, whether yellows or buffs, are sure to be a bit brewy after their non-flight days. Though it is undoubtedly better for a bird to have a close-feathered head, I think a slight browing is preferable to a very small headpiece, however good in shape it may be.

I have often thought that although a yellow of buff Norwich Plainhead is judged from the same standard, there are certain points which should be considered of different value in the different colours. It is certainly easier to get the buffs of better shape than the yellows; whilst on the other hand the yellow is easier to get with closer feathering. Again, I think we often see the yellow of longer flights and tail than the buff, giving the former an appearance of flat sidedness.

What I wish to suggest is that a slight tendency to excessive feather in a buff should not be considered so great a detriment to it as if it had been a yellow; and on the other hand a slight falling off in fulness of breast in the yellow is not so grevious a fault as it would be in the buff.

Remember the Judge's Weakness.

The unsuccessful exhibitor is usually, of course, the one who is the greatest critic of the judge; but, generally speaking, the difference of opinion is occasioned by the personal liking for certain properties which the variety under judgment possesses. There are times when the best of judges make a real error in judgment, but I believe these are rare. It is, as I have said, just the fact that the judge has a leaning one way, whilst the exhibitor leans another; and the exhibitor's remedy is to remember the judge's weakness. This must, I think, always be so, and no amount of official standards will obviate it, for it is almost impossible for two people to see exactly alike, owing to personal bias for some given property.

Being a member of a cage bird society which is composed chiefly of working men who cannot afford, especially when embarking in the cage bird Fancy, to lay out much money, I have frequently been struck, here in the west, with the want of size in the Plainheads. When judged from a stock-bird point of view, they are of excellent type, especially the buffs, and as I myself considered my stock to have the same failing, I tried double buffing, with, I think, good results. I did not get coarse or excessive feather; and in three cases out of four I did not lose colour, and I certainly improved the size generally of my stock.

All of us, more or less, like to make our hobby pay, and I have found a good-sized buff will sell much better than a small one, be he ever so good in type. If a fancier has the means to obtain a big yellow cock to increase the size of his stock, I still think it the best way; but my experience has been that a real big yellow Plainhead cock bird is hard to obtain at any price, and the fancier owning such is much more anxious to keep it than to sell it. This being the case, the only alternative is double-buffing with medium-sized birds; of course, reverting to the usual method, viz., yellow and buff the next season.

Concerning Double-buffing.

When double-buffing it is of advantage to use marked birds rather than clear ones, my experience being that the tendency to loss of colour is thereby checked; in fact, birds bred last year from two marked buffs are quite as good in colour as any buff bred in the orthodox method in my room, but in one case where I used two clears I must admit that colour suffered. Double-buffing, I think, increases the size of the skull, but this is because most buffs, especially hens, are better than yellows in this respect.

I see that several well-known Norwich fanciers are advocating Cinnamon blood for Plainhead breeding. Here in the West I hardly think, although we have some hundreds of Norwich, that there is a single Cinnamon marked bird in any of the fanciers' rooms.

Some two years ago a prominent fancier knowing that I had some good Cinnamons asked me to try a heavily variegated Norwich hen which he had purchased as being bred from a Cinnamon cock and Norwich hen, both parents being winners. He had tried hens, he said, with Norwich, with indifferent results. I did, and I have had her for two seasons. I tried her with both Cinnamons and with Norwich. In the former case I had Cinnamons, but very small ones; and in the latter I had Green Norwich, also of little account. And it appears to me that to introduce the Cinnamon—that is, the whole Cinnamon—would result in such density of green marking that it would require years to work it out again.

Even-Marked Norwich.

What has become of the even-marked Norwich? They are almost non-existent; and I believe that the classification of some shows that allot the even-mark to the A.O.V. classes, is to some extent responsible for it. I would much rather show an even-marked Norwich (if I had one) in the marked or variegated Norwich class than in the A.O.V. class, where I may have to meet Belgians, Lancashires, and Lizards; and in these days of specialist club's cup competitions an exhibitor of an even-marked Norwich which had a winning chance outside its markings would be somewhat handicapped at a show where the classification placed the bird in the A.O.V. class.

Being secretary of one of the largest societies in England, I have noticed that many men take up the bird Fancy for a short time only—just for a season or so—and then drop out. They leave the Fancy before they know much about it. It takes time and a certain amount of concentration to understand enough about the Norwich Plainhead (and any other variety of cage bird) to appreciate the beauties of the birds from a breeder's and a fancier's point of view.

Often I have realised how different the Canary Fancy is to an outsider than it is to even the slightly initiated. To the outsider a Canary is a singing bird; to the fancier who breeds the bird for show points the singing qualities are only valued as means of assurance of the well being of the bird. I honestly believe that some take up the Canary hobby for a short time only because they cannot get a grasp of the points necessary to a bird good enough for the show bench, and I believe too, that CAGE BIRDS is doing a good work in educating the young fanciers.

Amongst a certain section of people there is a belief that to win at a show it is necessary to belong to a clique or be one of the show management; but my experience as Cage Bird Union representative at nearly all the shows in my district is that nothing can be fairer than the way in which the cage bird shows are judged. There is absolutely no favouritism shown even should the secretary be exhibiting himself. In fact, I myself won a special prize once which I did not know I had won until told I had by the judge as I was going to see him off at the railway station some hours after the judging. I am perfectly convinced that at most shows fanciers from a distance can be assured of fair play and the same treatment that the members of the Society holding the show get, and that where there is an apparent mistake in the awards it is nothing but pure personal difference of opinion, which is bound to occur as long as every man is somewhat differently constituted from all others.

ON THE TOP RUNG:

And How I Got There.

(A series of brief illustrated interviews, by Mr. Thos. Aitken, with several prominent fanciers North of the Border. Previous subjects have been Mr. A. M'Farlane (Norwich), Mr. G. G. Henderson (British), Mr. W. M'Clure (Scots Fancy), Mr. A. Chalmers (Norwich, etc.), Mr. R. B. Jarvie (Norwich), and Mr. L. J. Arrighi (Foreign and British birds and hybrids).—Editor.)

Mr. James Winter (Edinburgh).

Mr. Winter's name may well be familiar to readers of CAGE BIRDS, he having been the secretary of the great Scottish National Show, and responsible for many of its successes. He has now, however, owing to pressure of his own business, been compelled to resign that post.

Mr. Winter has not had such a successful season as he had hoped for, owing more or less to the fact that he changed his place of residence at rather an inconvenient time, and so had to put his birds up in a shed away from his house—the most suitable place he could find for them for the time being. This shed has about eight square feet of floor space, is about ten feet high, and is built of wood. Inside it is quite cosy and comfortable, and the birds have every appearance of feeling it so. Plenty of light finds its way in through the windows, and just below the roof are several holes through the planks, which afford adequate ventilation.

Mr. Winter's stock comprises twelve pairs of Norwich, and he has a few youngsters, while several of his hens, at the time of my visit, were preparing for another nest.

The birds are all housed in well designed box cages, which are worthy of description. They measure 20 x 14 x 11 inches, and are painted a light blue inside and black out. They have removable fronts, with a door at each end of the front (not of the box). The front bottom rail is four inches deep; this height, Mr. Winter informed me, helps to keep the birds off the bottom. There are no sand drawers; the bottom beard of the cage is merely clasped on by a couple of fittings, and can be separated from the cage at a moment's notice to be cleaned. The water bottle is fixed outside; the seed box Mr. Winter fixes inside. This up-to-date kind of cage seems to be all the go amongst the Norwich men of Edinburgh.

"So you use sawdust for the bottom of your cages, Mr. Winter?"—"Yes; I find it much cleaner in use than sand. It is less liable to clog the feet when the birds are 'soft' during the moult. I give sand in a separate tin hung up inside the cage."

"I suppose you mainly pair up in the ordinary way, buffs with yellows"?—"Yes; but I am a thorough believer in double buffing. Oh, yes! I certainly believe in double buffing, but, of course, the buffs used must come from the proper stuff. When pairing up generally, I get a cock with big bone, no matter if he be a bit long, and put him with a good typical hen.

"When the birds are feeding, I give them canary seed, hemp, ad lib., and a pinch of rape. During the winter I give plain canary seed, and once a week a little teazle and rape seed; each cage has a piece of cuttle fish bone fixed inside. During the breeding season I use puff cracknel biscuits and egg, with a little maw seed."

"Is your egg food composed of these three things?"—"Yes. I find those biscuits best. I use three cracknels to one egg, but when the youngsters are very young I use only two cracknels. I give solely lettuce as green food, and steeped rape to the young every day."

"I start to colour feed when the young are six or eight weeks old, using tasteless pepper. I only add a pinch of hot when the cold weather sets in, and not till then. All my promising youngsters I moult in single cages; but they all get an occasional fly in the flight."

British Birds for Budding Exhibitors.

By H. WILSON (Oldham).

In attempting to put into words my experience of British birds, whether for the purposes of a hobby, or for exhibition, or for profit, I do so for the benefit of the novice fancier only. Although I have not shown much in the open, I honestly believe I have had, at home, specimens of the various birds I have kept that were capable of winning at numerous shows that I have visited between here (Manchester), and as far north as Edinburgh, and I might add that I do not think there has been held within the past few years a show of any importance (in the area mentioned) that I have not visited. It will thus be readily conceded that by virtue of winning some first prizes (which I have), having visited the principal shows, and having formed acquaintance with most of the leading exhibitors, judges and the principal officials of the various societies—it will, I say, be readily conceded that I possess some knowledge of the birds I am going to write about. But it must be at once understood that I do not pretend to possess one tenth of the vast knowledge of some of the leading exhibitors I have come across.

I will venture to try and interest the novice with a consideration of a small team of seedeaters, in every way suitable for exhibition, and not difficult to obtain at a very reasonable cost (which, with the novice, is always an important factor).

Competition Considered.

I am fully aware of the limited classification provided at most societies for novice members, viz., the "any variety seed eater," and the "A.V. insectivorous" classes; but the larger societies give a more extended classification, which provides him with a better chance. But on the other hand this is liable to send him into open competition before he has gained sufficient experience to be able to compete with success against his non-experienced brother fanciers; and I would strongly advise him to watch this point. Another great point to the novice fancier in taking up with British birds, apart from their small cost, is that he has not to contend with (as he has, in my opinion, in a Canary classification) the different views of different judges as to type. I have seen, say, a big class of Norwich, which, if three separate judges had been asked to place the cards in it, would have been found to contain three different sets of winners. Although they have the various club standards to work by, they have different views, and work much upon their own individual tastes.

It must not, however, be taken that I mean to infer there is no type in the different British birds; but what I do say is that the judges are more agreed upon the type as required by the British Bird and Mule Clubs' standards.

The manner of obtaining British birds that I would suggest to the novice is that which I have practised myself. At the catching period, when new caught birds are very cheap, get into touch with a catcher and ask him to send you, say, a dozen birds on approval, you to pay all carriage, with the distinct understanding that you are only keeping the one or two that you may select, and returning the others. You have to pay a little extra for this privilege, but you have the decided advantage of having a few to pick from at your leisure. There is, of course, no necessity to adopt this method if you live near a big market where there are plenty of birds to select from.

You will by this be wanting to know which birds I am going to recommend for a small team. Well, they are as follows: The Goldfinch, the Linnet, the Bramblefinch, the Siskin, and the Greenfinch. Make a careful selection. The chief points to follow are size, type, and marking; and steadiness, which is always half a win. Given all these points to a fair degree, you will soon find that you can command a large amount of notice from the judge.

I might say here that at even very large shows the classification for two of the birds I have suggested (the Bramblefinch and the Siskin) includes others; for instance, Bramblefinch and Chaffinch class, and Siskin, Redpoll, or Twite class. But my experience is that the Bramblefinch and Siskin are invariably to the fore.

Touching one or two of the birds that I have left out, the Hawfinch, Bullfinch and Yellow Bunting are extremely difficult for the novice to moult. I would suggest that these be left alone until a little experience has been gained. On the other hand the novice must not get it into his head that those listed are easily handled birds.

Choosing a Goldfinch.

I will deal with the birds in the order named. The Goldfinch.—Always get those birds that are of cobby built type. None of the judges will have the Yorkshire type. The one I always carry in my eye is one that was first in a big class at Oswestry some years ago; it was a beauty; I wish there were more like it. However, we will try and find one as good. The blaze is the next point to consider. This must be deep in colour, square, and must run well behind the eyes. Do not get a bird with a blaze that runs to a very dark shade. The blaze that is required is the one that is bright scarlet in colour. What I mean will be readily understood by getting two birds together. Some birds I have seen have run nearly black in the blaze near the eye and beak. The white parts on the checks are to be level and sharply defined, and there must be a deep, rich, chestnut colour on the breast, called tanning. The tanning on the Foreign Goldfinch is white compared with the colour required on the British Goldfinch. Of course there is no such thing as white tanning, but I merely state that the tanning on the foreign Goldfinch is not allowable on the British Goldfinch.

The buttons play an important part when getting your Finch. These must be small and evenly placed.

The Goldfinch can be slightly colour-fed to advantage; but for the novice I would suggest that colour feeding British birds be left until he has gained experience, as I feel sure the majority of the judges give a good bird full credit even when non-fed.

The Linnet to Select.

The Linnet.—The same mode of selection is here advised. Get a bird as big as possible, but do not sacrifice colour and markings absolutely for size. But the novice must understand that size is three parts of the way to obtaining first under most of the judges. I think I observe a tendency here and there to give a little more credit to colour and pencilling, and I hope it will continue.

The next consideration to size is cobbiness; then there must be a nice, dark, nutty-brown colour, darker on the back, with a neat, bold, round head, and plenty of white in the flights; and the bird must stand up and be well across the perch. At all costs avoid the croucher, and infinitely more so the one that is pinched in front of the face. They are not bad to tell; get two together, one with a nice round benevolent-looking head, and the other having a pinched appearance in front; the latter looks a right-down villain. Colour-feeding moderately enhances, I think, the colour of this bird.

A Bird to Catch a Judge's Eye.

The Bramblefinch.—This bird is a great favourite of mine, and when he is really steady has many engaging ways. But steadying him is "not all honey." Some birds seem to have kinder dispositions, and will settle down sooner than others. But I must confess that this bird and the Yellowhammer have caused me endless trouble, so much so that I have liberated quite a score as hopeless.

The points required in the Bramblefinch are size, type, and markings. Which type to recommend (after you have size) it is difficult to say. Some judges go in for a long-sided bird, and others for a shorter bird. Of the two I personally prefer a long-sided bird (shaped like a wedge, as you might term it); and given one with a dark head and distinct markings, with chestnut breast colour, and good feet and claws, and that stands well from the perch, I think this bird will be found to catch the judge's eye with very satisfactory results to the exhibitor.

A Little Gentleman.

The Siskin.—In the class provided for this really pretty bird—among Siskins, Redpolls, and Twites—the Twite, as a rule gives the Siskin a pretty hard tussle for premier honours; and if of exceptional merit will almost always beat it. But, taking results all round, I think the Siskin is the most satisfactory; and having a rather better song, as it has, and being a little more beautiful to the eye, these qualities make me lean a little more to it and recommend it to the novice.

In choosing this little gentleman, quite a lot of knowledge is required to select an exceptionally good bird, as to the uninitiated novice they all appear alike. But this is not so, for to get one with a good bib, a black cap, a yellow, with good lacing, is possible only with practice. I have never heard much comment in my journeys to the shows about size, as is evident when discussing the points of other British birds, so that the novice need not trouble a great deal about this when looking for good points.

A Champion Exhibition Bird.

The Greenfinch.—Now we come to a pet of mine. The pugilistic encounters I have had with one or two of the specimens I have kept have been very amusing; and I have not always come off best, taking all things into consideration. His confidence is really pathetic at times, and gets a Greenfinch into a lot of trouble. He has not much song to boast of, but what there is of it is homely and well meant.

In selecting an exhibition specimen, go in first for size. Buffs are a lot the biggest, and I think the Greenfinch shows the greatest difference in size (between yellow and buff) of all British birds. The next most important point (and I think it applies more to the Greenie than to the other birds I have written about, although it must not be thought that it is not essential to the other birds) is feather. There does not seem to be any particular type. Select the bird with the deepest chest and broadest skull. If you can get one that has a ferocious look in his eye, do so; it adds to his beauty.

You will gather from the above that I prefer the buff; and if he has the points mentioned above, also the mealy frosting as spoken of in the Canary world, you will have a champion.

After you have got birds of the necessary quality to win, they require catering for; but to go into this question would necessitate a separate article. But I am anxious to impress this point upon the novice, viz., that much depends upon the cage exercise a bird gets, and whether any particular seed benefits the bird. To ensure a bird's deriving the full advantage of any particular seed, give it plenty of cage room, and you will never regret it.

For the final journey to the show hall there need not be much concern, for cages for exhibiting the different birds are practically standardised; which fact gives all the birds a better chance. I would strongly advise the novice to attend all the shows he can, and not to be discouraged at first failures. And he should remember that there are as good birds yet in the fields and plantations that ever came out of them. In conclusion, I trust the novice reader of these notes will benefit by them.

This is a standard work, written by an acknowledged expert, and prepared for publication by experts. It has been designed as an authoritative and carefully practical work, embodying in the simplest and most straightforward language all that there is to be known on the peculiarly difficult and scientific subject of Hybrid Breeding.

There are no less than Sixteen Coloured and Sixteen Art Plates. EACH PLATE IS A PERFECT STUDY OF AN INDIVIDUAL HYBRID—not a pretty group suitable for a child's picture-book, but a plate that shows the correct colour, the correct shape, the present-day type and general characteristics of modern hybrids.

A PRACTICAL BOOK FOR PRACTICAL FANCIERS.

It will, we feel sure, be generally conceded that "Cage Birds" has produced in "CAGE BIRD HYBRIDS" a dignified book on a difficult subject—a standard work of the highest merit and a fitting monument of the hybrid breeder's art.

DOWNEND (Bristol).

Twenty-seventh annual show, held Aug. 2nd, in the grounds of Cleve Hall. It proved a success, being an advance both in numbers and quality. Several of the winners were tip-top specimens, and were put down in wonderful form, considering the time of year; and they did their respective owners great credit. Yorkshires were a good collection, and competition was keen. British birds made a fine display, the special for best going to Mr. Winstone with a grand Goldfinch shown in rare bloom, and much admired. The exhibits were nicely staged, and bad every attention given them by a few well-known and enthusiastic fanciers. The hon. secs., Messrs. Pearse and Rathbone, as usual, had everything going as smoothly as clockwork, and were most courteous and obliging. The awards were made by Mr. J. H. Payne.

GREEN CANARY ASSOCIATION.

Annual nest feather show held at Oldham Hall, Liverpool, on July 23rd. Unfortunately, there was only a small number of birds staged—48 in all. Mr. J. Thornton (Egremont) judged, and gave general satisfaction. In the champion section, the specials for most points were carried off by Messrs. Wardale, Hadwin, Metcalfe, Jenkins, and Andrews in the order named, and the novice specials by Messrs. Ravenscroft, Mockridge Brown, Carrnthers, and McDougall. Mr. Ravenscroft also won specials for the best Green Yorkshire and best clear Yorkshire (novice), whilst the special for best Green Norwich (novice) went to Mr. Pyke.

TREORCHY.

The eighth annual Welsh International Show was held on the Ystradfechan Grounds on August 2nd. Entries were not numerous, four classes out of seven having unfortunately to be cancelled. A bolder and larger advertisement in CAGE BIRDS should amply repay the extra cost. Surely such a courteous and encrgetic sec. as Mr. James, and his obliging committee, deserve better support? Mr. J. H. Spurry judged, and his awards were well received. Messrs. Byard and Powell's yellow Yorkshire, first in its class, was a beauty, as straight as a reed and a hard nut to crack. It also won two medals and special for best bird in show. Mr. Spurry brought it out to compete for the £10 10s. challenge cup offered for best exhibit in all sections. The Mules and Foreign birds, though few, were capital specimens, and some of the Foreigners could have won in very good company.

YORKS., YELL.: 1, 3, and two medals and special for best cage bird, Byard and Powell, already commented on; 2, R. Thomas and Sons, again a good yell., plenty of lengtb; hc, James; c, Evans. FOR. (5): 1, res. for best in show, Davies, lovely coloured King Parrot, of A1 quality, in nice feather; 2, Ryan, good African Grey, in fine feather, who quickly greeted the judge with "Who are you? What do you want?" to the amusement of all bystanders; 3, Beauchamp, nice Parrakeet, of good col. and feather; vhc, Davies and Wilkins; hc, Ryan.

CODNOR PARK AND DIS. C.B.S.

Second members' first feather show, held July 30, at headquarters. Owing to other attractions in the district, entries did not turn up as expected, but what was lacking in quantity was made up for in quality. Some fine buff Norwich and Yorkshires were on view, and came in for a lot of comment. A few more Yorkshires were entered at this show, which shows that this "gentleman variety" only needs classification to bring it to the front in Notts and Derbyshire. I hope a few other societies will take up with, and grant a few classes for, this variety at their coming shows. Mr. Admitt (South Normanton) judged, and gave general satisfaction.

Last nest feather show of the season, held on Aug. 8th, at the Oddfellows' Hall, the entries numbering 56, in five classes, which, taking into account the time of year, must be considered very satisfactory. Mr. Geo. Brumby was the elected judge, but owing to an accident to his foot was unable to be present. Mr. F. F. Potter judged the Yorkshire classes and Mr. Precious the Norwich and A.O.V. classes. FROME C.B.S.

Third annual show of young birds, held July 28th, about 60 specimens being nicely staged. With the addition of some palms and ferns, these made a very pleasing effect. The birds on view were of exceptional merit. The Lancashires came up well with 18 entries in the two classes provided. The feature of the show was a crestbred shown by Mr. J. Tottle, and a Dutch Frill shown by Mr. W. Minty. The Crest-bred was of wonderful size, a fair eye-opener, with splendid dome-shaped skull, wide entrance, and well lashed appearance. The Frill was also a monster for size, exceedingly good in frill, and splendid position—a credit to its breeder. Amongst the Borders (a local favourite judging by the number of exhibitors), were some very nice exhibits, full of quality and style. In the Yorkshire classes a very stylish clear yellow shown by Miss Walker, and a ticked buff shown by Mr. Pope, were both of exceptional quality. Mr. A. R. Baily judged the Lancashires and Crests, and Mr. J. Tottle the remainder.

Young bird show (confined to members) held on August 6th in the Masonic Hall. There was a large turn-out of birds—120 entries came forward. Some very fine youngsters were staged, of which more will be heard later. The Norwich Plainheads and Border Fancies had the keenest competition. Mr. J. F. Dewar (Edinburgh) put up the awards, and his judgment gave every satisfaction.

RUNCORN.

The Runcorn and Dis. H. and O.S. held its eighth annual exhibition in the Plantation Pleasurs Grounds, under canvas, and the weather being of the best, a fine show resulted. A capital muster of about 80 cage birds turned up, and amongst these were to be seen some very promising youngsters. The Yorkshires—as usual here—were far above the ordinary, and keen was the competition. Norwich were also very strongly in evidence, and here was found the winner of the handsome champion challenge cup for the best young Canary or Mule bred in 1910 by a member—a clear buff shown by Mr. J. Guy. There were also a few nice Crest and Crest-bred youngsters. Hybrids and British birds were represented by Goldie-Can., Greenie-Can., and Linnet-Can., and a nice class of Linnets. There were some very decent novice Yorkshires and Norwich, and a pretty young buff Yorkshire secured the special in this section. The show was carried through by a very capable set of fanciers, and they left nothing to be desired. Mr. Chas. Houlton judged and his awards were very kindly received. General sympatby was expressed with Mr. Houlton at the grief he was just plunged into by the death of his father at this time.

OBITUARY.

Mr. A. PRATT (Bradford).

It is with deep regret, writes Mr. F. Western, Secretary of the Bradford West C.B.A., that I have to inform you of the death of one of our oldest members in the person of Mr. A. Pratt, of Bradford, who passed away on July 24, after a long illness. I write on behalf of our members, and I feel sure all fanciers who know Mr. Pratt will deeply sympathise with his family in their sad and sudden bereavement. He leaves six little children.

Mr. THOS. STIRLING (Maryhill).

I regret to have to inform you of the sudden death of Mr. Thomas Stirling (Vice-President of the Maryhill Bird Club), at the age of 76, on August 1, writes Mr. Andrew Jardine (Maryhill). He was one of the oldest Scotch Fancy Canary breeders in Scotland, coming from Curran, Stirlingshire, many years ago, to Glasgow. When last I saw him he was looking forward to giving the members of the Maryhill Club a hard run for the Cup, as he had several birds looking extra well. I am sure that all who knew Mr. Stirling will deeply regret his demise, and will join in tendering deepest sympathy to his widow and family, who are left to mourn his loss.

Fanciers, to be able to compete for the season's specials at the commencement of the show season, must be nominated at the forthcoming meeting on Aug. 25, writes Mr. Geo. Green, Sec. of the Green Canary Association. Otherwise, three shows will be over before they are eligible. The annual subscription is 2s. 6d. We have an open date on December 9, 1910, for four Border and four Norwich Green Classes. If any society is open to add the above named to their classification, I shall be pleased to receive an application for the patronage. My address is 36, Lord Nelson Street, Liverpool.

The Metropolitan C.B.A. have been successful in obtaining for their use as meeting and show room the Arthur Street Mission Hall, Battersea Park Road, opposite the Battersea Polytechnic, and this will be the headquarters, writes Mr. G. Harwood, the Hon. Sec. In the Champion Cup section the points won are: Mr. Mabey 23, Mr. Martin 22, Mrs. Lovegrove 18, Mr. Harwood 19, Mr. Macgregor 14; in the novice section Mr. Ward 23, Mr. King 22, Mr. Lloyd 20, Mr. Gibbs 14. In the Ladies' Teapot Competition Mrs. Macgregor 24, Mrs. Lovegrove 18, Mrs. Harwood 11. The British Cup section Mr. Slade 11, Mr. Newton 10.

A Regular Shore Bird.

Among all the waders and shore birds visiting us (mostly in winter) and frequenting the large stretch of shingle and sand along our coast, none are so constant as the little Ringed Plover. During the winter the foreshore is alive with birds from all quarters. In summer they are less plentiful, and the beach loses much of its charm. But the beautiful, graceful, Ringed Plover can always be seen, and is always attractive, and always interesting.

Our Best (?) Native Songster.

The Blackcap is described by one writer as our "best native songster," full, deep and wild, beginning with two or three double notes, and working up to a loud, varied, and continuous trill. "He has caught from the Blackbird his rich, mellow note, from the Skylark his melody shrill, and the notes of the Woodlark, the Thrush, and his own he varies and blends at will."

Welsh Cage Bird Club.

Committee meeting of the above will be held at the Ship and Bell, Merthyr, on August 20, at 3.30 p.m. sharp, when all the elected members are requested to attend. Business is important. And will all societies in Wales who wish to have the club's patronage for their coming shows kindly send their applications forthwith? I herewith give a hearty invitation to all bird lovers to join our society, and be eligible to compete for the club's various prizes.—G. T. JONES, Hon. Sec., Brecon.

More Testimony to THE Paper for Advertisers.

My advt. in CAGE BIRDS of August 6 brought me 50 replies by post and four callers. Is this not a record for a private advt.? Kindly thank all who answered, as it would take me too long to write them individually. I wish your valuable paper every success.—W. F. WILBEE (Rickmansworth).

Please put this advertisement in CAGE BIRDS. I intended to order it to be put in CAGE BIRDS before, and it was sent by mistake to —— and put in. Result, I had not a reply. Always before my advertisemente have been put in CAGE BIRDS, and always with the result of having several answers. —MISS RANEY (Beverley).

An Appeal.

I am endeavouring to collect 1,000 pennies on behalf of Queen Alexandra's Cripple League of Children, writes Mr. Bernard Hollins (9, George Street, Hull), and if any reader of CAGE BIRDS would care to help me by sending one or more, I shall be greatly obliged, and will acknowledge full amount when collected. I shall forward same to the secretary (Sir W. P. Treloar, London).

The Parrot Clock.

A Minnesota man is said by the "Sheffield Weekly Telegraph" to own a Parrot which he claims to be the most intelligent bird living. After it had been in the family about two years it began to mock the cuckoo clock. Some months ago the clock fell, and the striking or cuckoo part was broken. This puzzled the Parrot, which watched the clock for days, and seemed to be studying deeply. At last Polly evidently came to a conclusion, for she greatly startled the family by taking up the duty the cuckoo had previously performed, counting out the hours perfectly at the exact moment, with a clear call of "Cuckoo" for every hour the new silent clock ought to have struck—one for one o'clock, five for five o'clock, and so on round the circle. Polly is said to keep most perfect time.

"Siamese Twins" of Canarydom.

Mr. James Caygill usually has something good in the way of natural history to relate when one meets him. This Canary incident, while it is extraordinary, is vouched for beyond all question. A breeder in the Consett neighbourhood had a bird sitting on six eggs. From the first came a pair of young, joined together like the Swedish Nightingale, well remembered; from the second egg, two birds, separate, and since doing well. The third, fourth and fifth eggs yielded one normal bird each. The sixth did not mature, and on being opened was found to contain another pair of chicks joined together. When the first egg gave up its joined birds, he, thinking them of no good, destroyed them. Relating the fact to a brother fancier, it was received with grave suspicion. More than that, the very notion was derided. The next separate birds coming from No. 2, on being brought to the notice of the sceptic, somewhat convinced him, but when the bodies of the final and sixth egg's joined pair were laid on his table "in situ," his incredulity capitulated and conviction followed. It is an amazing fact, nevertheless.—"Newcastle Weekly Chronicle."

Country Rambles

Bankfoot and District C.B.S.

On August 6, the members, along with their wives and friends, journeyed to Ilkley by char-a-banc. The weather was fine, although of a threatening nature. The drive through Wharfedale was one of the main features of the journey. The scenery was at its best, and those that know this part of the country will need no explanation. The drive along the banks of the Wharfe disturbed hundreds of rabbits; in fact, the banks of the river were simply "alive" with them. The Moors then came into view high on our left, and this indeed is an imposing sight. The "Cow and Calf" rocks and White Wells house, on the side of the Moors, seemed simply lost in the vast expanse of moorland. Ilkley was reached by 5 p.m., and tea was served at the Wharncliffe Restaurant, a special room being provided for the occasion. A stay of only two hours in Ilkley proved utterly inadequate for the sights, and we had to be content with a walk on the River banks. This brought us to a gap in the bank filled with water, which caused us to climb over the hedge, much amusement being caused. But after a little while all were safely landed on the other side, and we continued our walk through lovely gardens, up through the town and along the edge of the moor. As our time was now up, we all made track for the stables where the char-a-bane was all ready for the return journey. It was here noticed that one of our members had all his pockets full of "rats' tails" (no names, please; but he is a big tram man) and sat on the front next to the driver. In a few minutes we were "rattling" homewards, singing merrily the whole way. On our return we passed through the camp of the Leeds Engineers, now camping at Ben Rhydding. We then came across an interesting, though depressing, unfortunate sight—a haystack on fire. This showed up vividly in the dusk of evening. The "Harkaway" rolled merrily on, and we reached headquarters just before 10 o'clock, everyone having had a thoroughly enjoyable outing. When I say that this was the first outing of the Society, and that 33 persons made the journey, there is ample encouragement for similar outings in the future.—F. Gelder, Hon. Sec.

In the Courts.

Norfolk Bird-catcher Heavily Fined.

On August 2nd, at Methwold (Norfolk) Police Court, Richard Fenn, bird catcher, of Hockwold, was charged by Inspector Oxby, R.S.P.C.A., with unlawfully having in his possession on June 16, nine Crossbills, recently taken, contrary to the Wild Birds Acts and Home Secretary's Order.

Police-constable Brighty stated that about 3 p.m. on the day in question he saw the defendant going home to his lodgings. He followed, and told him he had received a communication about his selling Nightingales and about his bird-catching. Witness said, "I want to see the birds you have been catching." Defendant replied he hadn't any. Witness repeated his request to see the birds. Witness then went upstairs into a bed-room, and in some old boxes covered with sacking found some birds. In one box there were about twelve Linnets, twelve Chaffinches, nine Crossbills, one old and one young Thrush. They looked "three-parts dead." Seeing they were newly-caught birds, he said to defendant, "Are you aware that you should not catch these birds?" Defendant replied, "Yes, but what am I to do do; I must earn a shilling or two? I haven't caught many." Witness said, "You have been sending a lot away."

Inspector Oxby said he saw defendant on June 7 with Brighty at the former's lodgings with respect to his having wild birds in his possession the day before, amongst them being some Crossbills. Witness told defendant he had no right to take the birds, and that he should report him. Defendant subsequently said the witness would not see the birds, as they were gone; he also said, "What I must do is to swear that I have had them a long time." Defendant, addressing the Bench, said some of the birds which he had got he had kept for a long time.

Defendant was next charged with having 18 wild birds, recently taken, in his possession at Hockwold on June 17.

Inspector Oxby deposed to visiting defendant's lodging and seeing a small sugar box covered over with sacking, the box being about eighteen inches square. On looking in be found four Linnets, five Redpolls, eight Chaffinches, and one Yellow Bunting. Half of the birds were nearly dead; two of them dying. They were almost smothered. Several were quite young. He noticed several pieces of green weed adhering to tbe birds, as if they had been recently caught. By the side of the box was a set of nets with poles attached. He said, "What do you mean, Fenn, hy having these birds in your possession, as they have evidently been caught to-day, and you were told about this only last night by Police-constable Brighty, and still you keep catching them?" Defendant said, "Well, I am going to keep on catching them till I'm stopped." Witness requested him to liberate the birds, but Fenn refused to do so, and said he was going to send them away. Witness warned him that unless he took them out, and put them where they could get air, he should do so himself. Defendant then took the box and ran down the yard with it under his arm, and began putting some tin tacks into the sacking. He (witness) then took the box of birds, and Police-constable Brighty got a bird cage and put the birds in, but in the morning all but three were dead.

Fenn was further charged with causing unnecessary suffering to certain birds whilst in captivity at Hockwold on June 17.

Inspector Oxby said when he visited defendant's premises in connection with the last case he asked Fenn if he had any other birds besides tbose in the box. He replied, "No." Witness said, "I think I can hear some birds upstairs." Defendant said, "They're only my decoy birds." Defendant then went up into a back bed-room, and witness and Brighty followed. They there found four Chaffinches, two Linnets, and one Bullfinch. Each bird was in a separate cage. The cages were 7 inches hy 4 inches and 7 inches deep. The cages and birds were very filthy, and a great many of the feathers were out of the birds. The steneh was almost unbearable. The Bullfinch's colouring was gone. There was water in only two of the cages. He should say the cages had not been cleaned out for months. He had no hesitation in saying that the birds were caused unnecessary suffering.

Defendant denied that the birds were dirty, and what the witnesses had said was all wrong.

The Bench convicted. In respect of the first charge, defendant was fined £1 2s. 6d. (2s. 6d. each hird), and 12s. costs; for the second offence 9s. (6d. each bird), and 12s. costs; and for the third offence 10s., and 12s. costs; in default, committed for six weeks' imprisonment.—"Eastern Daily Press."

CANARY QUERIES.

Panting Very Badly.

A New Beginner.—I can do but little, save make a guess at what is wrong with the Yorkshire hen. She is evidently in a bad way. You should have said how you were feeding and treating her generally, and how long she has been ill, and also where you keep her. First of all, see that the cage is quite free from red mites, and that it is free from chills and cold draughts. If these points were properly attended to I am inclined to think most of the cause of illness would be removed. Feed on a staple mixture of three parts canary to one part summer rape. Every second day for a fortnight give a morsel of bread and milk dusted slightly with flowers of sulphur on two days only each week, and sprinkled with soft sugar each time. On the alternate days give a pinch of maw seed. Give a little green food daily, and allow her to bathe as often as she likes when the weather is mild, every few days soaking a few quassia chips in the bathing water. In the drinking water give twenty drops of whisky and as much Epsom Salts as will cover a sixpence every second day for a week, and in the following week give four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid every second day. If not better in a fortnight write again and give more particulars, referring to this reply.

Seed Samples and Birds Dying.

No Nom-de-plume.—No. 1 sample of canary is very small, but sweet. In quality it is just passing fair. No. 2 is probably a mixture of different grades. The bulk of it is exceedingly small and thin. Quality about same as No. 1. I should not care to use either sample for valuable birds, though neither can be called really bad. There is nothing in them to account for the deaths of the two birds, and I cannot, without much fuller particulars of their treatment generally, even hazard a guess at the cause. See that your cages are all perfectly clean, free from mites, and quite out of the way of draughts. For the rest, feed and treat the birds for a fortnight the same as advised to "A New Beginner," with the exception that you should omit the dusting of sulphur on the bread and milk altogether. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb, and as much Epsom Salts as will cover a sixpence for two consecutive days, and afterwards give four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and dilute sulphuric acid, every second day for a week. Try to get a better sample of larger seed, which will not be difficult, and with the above treatment the birds should be O.K.

Moulting Troubles, etc.

Rita.—The bird is evidently suffering from a little cold, which is probably due to his being in a much lower temperature by night than by day. Perhaps he has some warmth from fires by day, and this fluctuation in his thinly-clad condition whilst moulting has affected him. Of course, this is assuming you are quite correct when you say he has not been in a draught. See he is now in a comfortable place quite free from such variations and from draughts, and the cage from red-mites. For the next two or three weeks, in addition to the staple of Canary and rape, give a piece of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut sprinkled with soft sugar every second day, and a pinch of maw on the alternate days. Twice a week give a few grains only of linseed. Give a scrap of green food or a green plantain stalk daily. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and a pinch of Epsom salts for two days, and afterwards 20 drops of whisky, and 5 each of sweet spirit of nitre, oxymel of squills, and syrup of tolu, in the water every second day for a week. He will not sing until quite recovered from the moult. You may offer the bath in warm weather, but do not worry if he refuses to use it. In his present condition he is far better without. Half ripe plantain stalks, when the seed is well grown, but still in a green condition, are excellent as a substitute for green food. Indeed, this is the only condition in which I use them for Canaries, as my experience is they care little or nothing for the ripened seed, though they are passionately fond of them in a green condition.

Rattling in Throat.

Novice.—The bird has either been exposed to cold draughts or damp, or perhaps both, and it is doubtful if you will do much towards a real cure. Keep it in a quite comfortable place, but where the air is always pure and fresh, and the temperature as equable as possible night and day; not exposed to fumes of burning lights; and see it is perfectly free from draughts. Keep cage and perches scrupulously clean, and see that red mites are not troublesome. Give a staple diet of three parts canary to one part summer rape. Every second day for the next fortnight give a piece of bread and milk the size of a hazel nut, with three drops of cod liver oil emulsion on it, and sprinkled with soft sugar, and on the alternate days a pinch of maw. Give a little green food daily, or seed stalks of plantain or shepherd's-purse in a half-ripe state. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence for two days, and afterwards give twenty drops of whisky, six each of oxymel of squills, and glycerine, and two of oil of eucalyptus, well shaken together in the water, every second day for a week, or fortnight if necessary.

Crest-bred Cock Unwell.

G. Roach.—I suspect the recent changeable weather, and, perhaps, the approaching moult, is responsible for upsetting the bird. Put him on plain canary seed as staple for a fortnight, and every second day give a morsel of bread and milk sprinkled with soft sugar and gold of pleasure seed, and twice each week on the alternate days give a small teaspoonful of rape. Give a spray of green food, or half-ripe stalks of plantain or shepherd's-purse, daily. Limit the dietary solely to this for the time named. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb, and as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence every second day for a week, and on the alternate days give four drops each of tincture of gentian, tincture of calumba, and aromatic sulphuric acid in the water. If not well by the end of first week continue during the following week with dissolving in the water a crystal of sulphate of soda the size of a small pea, crystal of sulphate of iron half as big, and six drops of dilute sulphuric acid. Give this every second day for a week.

About Colour Feeding.

H.M.H.—(1) No, I do not consider it advisable—save in very exceptional circumstances—to add linseed meal to the mixture of colour food. I prefer to offer the whole seed when advisable—a pinch three or four times a week during the latter half of the moult—and let the birds please themselves whether they take it or not. Its use is not with the object of helping to heighten the colour, but of adding bloom or lustre to the plumage, and this effect will be obtained by substituting a few chopped kernels of sunflower seeds if the birds do not choose to eat the whole linseed. (2) It is a long time since I examined the food you mention, and I have forgotten whether it already contains a dash of hot pepper. If it has only a little pungency to the palate it probably contains quite enough. There is also no necessity to add hot pepper for Crests, but if you wish to try it, well mix a teaspoonful of Nepaul with a quarter pound of tasteless red. This should be quite sufficient for your purpose. (3) The points re hot pepper and linseed meal are answered in 1 and 2. I note you say of egg food, "one egg and an equal quantity of biscuit." This is unnecessarily rich in egg. One egg and twice its bulk of biscuit powder is quite rich enough. To this quantity add a small teaspoonful of the colour food, and blend thoroughly at the beginning of moult, gradually increase the proportion of colour to twice this quantity, and when quills begin to appear about the head and neck, reduce it again to the original proportions to finish off with. Of the mixture of egg, biscuit, and colour combined, give each bird a small teaspoonful a day. (4) The rum and saffron mixture is only to induce a speedy moult, being given chiefly at the commencement to get the birds well broken up in moult. Keeping them warm afterwards should keep the moult going satisfactorily. It would be useful for birds which got "stuck" in moult, or had a difficulty in starting. Thus, you will see it has no connection at all with linseed in the way of being a substitute for it.

Brevities.

Cause of Death (A. M. J., Willesden Green).—I cannot venture to guess the cause. Only a post-mortem on the remains would be of any value. Your feeding and general treatment are very good, and I can only imagine there was something physically wrong internally. You do not mention the source of the hæmorrhage. This would probably be the immediate cause of death, the outcome of a ruptured blood-vessel; but the real mischief which culminated in this way could only be ascertained in the way suggested.

HOUSE'S CANARY MANUAL

By C. A. House. Post free 1/2 (postal order).

A thorough and practical guide to the general management and breeding of Canaries, written by a well-known expert and judge. It contains chapters dealing fully with the breeding, etc., of every member of the Canary family, including the German (or Roller) Canary.

An illustration of each bird, by the master Canary artist, Mr. H. Normnn, reproduced in the finest art style.

There are also exhaustive chapters on aviaries and cages, breeding procedure, moulting, exhibiting, diseases and seeds—a compendium of knowledge approached by no other book of its kind at the price.

CAGE BIRDS, 154, Fleet Street, London, E.C.

Seed Samples (Novice).—No really satisfactory or reliable opinion can be based upon such small samples as you sent. Here is my opinion for what it is worth; whether the bulk would justify them I will not pretend to say. No. 1 is clean and bright, of good size, but very poor flavour. Am inclined to think it has been slightly damaged by improper storage. No. 2 is also of good size, well ripened, and a very nice sample generally. It is far preferable to No. 1.

Offensive Excreta (Oswestrian).—Keep her in a cage by herself, and strew the floor liberally with sawdust, which remove and burn frequently, so as to keep cage and perches as clean as possible. See the foods, seeds, and water are not at fault. Feed on canary only as staple. Every second day give a pinch of summer rape, and each alternate day for the next fortnight a small piece of bread scalded in milk, and covered with a pinch of mixed seed. Give no green food for the present, but a small piece of banana may be given on the days when no bread and milk is supplied. In the drinking water give as much Epsom Salts for one day only as will cover a sixpence. After this six drops of dandelion juice, and four each of tincture of gentian and aromatic sulphuric acid, every second day for a week. If the bird is not well by this time, during the second week slightly dust the bread and milk with carbonate of bismuth, and on the alternate days dissolve a crystal of sulphate of iron the size of a split pea in the drinking water.

Bad on Feet (Constant Reader).—I cannot gather what is really wrong with the bird's feet. Are the toes deformed in shape, curled underneath, or do they clasp the perch when the bird is perching in the proper manner? If the latter, I should suspect all that is wrong is the outcome of your application of paraffin, with, perhaps, a little soreness in the first instance. You had better write again, and describe the appearance of the feet, and say whether they are looking sore, or the toes deformed. In the latter event enclose a rough sketch of the shape of the toes. Meantime, see your perches are of proper size and shape—a flattened oval, about five-eighths of an inch by half inch through each diameter. Bathe feet in a warm solution of boracic acid—a teaspoonful of acid to half a teacupful of hot water—for a few minutes daily for a few days, dry carefully afterwards, and anoint sparingly with zinc ointment. Keep cage and perches perfectly clean.

Rescued Canary (Mrs. H. Tomlin).—It is not an easy matter to tell the breed from an unskilled description of its dead body. If the bird you have is of apparently great length (between six and seven inches at least) it is a Yorkshire, but if it is a much shorter bird it is probably a Roller. The ring would lend more colour to the latter supposition. The reddish tips to wings and tail are doubtless external discolouration. I do not suppose the body is of any value or interest now to the unfortunate owner. Perhaps if any reader in the neighbourhood of Upton Park has lost a Canary, rung 2303, and he sees this reply, he may console himself with the knowledge that it was done to death by a feline marauder, from whom it was rescued by a kindly hand, only for it to give up the ghost afterwards.

Accommodation and Seeds (Constant Reader, W.G.H.).—Am sorry to disappoint you again, but now you have sent the measurement omitted before, you have omitted all those sent last time, and as I do not keep queries by me, you will see I am still just where I was before. You will be all right in calculating a sq. ft. of floor space for each bird. Being bred in the cold greenhouse, they should thrive quite well through the winter in the aviary, which appears nicely sheltered and cosy. No seed samples reached me last time. Of those now to hand, the canary is rather small and thin, none too well refined, but is quite sweet and should be quite safe to use. Still, better is to be had. The summer rape is good but wants properly storing a few months longer to mellow it. If you cannot get a milder and more nutty flavoured sample, use this in smaller proportions for a time, and give a small proportion of hemp to counteract the looseness which this sample will be apt to set up.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., etc.

Budgerigars Not Drinking.

No Name.—Budgerigars are small drinkers under any conditions, and I am under the impression that yours have taken a little water when not under observation. Continue to supply the seeding grass and lettuce, not necessarily both together, but at separate times as a change, and they will ultimately take to them. Supply every other day a small piece of turf, similar to what is given to a Lark.—Well water it—use water-can with rose on it—before supplying to the birds. A supply of half a dozen such pieces, kept watered and changed every other day would keep fresh for some time. You have nothing to fear so long as the birds do not get mopy; but the above treatment will help, as also would the booklet "Budgerigars and Cockatiels," 6d., plus postage, from this office. I could have been more definite had you told me under what conditions you were keeping the birds, i.e., caged or in aviary, and in or out of doors.

Grey Parrot with Swelling.

A. MacGregor.—If the swelling contains matter, you must foment it with hot water till it is ripe; it will then require lancing and the pus exuded by gentle pressure, the place well cleansed, and then anointed with a little healing ointment. If the swelling is a hardish, fleshy one without matter, then treat it with tincture of iodide, which can be applied with a camel-hair brush; the brush should be well cleansed after and before use. The swelling should be painted daily so long as the skin remains unbroken. During this period the bowels should be kept well regulated with doses of Dinneford's Magnesia, according to the bird's condition—one part magnesia to two parts water. The drinking water on most days should be well coloured with Parrish's Chemical Food. The swelling, according to its nature, should gradually yield to above treatment. But by far the best way is to let a fully-qualified vet. see it; the nature of the growth should to him be at once apparent. It is quite possible that the growth could be at once removed by an operation, and the bird saved needless suffering, and I certainly advise you to place the bird in a vet.'s hand; this is always the best course in such cases.

Parrot with Painful Leg.

Mrs. Jackson.—In the first place, still continue the treatment as per previous reply. For the next month give in lieu of the drinking, one part Dinneford's Magnesia, two parts water. But if the evidings become watery-loose you must then lengthen the period between the doses. Also get a box of boney and borax, and put a little on the bird's tongue twice daily while it lasts; milk sop is only permissible as a medicine, and for limited periods; continued for any length of time it leads to feather pulling and chronic dyspepsia. Do not give the rice pudding, but a little plain boiled rice is wholesome, and sweetened with a little sugar or honey should do the bird good. For one week only, give a little milk sop morning and evening—a tablespoonful should be sufficient for both occasions—and at the end of the week you had better report progress. I can advise nothing further for the leg on the data to hand, and I strongly advise letting your local vet. see it, for I am of the opinion it is either badly strained or fractured. If it should be paralysis, complete recovery is not possible, though the treatment advised should alleviate matters much. Even if it is the latter, it may live some years yet, and not suffer much inconvenience, as it will soon become accustomed to supporting itself on one leg. I should certainly fix the perch not more than four inches from the bottom of the cage; then a fall is not so likely to cause injury. Shall hope to hear of an improvement a week hence.

Dead Parrot and Infection.

F. J. Hulbert.—I much regret to hear of your loss, though I feared as much; you must, of course, wait for the bact. report before any decision can be come to, as to its being diseased or not at the time of purchase, though I rather doubt its having reached such a condition in such a short period if it had been quite sound. However this may be, I rather doubt if you have any remedy, as from your letter I gather that the bird showed no outward signs of being unsound, and that the vendor would be equally unaware of any infection. You had better send a query to Editor for our legal column on this point. Re infection, I take it that as soon as the bird became seriously ill you did not keep it in close proximity to the other birds, and you need not, I think, fear infection, but though you thoroughly cleansed, etc., the cage, I should not care to advise its use for another bird till it had been thoroughly painted over with crude carbolic acid, being careful that all crevices are searched with the acid, and after being well swilled with clean water, leave it outside for a week for sun and air to complete the work. You would find the booklet "Disinfection of Birdrooms and Cages" by Mr. Yates, 2½d. post free, published by CAGE BIRDS, very helpful.

Birds for Large Cage.

E. A. Kemp.—The kinds of birds you can keep are legion—the quantity should be nine birds the size of a Norwich Canary, and either a larger or smaller number pro rata according to size. If you wish for possible breeding results, but this point I am not taking into consideration in the list given below, and if you desire such, you must repeat query on this point. I think you would find a collection of Waxbills very pleasing and interesting: most of the following are beautiful, vivacious, and have soft and pleasing notes: Common and Green Avadavats, Orange-cheek, Gold-breasted, Grey, and St. Helena Waxbills in pairs and an odd cock, Grey Singing Finch for song. Your cage would accommodate the above. Hang up half-a-dozen cocoanut shell nests as retiring places for them, and supply canary, white millet, millet sprays, green food, grit, water for drinking and bathing (bath to hang over door outside the cage for preference), and a piece of cuttlebone will about meet the needs of the above feathered mites. A blighty spray of foliage, from rose or fruit trees, will add to their content and general well-being.

Brevities.

Class for Siberian Bullfinches (H. Lawton).—It all depends on the classification. If such a class be provided their proper place would be with European Finches; otherwise, they must go among the Foreign species, according to the classification of the respective show.

Birds for Breeding Cages (Constant Reader).—1. Not more than two pairs, one pair only would be the better plan; very few of the small Waxbills and Ornamental Finches, possibly for want of experimenting with, attempt to breed in cages and in a restricted area two pairs materially interfere with each other's domestic arrangements. 2. The following have all bred (not complete list) in cages: Zebra Finches, Cutthroats, Magpie Mannikins, Long-tailed Greenfinches, Crimson Finches, White Java Sparrows, Bengalese, etc., any of which you could keep as single pairs in your cage, with reasonable hopes of their breeding sooner or later; if you decide on having two pairs, then the two first-named in above list will best meet your case. 3. Canary, white millet, millet sprays, a few oats, and a little paddy rice, with green food, cuttlebone, grit and water will suffice for the above, except when they are feeding young, when they must have some soft food (several good mixtures are advertised in our columns) daily, and also, if procurable, sprays of blighty foliage from rose or fruit trees.

Waxbills Dying, etc. (Shoer).—I cannot assign any definite reason, but can only suggest a few possible causes, and advise you to send next body to our Mr. Yates for post-mortem report. It is possible some of the deaths have been from violence, as I note you have Java Sparrows and Budgerigars, though it is not often the former do any harm. Again, you may be a sufferer in common with many others, from the prevalent pneumonia, consequent upon the inclement weather; losses have been very numerous from this cause this year, even in well-regulated and constructed aviaries, but a post mortem examination will soon reveal this. For the Doves, supply canary and white millet seeds in one hopper, and a mixture of wheat, durra, rape, hemp, small Indian corn, and crushed oats in another; also green food, cuttlebone, water and grit; a piece of rock salt is greatly appreciated by most species of Doves and Pigeons.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

To Pick a Linnet.

John Bull. Cut it out, John, this time, and keep it handy. In choosing a Linnet, beware of the bird with an artificially coloured breast. The colour is palpably unnatural (at least, to my eyes); just a smear of "redille" put on with a finger very different in appearance to the red on the breast of a genuine cock bird. The price is a pretty safe guide to the sex in most of the birdshops. When cocks and hens are mixed (or the cages, rather) the lowest-priced birds can be put down as certain hens, though the difference may be only a copper or two. It is safe to say, in fact, that the great majority of "cock" Linnets offered for sale at temptingly low prices are not cocks at all, but hens. Buyers will bite at low prices; they generally get bitten in the process. When you get to know a good Linnet, then you can safely look for "bargains." I have known a Palace winner purchased for fivepence; and I have seen scores of unmitigated hens sold for more. For singing purposes you want to go and look for a medium-sized bird, bold in demeanour (not dashing madly about the cage), with big, wide-open, fearless eyes, and tight in plumage—a bird that has "got the jump quickly," as old Linnet men say; that is, hops steadily backwards and forwards without getting on the wires. Such a bird is certain to turn out a singer (if a cock, of course). If he "does a turn" while you are weighing up his merits, then he is doubly certain to. Don't pick a loose-feathered, "lumpy" looking, "quiet" bird, however, thinking him "very steady"; he is most likely ailing.

Management of Yellowhammer.

Novice.—Quite right; you will have to exercise patience. Yellowhammers are unsteady birds, as a rule, when first caught. You are caging him correctly. All the Buntings feed very much alike. The only "stock mixture" you will need is plain Canary seed. Few Yellow Buntings will eat any quantity of other seeds, though small oats, wild seed mixture, rape, cracked hemp, coarse oatmeal, maw, and one or two other seeds, will be picked over, and a few eaten, while some get to like crushed sunflower, and safflower. To make a little variety in the diet, it is best to give a feed of soaked ants' eggs frequently, and live insect food (mealworms, flies, scoured gentles, small beetles, and grubs generally), according to season. Fresh (live) ants' eggs are relished exceedingly. "Shop" ants' eggs (get the best quality only) are well liked if soaked in a little new milk, drained on a cloth, and then given the birds; this helps to bring them into condition. It is well to mix a sprinkling of a good insectivorous food among the ants' eggs, gradually increasing the quantity, as in this way Buntings (other species, too) can be got to eat it readily; and it is very good for them. Greco food these birds are not keen on, but you can always offer them a sprig of whatever you may happen to have in the place. Let him bathe freely.

A Redpoll for Show.

A. T. Paul.—The Redpoll certainly has the merit of cheapness; still, it takes a very good one to win nowadays at the shows, for competition is usually very keen. A Redpoll, whether the Mealy or the Lesser, should be managed on much the same lines as the Linoet, and you would find our "Nutshell" handbook on the Linnet very helpful to you (post free, 2½d.). One of the best possible seed mixtures is: Canary three parts, teazle two parts, summer rape and charlock one part each, linseed half a part, by measure. During the moult add one part of hemp, and towards the finish of the moult increase the proportion of linseed to one part. Also give a little maw seed now and again, and a little niger, too, while wild seed mixture is very much relished, and can be given freely during the moult. Seeding green food, such as shepherd's purse, chickweed, knotgrass, plantain, etc., is very good for them, and these things, too, require to be given more freely during the moult than at any other period. In fact, it is a free supply of them, and a free use of the bath, which put colour into, and gloss on to, the plumage. These wild seeding plants should be gathered fresh as often as possible, and the more minute, crawling insect life there is about them, the better for the birds. Redpolls also like thistle and hardheads. No doubt many Lessers get some colour-food given them; it is not, of course, absolutely necessary.

British Bird Queries should purchase our "British Bird Manual," published in two parts, "Hardbills" and "Softbills," price 1/- each, or in cloth cover together, 2/3 post free.

Brevities.

A Weed (Harry English).—I do not know the name of the weed of which you send a specimen. I have never used it myself as a food for British birds, nor have I seen it in use with other bird-keepers. I could get it identified for you, if you particularly wish it.

A Sample of Teazle Seed (S. Manning).—In my judgment the sample of teazle seed sent is of very good quality indeed, clean (as teazle goes) and well ripened. It is a pity to waste that Goldie hen; why not mate her with a cock Goldie, or with a Redpoll or Siskin cock? Live ants' eggs are good for any bird that will eat them; some Goldies very much relish a few now and again.

Young Greenfinches (W.N.B.).—If you select the brightest coloured young Greenfinches, with the greatest amount of yellow showing in the wing and tail feathers, you cannot very well fail to pick cocks. It would be a very good plan to mate one of the hens with the cock Canary, especially if he is a clear bird. Goldfinch, Siskin, and Redpoll cocks would (if they bred) produce nice hybrids with the other Greenie hens, and the young would be of some value if they turned out good exhibition birds.

More Tongue Slitting (H. Pavey).—It has been stated times without number in CAGE BIRDS that the slitting of birds' tongues with a view to assisting them to talk is a useless cruelty which ought to result in the perpetrator being haled before a magistrate. A bird does not use its tongue when articulating. My own Magpie (a last year's bird) is talking and mimicking splendidly; his tongue is as Nature made it. Your own Magpie is too young to talk; you must wait until after it has moulted.

A Book (F.B.H.).—Get part 2 of Mr. Norman's "British Bird Manual," from this office (post free 1s. 1d.), which deals with softhills, and in it you will find much useful information concerning the management of the large softhills, such as Magpies, Jays, Jackdaws, etc. You might do worse than clip the outer flights (four or five on each wing), and let the bird have the run of the garden—at any rate, occasionally.

Concerning Linnets (Working Lad).—Your treatment is fairly correct. I am afraid you did not commence with the castor oil, etc., early enough. I advise you in future to give your Linnets (especially the fresh ones) a little saline medicine twice a week, say, as much sulphate of soda crystals as will lie upon a sixpence dissolved in three tablespoonfuls of drinking water. This will ward off stomach troubles. You do quite right to stick to the seed mixture which you find brings success. At the same time, I think a little linseed and charlock very good for Linnets; my own birds get these seeds, and I very seldom lose one, though I buy a good number. I presume your seeds are of good quality? I have yet to meet with the Linnet that does not care for ripe shepherd's-purse; my own "go for it bald headed."

Loss of Feathers (W.L.). I have several times recently said that birds are apt to go "bald" about this time of the year, and that the trouble is remedied at the moult. So if a bird is healthy apart from the baldness, there is nothing to worry about. Your own bird should be moulting now within the next few weeks. If you want to "try something," twice daily for a few days anoint the bare place with a tiny touch of mild sulphur ointment.

In an Aviary (Old King Cole). You might be well advised to keep the old cock Canaries and some of the young cocks that you have bred, for, being bred outdoors, they would be certain to withstand the winter. I should advise you to keep cocks only (both British and Canaries), and your aviary should comfortably hold 20 to 24 birds, or thereabouts. If you confine yourself to song only, this condition bars the Bullfinch and Bramblefinch, also the Yellow, Reed, Snow, and Cirl Buntings, which, I think, would be a pity, for all are handsome and attractive aviary birds. Goldfinch, Linnet, Siskin, Twite, Redpoll, Chaffinch, and Greenfinch would be very suitable species.

"Reed Birds" (M. Ansler).—Your letter has come along to me, but I note that the second query refers to a foreign bird, so will have to go before Mr. Page for answer. Are the "Reed Birds" foreigners, too? If you mean Reed Buntings, then canary seed is the chief article of diet, with a little insectile mixture frequently, together with an allowance of live food (mealworms, live ants' eggs, etc.). All the English Buntings subsist practically entirely on canary, so far as seed is concerned. Reed Warblers are sometimes called "Reed Birds," and these, of course, are strictly insectivorous.

Two Matters (Avis).—1. You may try the ointment mentioned in the reply to "W.J." this week. The loss of feathers is certainly not necessarily "catching"; I had a Bramblefinch go bald this year, but none of his companions went the same way, and now this Bramble has moulted out into perfect condition. If caused by any skin parasite, then the sulphur ointment would be a good dressing. Bullie hens very frequently lose feathers in the summer from the region of the eyes and base of the beak. 2. Steep the feet for a few moments daily in warm water, to which has been added a few drops of Lysol (obtainable at any chemist's)—10 or 12 drops will be ample for a small teacupful of water. If there is any soreness and tendency to be inflamed, this will subdue it.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 2, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. And bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

S. B., Macclesfield.—The Canary was suffering from lung disease. The condition is known as sub-acute pneumonia, commencing with bronchitis, which accounts for the wheeziness you describe. The grinding noise made with the beak is due to chest pain and general distress. Commence early treatment for bronchitis as described in my articles in CAGE BIRDS.

W. Lidgate.—Death arose from inflammation of the bowels. The trouble probably arises from some contagious element. Isolate at once any affected birds, and administer to each night and morning in the drinking water 5 drops of tincture camphoræ Co., adding a little simple syrup to sweeten.

L. P. Smith.—Canary was very extensively diseased, the bowels inflamed throughout their whole course, and both lungs affected with pneumonia; the last-mentioned was the cause of death, but the disease is a blood disease of same character as that described under name of Thos. Robson. Follow course of treatment as suggested to him.

Liscards.—Canary was in an unfit state for thorough examination, liver completely decomposed and intestines nearly black. You must send me another specimen. Your letter I received on Sunday morning and bird on Monday, so that from time of death to its arrival here several days had elapsed, and at this time of year putrefaction rapidly occurs. By sending birds by letter instead of parcel post, same are delivered much earlier.

F. Stebbing.—The young cock Canary was very badly diseased, the liver being the seat of trouble, the right lobe particularly so, much enlarged and necrotic. The greater part of this was quite solid. The disease is brought about by the introduction of bacteria and their products, either in their food or by excreta of other diseased birds soiling this. These gain access to the liver and there set up necrosis or local death of certain areas. This diseased process extends until its functional activity is upset and death results. I should discontinue use of rain water for soaking seed and instead boil your water for this purpose and use when cold. This will render it sufficiently soft for all practical purposes. Be sure and well dry the seed, not allowing it to become sour. Give a plentiful supply of green food, and allow a little crushed hemp. Your treatment now must be directed to the prevention of further loss, for medicinal treatment, when once affected, is of little avail. I am afraid your treatment has been empirically applied. It is always advisable to ascertain the cause before applying remedies.

Thos. Robson.—The disease is of a highly infectious character. No doubt your experience has already taught you this. The clinical differences between the disease of last year and this are more probably due to increase of virulency, and that they both originate from the same cause. The spleen was enormously enlarged, as is usually the case in infectious disease. The actual cause of death was pneumonia as a sequel. The blood on microscopical examination was swarming with bacteria. The disease is a septicæmia (not septic fever), this term denoting a disease in which the bacteria not only maintain their existence in the circulation, but also multiply there, the toxins or products of these causing death. Isolation and disinfection must be thorough. Remedial measures cannot be applied specifically; you can only treat the symptoms as they arise. Quinine or salicylate or soda, preferably the former, with a combination of iron, such as citrate of iron and quinine, may be tried, allowing just sufficient to colour the drinking water for those seeming well, whilst with those affected one must treat as for pneumonia, by placing them in as warm a position as possible, and administering stimulants, of which the ammonium compounds give the best result—carbunate of ammonia in five grain doses given in drinking water, combined with tincture of squills, ten minims, and glycerine or simple syrup to sweeten, is a convenient preparation to use. This treatment must be adopted at the very earliest moment, as soon as illness is manifest. Recovery from this disease will give immunity, even although the subject be exposed to further contagion.

GENERAL.

Cuttings (E. S. Lugg, W. Moore, A. M. Evans, W. Watson, and others).—Accept our thanks for your kindness.

An Error (R. Hall).—You will note that the Secretary of the C.B.U. has sent a correction of the error which crept into his last report.

A Show Report (J. Buchanan).—We thank you for sending us this report; an account had, however, reached us from the Secretary.

Club Reports.

DERWENT VALLEY C.B.S.

Meeting held Aug. 6th, Mr. G Barkas in the chair. There was a good turn up of members. The election of judge for our open show resulted in Mr. Robson being elected. The Society is leaving nothing to chance. We hope fanciers will more than compensate us in entries. We got our open schedule well on towards completion, and also our prize draw.—J. LINNSAY, Hon. Sec.

BLAYDON-ON-TYNE & DIS. C.B.S.

At our usual monthly meeting there was a fair muster of members. After the usual business, the secretary gave the first feather show report, which was considered very satisfactory, seeing there was a balance on the right side. The members decided to have five other classes for their annual show, namely, two for Cinnamons, two for Lizards, and one for Scotch Fancies. We hope fanciers will support us in this effort, seeing we guarantee all prize money, whether there be competition or not, and that we also pay 20/- per class. We have received the patronage of the British Bird, Mule and F.B.C. Club, also the annual show of the Northern Crest Club will be held in conjunction with ours. Furthermore, we have been selected as one of the shows for the Roberts' twenty-five guinea cup. So everything tends to our having a record show.—GEO. HAVVER, Sec. (Kindly write on one side of paper only.—Editor.)

ARDWICK AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Meeting held August 2nd, at Onward Hall, there being a good attendance. Mr. A. E. Long gave a lecture on the management of the breeding room. Although only a novice in the Fancy, he clearly proved that he had studied the wants and habits of his birds. He explained that the object of the lecture was to give rise to an exchange of views, and whatever question arose out of the lecture he felt sure all would benefit by the answers. He was well aware that several present were older and more experienced fanciers than he; and could teach him far more than he knew. This was the point—he wanted to draw these members out, so as to make the lecture more interesting; also to gain as much information as possible for the benefit of the novice. He said he did not keep a very large stock of birds, but just as many as his time allowed him to give proper attention to. He dealt with the housing of the birds, the cleanliness of cages, and the feeding during the winter. Breeding, moulting, etc., were considered. After his lecture lots of questions were asked, and Mr. Long answered them. Owing to its getting late, our chairman had to close the meeting. A hearty vote of thanks was accorded Mr. Long.—J. SPENCER, Hon. Sec.

NEWCASTLE C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held August 4th, Mr. Currah in the chair. The secretary announced that we had been granted the patronage of the C.M.Y.C.C., the N.B.B.M. and F.B.C., the O.N.P.C., the Y.C.C., the N.G.M.Y.C.C., the N.L.C.C., and the B.F.C.C. The following new members were elected:—Mr. Norman Howard (Byker), and Mr. T. H. Harrison (Heaton). It was decided that members' classes be as last year. A motion by Mr. D. Scott re judging members' classes was postponed till next meeting. The chairman presented Messrs. Tomlinson and Hutchinson with the cups won at the nest feather show. A vote of thanks was given to the selection committee, and also to Mr. Bagnall, from whom the new cup was bought, for letting us have it at cost price, and his present of plinth and globes, also for engraving. Votes of thanks were given to the judges and stewards for their offices at the nest feather show. The chairman then called upon Mr. Grey, of Morpeth, to give us his experiences upon the Norwich Plainhead. [This lecture will be found reported in another column.—Ed.] At the close of the lecture, full of excellent hints, several questions were answered, and a discussion arose upon the fertility of a clutch of eggs if the hen had been egg-bound, also upon the use of sand for the purpose of digestion. A hearty vote of thanks was given Mr. Grey for his able lecture. Next monthly meeting will be held on Sept. 1st, and I hope members will bring me their lists of specials for that meeting, as our show will soon be here, and it is necessary to have the schedules in the printer's hands in good time. Also I shall be glad to receive all tickets which have not been sold for next feather show, so as to present balance sheet next meeting. Committee kindly note there is a meeting on August 18th.—T. C. CRAWHALL, Sec.

GREEN CANARY ASSOCIATION.

Monthly meeting held at Oldham Hall, July 28th, Mr. J. W. Metcalfe in the chair. The following new members were elected: — Messrs. McMillan and Richardson (Dumfries), Millington (Cockermouth), Nelson (Warrington), McQuillan and Johnston (Wallsend), Woodman (Liscard), Amos and Arnot and Jamieson (Hawick), Bennet (Kelso), Thomas (Halifax), Forrest (Whitburn), Connolly (Walton), and Mrs. Fildes (Sale). Messrs. Brunskill and Rodinson were nominated for membership. The patronage was granted, and resulted in the following societies' shows being selected: — Oct. 14, 15, Crewe (12 classes); Oct. 22, Rochdale (12); Oct. 28, 29, Manchester (12); Nov. 4, 5, Liverpool (12); Nov. 9, 10, Swansea (12); Nov. 26, 27, Sale (12); Dec. 3, Garston (8, Yorkshires and Norwich), Hawick (4, Borders); Dec. 9, 10, Halifax (4, Yorkshires); Dec. 31, and Jan. 7, 10, Scottish National (12), also the Crystal Palace and G.C.A. nal shows, arrangements for which are not yet completed. We have no open date on Dec 9, 10 for 4 Norwich and 4 Border classes, and shall be pleased to receive applications from societies holding a show on the date in question. CITY AND SUBURBAN A.C.B.

Meeting at headquarters, 60, Paddington Street, on Aug. 8th, with Mr. A. C. Burn in the chair. Miss Knott and Mr. L. H. Druett were elected members, and Mr. H. E. Trangham (Rotherhithe) was nominated. The quarterly statement of accounts, showing an income of £76 1s. 1½d., an expenditure of £39 1s. 7½d., with a cash balance of £36 19s. 6d., was read and confirmed. Eleven handsome struck silver medals, fully engraved, and four cups, won at the recent young bird show, were presented by the Chairman. The Secretary announced that as a result of negotiations, the large hall, capable of holding 2,000 birds, lighted from the roof by day and by a powerful array of electric lights by night, had been secured for the Association's future shows, made imperative by the increasing growth of exhibiting members. A challenge to play the return cricket match with the members of the "Early Birds" C.C. on Saturday, September 3rd, was accepted, the following giving in their names as wishing to take part: C. and F. Prior, J. and A. Pooley, W. Sanders, A. W. Hart, S. Cotty, B. Parkhurst, W. Curtis, E. Bassett, J. Chard, and V. Wynn In consequence of no notification of the Fed. meeting reaching Mr. Curtis, and Mr. Sanders being absent, the business in connection with the game was adjourned. It was then moved and carried that the next meeting be abandoned owing to a business engagement in the North of England compelling Mr. J. Tyson to cancel his lecture, and to the fact that the Secretary's duties would take him out of London during the rest of August. Power was conferred upon the Secretary in connection with the remodelling of the staging suitable for the stone floor of the new hall. At the last moment, and after the announcement of the meeting had been despatched, information was received that Mr. Peverell (who was to have given a demonstration on the art of preparing and painting cages, etc.) was unavoidably prevented from attending the meeting. To fill up the gap thus caused, Mr. G. E. Weston very kindly consented at such short notice to say a few words on "Colour Feeding." At the close, questions were asked by Messrs. A. W. Curtis, A. W. Hart, C. F. Ayres, A. C. Burn, and others, but owing to the lateness of the hour the discussion had to be abruptly terminated. A vote of thanks, proposed by the Chairman, seconded by Mr. Curtis, and supported by Mr. C. Prior, was enthusiastically accorded to Mr. Weston. A vote of thanks to the Chairman closed the meeting.—VICTOR WYNN, Hon. Sec.

The Catching of Hawfinches.

SIR,—I shall be glad if one of your numerous readers can give me information as to the best way to catch Hawfinches. I have an adult hen that could be used as a decoy bird if required. These birds pay frequent visits to a row of green peas in a friend's garden.

One White and Two Light Grey Swallows.

SIR,—The numerous readers of CAGE BIRDS will be interested to know that a brood of three Swallows have been hatched off in a shed belonging to Miss Barston, at Garon Hill, York. One of the young ones is white and the other two are a light grey in colour. The birds are to be seen flying about the grounds. A READER OF CAGE BIRDS.

The Cage Bird Union.

Venue of Delegates' Meeting.

SIR,—Would you kindly announce that the meeting of delegates on the 27th inst. will be held at Saracen's Head Hotel, Leicester, situate at the corner of the Market Place and Hotel Street. I have sent out invitations to all societies who have not rejoined this year to send a representative to the meeting, and I trust that this opportunity will be taken of giving expression to any causes of dissatisfaction, and that it may result in all societies once more joining together to make the Union a thoroughly representative body for the good of the Fancy. Two or three errors have got into the agenda. Item No. 4 of the Palace meeting agenda should read: "Any member showing Canaries in Mule classes be expelled," and not as typed; and in the agenda for the meeting the proposition suggested by the Preston Society is as follows: "That non-Union judges be not allowed to judge Union Shows." The second item of the Sheffield Society's suggestion, as to card voting, is not complete. GEO. W. F. LYTHGOE, Sec.

Bullfinches which Return Home.

An Instance of Birds Preferring Captivity.

SIR,—Perhaps the following account will prove of sufficient interest to insert in CAGE BIRDS. I have learnt a lot and have derived much pleasure from its pages, and as this occurrence is rather out of the ordinary, I thought I would let your readers know of it. About eighteen months ago I purchased a hen Bullfinch, which had been caught then about three months. Last year I paired her with a cock Canary, and late in the season the Bullfinch went to nest and laid one egg. But she would not sit. This year I paired the hen with a cock Bullfinch, and the cock Canary was placed with a hen Canary. For some time after I had placed the Bullfinches together, they indulged in frequent battles; so much so that at last, after the hen had well-nigh killed the cock bird, I gave the matter up for a bad job and liberated them. The cock bird flew about two yards from the aviary door, perched on the wall and started chirping. The hen flew right away. I was going indoors a few minutes after, when to my surprise the hen returned and tried to enter the aviary, the door of which I had closed. I went out and opened the door, and retired, and in a few minutes the hen returned again, this time with her beak full of something, which closely resembled frayed out rope. The cock bird, who had remained on the wall all the time, now flew down in the yard, and the two birds entered the outhouse adjoining the house. I shut the door, and, catching them in a cage, I placed them in their old quarters. They settled down at once, and the next day the hen started building a nest in a furze bush, which I had placed in the aviary. She laid four eggs, but unfortunately broke three while getting out of the nest. I think the horsehair, of which the nest was largely composed, got entangled with her feet. I took two Greenfinches' eggs and one Bullfinch egg and placed them in the nest to remedy the deficit, and awaited results. One Greenfinch and one Bullfinch hatched, the Bullie four days after the Greenie. The Bullie died when two days old. The Greenfinch was five days old and going on fine when, in an unlucky moment I pushed the door up when feeding the Bullie, and forgot to pull it down. Shortly after feeding them and while sitting indoors, I fancied that the Bullie's note which was almost incessant, sounded rather loud. I looked out and to use an Irishism, "There they were—one." I started hand-feeding the Greenfinch and reared it for six days, when it also, like the little Bullie, said, "Fed up," and died. The next day, when I came home from work, the hen Bullfinch was in the aviary, and I was informed that she had walked into the shed and that my mother had shut the door, thus preventing her escape. The following morning the cock bird also returned, being attracted by the hen bird calling. They nested again in the same nest in the same bush. The hen laid five eggs, and eventually hatched three youngsters. One egg was clear, and the other contained a young bird almost ready to emerge. They reared the youngsters well to the age of eighteen days, and then the hen went to nest again. The old birds would have no more to do with the young, and although I tried to hand-rear them, they all died. The hen laid six eggs, one on the edge of the nest; this one I took away to blow. They were due to hatch on July 30 or 31st. But now comes the strange part: While the hen was sitting on the first nest, I liberated the cock bird, just to see if it would return. It did, and I let it out again about three days after. It returned again, but stopped out a night first. Since then I have let it out almost every day, and to-day it has been out twice. The hen I have let out about four or five times, the last time being July 18th, when she stopped away for six hours. I have not let her out since, as she is sitting on five eggs. There were three eggs in the nest on July 18th, so perhaps her long absence will have spoilt them. Several persons have witnessed the cock flying out and in, and they have all expressed surprise at such a thing. I may say that the cock bird is hand-reared and very tame. The Canary to which the hen Bullfinch was paired last year, is now paired to a hen Canary, and has reared four youngsters just lately, yet he still calls to the hen Bullie whenever he sees her.

Canaries Without Tails.

SIR,—I am writing to let you know that I have a nest of three Canaries which are three weeks old to-day, bred off a Norwich sib. hen and cock, and two out of the three have no tails, nor is there any sign of the formation of a tail. I would like to know if it has ever been known before, or if it is a curiosity? Perhaps some fancier could enlighten me.

SIR,—I am pleased to be able to announce that the National Cage Bird Show will be held at the Crystal Palace on February 3, 4, 6, 7 next. I shall be pleased to hear from secretaries of specialist clubs that have not yet written me, also from any others that may desire to make suggestions re classification, etc. J. W. RAMSDEN.

A Hybrid Breeder's Hopes.

SIR,—Some few weeks ago I wrote you re my experience in Hybrid breeding. I then had my fourth lot of eggs down, but I am sorry to say I had no good results from these, as the hen refused to sit the full time. But I am glad to say that I have a fine cock Goldfinch-Bullfinch, which I am in hopes of soon putting on the show bench. Next year I hope to try the following crosses: Goldie-Bullie, Greenfinch-Bullie, Canary-Bullie, and Hawfinch-Bullie. This, I believe, has not yet been got, but I am going to try my luck, and I think myself very fortunate in getting a Hybrid at all at my first attempt.

"Sunshine": A Sensational Crest of Olden Times.

SIR,—My attention has been called to the remarks made by my old friend, "Billy" Shakespeare in his reminiscences in CAGE BIRDS of July the 16th. I am pleased to know he is alive and well. His memory, I may say, is somewhat at fault as to the history of my grey Crest, "Sunshine." I did purchase it from Mr. G. E. Russell, but the price was five pounds, and I told Mr. Russell I should show it, and beat him, at Burton-on-Trent, a show that was coming on in a few weeks from then. There were seven prizes to a class. I entered "Sunshine." Mr. Blakston was judge, and awarded him first prize against the cream of the Fancy, Mr. Russell, Mackley Bros., etc. The bird had a mixed reception, but the best and keenest breeders thought it the best grey Crest bred up till then. The next show he was sent to was Wellingborough, where the late Mr. Barnesby was judge. "Sunshine" being so much in front of those it was competing against, the judge disqualified him for being "too large." This started a paper warfare upon Crests, and while this was going on I entered "Sunshine" at Nottingham, where Messrs. Bexson and Bemrose were judging. Here was a pretty kettle of fish! Either Mr. Barnesby's judgment must be upheld, or mine, and this by two fellow-townsmen of Judge Barnesby. In the end they came to the conclusion that if they left "Sunshine" out, they must leave all the best in the class out, too, as they were big ones, belonging to Mr. Russell, Mackley Bros., etc. So "Sunshine" was put in his proper position again, and was never again disqualified for being "too large." J. BASTOCK.

A New Cage Bird Club for Murton and District.

SIR,—Kindly allow me through the medium of your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, to draw the attention of fanciers residing in Murton that we have started a new Cage Bird Club. Our colliery is the largest in the County of Durham, and there is a wide field for a Fanciers' Club of this kind in the place. The facilities held out to intending fanciers are most encouraging, especially to those who have just commenced in the Fancy. The club is to be run on the principles of a Leek Club—each member receiving as far as possible his contributions in prizes at the annual show. We have received, and accepted the kind offer of an ideal showroom and headquarters from Mr. T. Walsh, Victoria Hotel. The contributions are one shilling per month, and we appeal to fanciers to join us, and help to further the cause of this interesting hobby. The next meeting will be held on September 3rd at 5 o'clock, when we would like to see as many attend as possible.

The Smell of Paint: Does it Affect Birds?

SIR,—I see in this week's CAGE BIRDS that Mrs. F. Horlebog, gives warning against the effect of paint on birds. It might interest Mrs. Horlebog and other readers of CAGE BIRDS to know that I have kept Canaries and British and Foreign birds, in my painter's workshop year in and year out, where there is always a smell of paint and varnish about, and they have always been in the best of health. Sometimes I have had as many as 40 at one time. So I think your correspondent will have to look elsewhere for the cause of the mischief. I wish CAGE BIRDS every success.

H. WARDILL.

SIR,—In regard to the kindly warning of Mrs F. Horlebog, of the danger of new paint to birds, I submit what I have found to be a simple and efficient precaution, i.e., the frequent changing of the water. When new paint is about I give fresh water four or five times a day for a short period only, and remove it at night. Some of the emanations from the paint settle in a film on water, and this causes the harm, I think, and not the inhaled smell. I have a keen sympathy for your correspondent, as I many years ago paid a similar price for this same knowledge in the grievous loss of some dozen pet Goldies and Bullies. Since then I have used paint even in the room with birds, and found no bad result when care was particularly taken of the water. And I always now take this precaution when any "stinky" operation is in action near my birds, and though, of course, it is of no avail against fumes of a nature directly irritant to their respiratory organs (such as fumes from soldering), still even then a good fresh drink is advisable, and at least one is sure they get no poisonous solution so readily produced in water. I cannot understand, though, why the danger should last three weeks. From cases in my experience, I should have put the outside danger limit at three days, and the birds have either died at once or recovered soon after the paint skinned over. Having myself received much useful information from CAGE BIRDS, I trust this item may be of use to some few of my fellow fanciers previously unaware of it.

R. W. VANDERBEN.

SIR,—Under the heading, "A Warning against Paint and Painters," in last week's issue of CAGE BIRDS, Mrs. F. Horlebog has sent an awful tale of woe. I cannot refrain from disputing the statement made in the paragraph, as your humble servant is a breeder and keeper of Canaries and British and foreign birds; and is also a painter. I wish to point out that my birds are all on the premises in an attic situated directly above my workroom, which is full of wallpapers, varnish, paint, etc., and very frequently I have to do all kinds of painting and varnishing in the workroom, and the smell from same permeates the birdroom. Up to the present, I have not lost one bird through the smell of paint or varnish, and I think your contributor, Mrs. Horlebog will be well advised to send the next bird that dies in her room to Mr. Yates for post-mortem examination. I am afraid she will find then that an epidemic of some disease has cleared her birds. I have also a friend, who is a master painter in this district, who has been one of the most successful breeders this season of Norwich and Yorkshire Canaries, and they have all been bred in a room in his workshop; he has not lost a single bird. So that in my opinion the fact of the house being painted outside had nothing whatever to do with the death of all the 65 birds. Seeing that the painting was outside, I can hardly understand Mrs. H. rushing to the conclusion that the smell of paint and varnish was the only cause of death, without carefully investigating the matter. As to the suggestion of periodically printing in large type in your paper a warning against "Paint and Painters," I fail to see the use of it. In conclusion, I should like to point out to Mrs. H. that the greater part of the smell from the paint and varnish would evaporate in the open air, and that is why I suggest her seeking elsewhere for the cause of death. I sympathise with the lady in her great loss, and sincerely hope she will not lose any more of her birds, but if she does, I trust she will forward one to Mr. Yates for examination, who will be able to state definitely the cause of death.

JOHN ENGLAND.

Another White Swallow.

SIR,—On looking through my paper—CAGE BIRDS—this last week or two, I have been very interested to hear that several white Swallows have been seen this year. I also have seen one which was hatched in an outbuilding at Staunton Grange, just on the borders of Nottinghamshire and Lincolnshire, and about two miles from where I live. I thought it quite an unusual sight, as I have neither seen nor heard of one before. It looked quite conspicuous flying about amongst its blacker mates. It seems rather strange that so many are being seen this year, as I have heard many people say they have not seen or heard of one before. E. MOYNS.

The Magpie in Confinement and its Treatment.

SIR,—The Magpie is said to be a terrible thief and seems unable to resist taking and hiding bright articles. Magpies also steal the eggs, as well as the young, of other birds. They can be trained to talk. For talking purposes it is necessary to procure a male specimen. These birds are now somewhat scarce in this country. In some parts of Ireland they are very tame, not to say impudent and mischievous. When ten days old the young birds may be easily reared by hand by feeding them every two hours on barley meal mixed with new milk, and plenty of lean raw meat. A few drops of water should be given every time they are fed. When full grown Magpies must be liberally supplied with animal food, both raw and cooked. All sorts of scraps from the table may be given them, but at the same time care must be taken that these generally include good meat. In keeping a Magpie as a pet, it is better to let him roam about the place; clip his wings if he shows any inclination to fly away. If kept for show purposes, he must be caged and given plenty of food, large grit, and water, both to drink and to bathe in. Magpies will, even in a tame state, hide their food when they have done eating, and after a time return to the secret hoard with renewed appetites. They live not only upon worms and insects, but upon small birds when these can be secured. A wounded Lark or a young Chicken (separated from the hen) are sure plunder, and the Magpie will even sometimes set upon and strike a Blackbird. No food seems to come amiss to it. The Magpie's nest is not less remarkable for the manner in which it is constructed than for the place in which it is deposited, it is said. It is usually placed conspicuous enough, either in the middle of some hawthorn bush or on the top of some high tree. The place, however, is always found difficult of access, for the tree pitched upon usually grows in some thick hedgerow, fenced by brambles at the root; or sometimes one of the higher bushes is fixed on for the purpose. The bird's next care is to fence the nest above so as to defend it from the enemies of the air. The female lays six or seven eggs, of a pale green colour, spotted with brown. Those who are desirous of teaching it to speak have a foolish custom of cutting its tongue, which only puts the poor bird to pain without improving its speech in the smallest degree.

Cardiff Fanciers and the Cardiff Birds.

Sir,—With reference to the letter and newspaper cutting I sent you, and which were published in last week's issue, I must apologise to the secretary of the Naturalists' Society for thinking he had given up the fight. He returned to the fray on Tuesday, August 2. This is his reply in the "Western Mail" of that date:—

Sir,—The local orders for protecting wild birds were the outcome of work accomplished by far more experienced bird lovers than either the writer or the venerable Mr. J. Sivill. The chief object was to protect the birds in certain districts from the very men who are behind the "fanciers" in their application. It is very well for them to ask for what they call their "birthright," but what of the freedom which belongs by Divine and ancient right to our wild birds, as the gift of the Creator? If, as Mr. Sivill says, he will not uphold the practice of decoy birds, how does he propose to get his wild birds for caging? Are the ratepayers of this town to be privileged to see Mr. Sivill and his confreres squatting in the fields around Roath Park offering dry biscuits or "grape nuts" on the palms of their hands in order to entice the birds into their pretty parlours? Of course not! If the usual methods are not employed by them, i.e., "giving their Linnets an airing," limed twigs, decoy or pole-trap, recourse will be made to the professional bird-catcher.

The fancier who prides himself on the condition of his own special pets must not forget the large amount of destruction and misery for which he is responsible in advocating and encouraging the practice of bird-caging, and whilst the fanciers are able to keep the fancy birds they do in good condition and win prizes at the shows, they might at least leave undisturbed the eighty or ninety species that are now to be seen and heard within the city boundary, and not press for this protection order to be cancelled.

I am afraid that the suggestions for alternative protection provided by the fanciers—permits from the police, corporation control of bird shops, increased work for the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals' inspectors, etc.—are made as thoughtlessly as the application was. What about landlords and sanitary inspectors, cannot they be given extra work, too?

It is not the boy or corner boy that does the harm to bird life. They are much too ignorant and lazy. It is the professional dealer or fancier. This is borne out by the reports I have before me of the last thirty odd cases before the courts, in which only one case deals with juveniles.

Wrong again, Mr. Sivill! I have no such collection of eggs as you are "informed" I possess. It may interest you to know I have not taken a wild bird's egg for fifteen years—for at that time a "fancier" took me into his confidence, and I then knew at what cost to bird life the "sport" and cage birds were obtained.

Hon. Secretary.
Cardiff Naturalists' Society.

On Friday, August 5, Mr. Sivill replied with this letter to the secretary's communication:—

Sir,—I have no intention of following our friend the secretary of the Cardiff Naturalists' Society through his last letter. The question is simple enough—Shall the people of Cardiff lawfully have in their possession a British bird? At present, through the instigation of the Naturalists' Society, the law says no. The Naturalists' Society, through its secretary, says it is cruel to catch and keep them in cages—all excepting a few species, to wit, the Song Thrush, Blackbird, Bullfinch, Wheatear, Sparrow, etc. Now, you bird-catchers, you can catch any amount of these, for, I take it, they are neither of use nor ornament to our parks, nor the Naturalists' Society. Thanks to you, naturalists. I am sure it is very kind of you, and we will try to take it as such. Now, you working men and the poor and afflicted of Cardiff, who cannot get to our parks to hear these birds sing, I am prepared to make you presents of all that I can catch of the above species in my back garden during the coming winter, for we, as fanciers, don't think it cruel to bring them to you if you cannot get to them. But you will treat them kindly.

It strikes me the Naturalists' Society think more of the pleasure of themselves and the birds than they do of the pleasure and happiness of the working man; but we certainly resent their meddling with a custom that has lived through all ages, and is a source of both pleasure and profit to a large number of people.

There always was and always will be plenty of bird life, and if none were caught or destroyed they would, like the Sparrow, soon become a nuisance, and the growers of seeds and vegetables would soon call for their destruction.

J. Sivill.

I believe this will close the matter. I will let you know the reply received from the Parks Committee.

AN EGG WITHIN AN EGG.

An Egg Within an Egg.

Sir,—I had a curious egg laid by one of my Norwich hens during the season just past, and should like to know if any of your readers ever had the same experience with one of their hens. She laid on 21st July an egg which to all appearance was about the size of a Thrush's egg. While taking it out to examine it, this egg broke through the centre, revealing an ordinary sized egg inside the large shell. Thinking it might be uncommon enough to be of interest to many of your readers, a friend of mine took a photograph of it, which I enclose, so fanciers can see what it is like.

[Readers will be much obliged to Mr. Clark for giving them an opportunity of seeing the above interesting and excellent photograph. We may say that we have heard of a few similar instances, and have seen the eggs on two occasions, these having been sent for our inspection.—Editor.]

BRADFORD and Halifax Green fanciers had the pleasure of a visit to their rooms of Mr. H. A. Nimmo, of Liverpool, on Bank Holiday week, and he arrived in Halifax during Saturday. After seeing Messrs. Clayton and Helliwell, travelling over to Bradford for the night, next morning he made his way to Mr. S. Dean's, and afterwards to Mr. C. Pickup's, both of Great Horton, with the intention of going again then to Halifax to spend the remainder of his short stay with Mr. Helliwell in visiting a few more bird rooms. It is not such a very good time of the year to go a-visiting, but, of course, we cannot always get away just when we would like, and therefore must make the best of a bad job and go when we get the chance. Then there is always the opportunity of a nice chat on birdy matters, which is something to be thankful for. Anyhow, I hope Mr. Nimmo enjoyed his outing and the company he got into. I should like to get amongst the Liverpool Green men to have a talk about what colour the Green Canary really should be, as individuals seem to vary somewhat.

THEY say there was a very strong smell of Shipley birdy men down at Morecambe during Bank Holiday, and that they had a real good time; also, that two more prominent fanciers were specially invited down to swell the number on the Monday. During a drive, the man in the front tumbled to the idea that he had a load of fanciers on behind, and blandly enquired if any of them had seen a bird named the Sandfly. "No!" "Well, there's two down there." An enquiry as to why they called them "Sand Flies" elicited the response that "it was because they flew backwards to keep the sand out of their eyes." Oh! what smart birdy men!

THE next important item, however, went a long way towards getting the fanciers' social status back again, and the main actor will long be looked upon as a hero. It isn't everybody who can atop a runaway horse, and that is what one of them did. He was not one of the biggest of the party, either, but he showed the same style of grit that he uses during the show season—always there and smiling. Well done, Hor—— my word! I nearly let it out who it was.

SEVERAL societies have lately been having their annual outings, which have proved to be very enjoyable to all concerned. One in particular I should have liked to have gone on, but unfortunately could not get away.

* Strange Place for a Nest.

A short time ago there was to be seen hanging in a coil of wire on the wall of one of the sheds of Harwich Railway Station a Blackbird's nest containing four young birds. The hen bird was quite tame, and would receive fruit from the hand from anyone who cared to feed it. The nest was photographed with the hen bird sitting on it. Large numbers of people from the surrounding districts have travelled to see the nest. —Sent by Dorothy Lawrence (age 12), Mill Lane, Robins Bridge Road, Coggleshall, Essex.

* True Story of a Jackdaw.

My uncle one day brought home a young Jackdaw. He kept it in a tin meat safe, which was kept outside. One morning, a few days after he brought it home, what was his surprise to see about a dozen Jackdaws in a tree close to the safe. He used to take the bird into the garden and it would follow him round, for he would lift up stones, or anything, when there were likely to be insects, and this suited Jack. The old 'Daws continued to come every day, however, and one day ours flew away with them and never came back.—Winnie Emmins (age 13), Manor Croft, Baildon.

A Tame & Knowing Canary.

My father once had a Canary, which he had trained so well that when he was at his meals it used to peck at its cage, trying its best to get out. When it was let out it would perch itself upon his shoulder and eat out of his mouth. My father kept a tin in which the Canary used to wash itself, and whenever he took hold of it the bird would come out and perch itself upon his shoulder. Then, when he turned on the tap, it would run down his arm into the tin and wash itself, while he held the tin in his hand.—Sent by Mabel Corbett (age 15), 1, Storeton Road, Oxton, Birkenhead.

WATFORD AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

Interesting Lecture by Mr. G. Gardner.

At the last meeting of this society, held at the Swan Inn, Mr. E. Pretty in the chair, notwithstanding it was a thoroughly wet night, there was a fine muster of members to hear a lecture by Mr. Geo. Gardner on "Some interesting points in Canarydom." After the transaction of routine business, such as the passing of balance sheet of young bird show, election of new members, etc., the chairman, in introducing the lecturer, spoke of him as one of our oldest fanciers, and a man who had done much for the Cage Bird Society for many years.

Mr. Gardner spoke for close upon an hour, alluding in passing to the early days of colour feeding, and of the keenness of competition in those days between the great ones of the Canary world. He referred to Blakston's day, and to that gentleman's splendid work for the Fancy, quoting from his writings. He (the lecturer) recollected the great exhibition duel that raged between Mackley, Russell, Salt, and others, and how the latter strove with might and money to beat the famous Norwich firm, sending out magnificent teams of birds, fed to perfection, and calling forth from Blakston the remarkably forceful epigram in description of how Mr. Salt succeeded:—"Some say it's pepper, and some say it's Salt." An interesting point to note in this connection was that whereas in those day the winners in Norwich, for instance, lay in the hands of the very few who "knew the ropes," to-day things were very different, for successful show men sprang up in a night—"came, saw, and conquered."

In Blakston's palmy days, the Fancy Press was very limited, said the lecturer, referring to the articles and reports in the old "Livestock Journal," and how he used to read them with avidity. He recalled the fact that his first letter was written to that paper, and his first show reports published therein. To-day the Cage Bird Fancy was represented by able journalism devoted solely to its interest, as instance the wonderful growth of Cage Birds, with its mass of articles, letters, and columns of advertisements, a journal which was published in many thousands. Where there was one fancier in the days when he (the lecturer) first started, there were a hundred to-day.

It was interesting to note the facilities for the beginner, in the form of cage bird foods and requisites for the bird-room, as compared with the old days, and it was quite as interesting to notice the authority with which fanciers spoke and wrote after an incalculably short experience to-day as compared with the earlier days. To-day it took a man only about 18 months to become proficient enough to sketch a model and lay down the points of a standard in the variety he had espoused, until types and standards became as plentiful as children in the London slums. But that did not matter so long as the idea and aspiration were fulfilled—"This is my model," and "This is my standard." And then the judges were thrashed within an inch of their lives because "they didn't judge to standard," and the Fancy was told that it should "control the judges and not let the judges control it."

The interesting improvement in the formation and conduct of cage bird societies, as apart from the old mixed societies, was touched upon, and the lecturer emphasised the improvement and growth in popularity of certain breeds of Canaries, naming the weak points in each, and how to remedy them. Canary breeding, he said, had reached a scientific altitude to-day, and there was a splendid field for thoughtfulness and skill to produce winners. It was in the Cage Bird Fancy, as in all else to-day, interesting to note that men chose the quickest road towards success, even if they fell into the pit in the effort. As a result, oftentimes they were fooled and fleeced, but generally the tone of the Cage Bird Fancy was healthy and good. So rapidly and widely had things developed, the lecturer said, that the whole Fancy seemed to have been transformed, even in his time.

At the close of the lecture questions upon egg-feeding, colour feeding, the use of linseed, and many other topics, were answered, and a hearty vote of thanks was accorded to Mr. Gardner for his lecture, and the hope expressed that it would not be the last he would deliver before the society.

Our Two Commonest Tits.

Experiences with Blue and Great Titmice in Captivity.

By F. E. RYDER.

How many fanciers who keep British birds go in for one of our most interesting species, the Tit? Not many, at any rate of my acquaintances, do so. And yet they are most captivating and amusing little fellows, both in and out of captivity; at least, that was my experience with the two varieties of them I kept for some considerable time, viz., the Great Tit and the Blue Tit.

These birds, as do all Tits, subsist chiefly upon insects and their larvae, spiders, etc., which they are always searching for in the most indefatigable manner.

Full of Life and Energy.

The Blue Tit, "Blue Cap," "Tomtit," "Blue Oxoye," or "Pickchcose," as he is variously called, is most easily observed during the Autumn and Winter when numbers of them often form into little parties of eight or more, and in their search for food approach nearer than usual to civilised habitations, eagerly searching in their restless, hard-working manner, the little cracks and crevices in trees, outhouses, and barns, and the oaves, guttors, and brickwork of houses, and every other likely spot, never for a momont keeping still and ever seeming full of life and energy. The Great Tit, however, is not so sociable in his habits, and does not appear to be nearly so anxious to cultivate the society of his relations.

In Spring and Summer the Tits obtain much of their food by picking at the young buds of trees for the sake of the insects which they contain; which proclivity has caused the unthinking or unobservant persons to regard them as enemies to our gardens. The fact, however, that they never attack a bud which is in a healthy condition and does not contain some living creature proves conclusively that they do nothing but good, as the infested buds which they do destroy would certainly never come to maturity, and we do know that we are better off without the insects they contain. It is now more generally recognised that these birds are not as harmful as they were supposed to be, and, in consequence, they are usually allowed to pursue their beneficent way in peace.

Not Wholly Carnivorous.

I have seen it stated that Tits generally are wholly insectivorous, or, rather, carnivorous birds. This I contradict absolutely. Certainly their food does consist chiefly of insects; and I know that they are especially fond of animal food, whether lean, fat, fresh, or putrid. But, nevertheless, they do, all of them, partake of seeds, especially those seeds which are of an oily nature. The birds are particularly fond of sunflower and homp seeds, and I have always made this their staple food when I have had some in my possession, supplementing it with raw and cooked meat (finely chopped), fat, unsalted fish, as many insects as I could possibly find time to obtain, german paste, kernels of nuts, grains, borries, egg and cheese—all of which they are fond of.

Tits have extraordinarily flexible necks and very strong, pointed beaks, which they use in a rather peculiar way. Instead of breaking and crushing the hard shell of seeds with the edge of the beak, as do most other birds, they use the sharp-pointed end of their beaks in the same way that a man does a pickaxe—tapping the substance to be broken with great rapidity and strength, holding it meanwhile with the claws in any convenient place.

I have read also that the Great Tit, especially when in captivity, will kill, and eat the brains of, other smaller and weaker birds; but I have never found them to do so when in my possession, although I must admit that they are extremely pugnacious and very bold and courageous.

I kept some great Tits in a large open cage with Linnets, Bullfinches and Groonfinches, but was forced to remove them, as I found that they (the Tits) would often peck at and injure the plumago of their other companions, who all seemed very much afraid of them.

One day in October a few years ago I was in my garden (some people would call it a back-yard!) attending to my birds, when a party of "Blue Caps" made their appearance on a tree close by, clambering and climbing about the branches in their usual industrious and captivating way, and hanging on the most peculiar places, all the time chattering volubly. Although I had always taken a great interest in theso pretty little birds, I had never before thought of trying to catch them, but I thereupon attempted to do so.

I made a trap-cage after the usual pattern, but with the wires closer together, as I was afraid the birds would escape if I used a trap with the wires the usual width apart. This I placed in a convenient position and baited with sunflower seed, hemp and suet. I was very soon successful in making a capture. I took care to give it the most tempting morsels I could think of—chiefly insects and chrysalides, and plenty of crushed hemp seed; and in addition I placed it in the largest cage I had, bringing it indoors at night to ensure that it should not be affected by the cold. These methods were perfectly successful, both in the case of this and every other "Blue Cap" I afterwards caught.

The very first evening I brought it indoors, as soon as the lights began to fail it went to sleep, delighting the family by tucking its head away somewhere in its remarkably thick plumage, and erecting every feather perpendicularly on its body—a fluffy mass, as large and round as a tennis ball.

Welcome Sleeping Apartments.

One day, by way of experiment, I put a small box in the cage, about eight inches by four inches, by four inches, with a hole in one end about two inches in diameter; and I was delighted to see the bird enter almost immediately. Since then I have succeeded in catching both Great Tits and Blue Tits, and I have always given them one of these little boxes to sleep in, generally hinging one side of it for cleaning purposes. They spend a great deal of their time in them, keeping quite cosy and warm therein during the coldest weather, and so rendering it unnecessary to bring them in at night.

I generally fix their sleeping place at the top of the cage, and it is quite amusing to watch them entering and leaving their retreat. One will poke his head out in the most cautious and delightfully inquiring way before he leaves it, and then, if no signs of danger are apparent, he will come out with the utmost seeming confidence; but no sooner does he hear the slightest noise or see the slightest suspicious movement than he flies to the top of the cage and re-enters his little sanctuary almost quicker than the eye can follow him. In all these actions he reminds one more of a mouse than of a bird. The way in which he climbs and runs over the wires of his cage, top, bottom, and sides, is also very mouselike.

Fifty Years in the Fancy.

An interview with Mr. William Shakespeare, of Kentish Town (a descendant of "the Bard of Avon") who relates interesting reminiscences concerning the "good old days" of the hobby, and the men who then played leading parts in the Fancy.

"What is your opinion concerning the different breeds of Canaries? Do you consider there is much improvement since these early days of which we have been speaking?"

"Your question covers a lot of ground, and I can hardly say definitely one way or the other on such a broad question."

"Well, let us specialise, so to speak. Take the King of the Fancy first. Do you consider the Belgian is as good to-day as it was thirty or forty years ago?"

"In those days it was indeed the King of the Fancy, and always headed the classes at our shows, whilst more often than not the best Belgian also secured the special for the best bird in the show. I think the birds of that time were finer in feather than those we see now, but I don't think they have quite so much timber about them."

"You rather surprise me. I have been inclined to think that the Belgian had decreased in size, and that the birds of the present time were not so massive as those of long ago."

"Well, it may be so. You must remember we seldom see Belgians at our shows nowadays, and when they do put in an appearance it is usually in the A.O.V. class. They have lost the proud position which they at one time held."

"What about Scots Fancies?"

Lost Beauty.

"Scots Fancies. Why they are altogether different birds to what they were. They have been so mixed up and crossed with the Belgian that you can hardly tell one from the other. They are much higher in shoulder, larger in body, and coarser in feather; and in my opinion are not nearly so taking as when they were nicely cleaned out underneath, and shaped like a half-moon. They were then far more graceful and handsome than they are now."

"This is very sweeping, and I don't know what some of the up-to-date Scots will say to your opinions. What about the Yorkies?"

"With one exception I can speak nothing but good of the present-day Yorkshires."

"What is the one exception?"

"The evenly-marked birds. Years ago no show was complete without a class or two of Evenly-marked Yorkshires. And lovely birds they were, too! Nicely streaked eyes, well balanced wings, and neatly marked tails, for six-pointed birds were often seen. Well do I remember the splendid teams of these handsome birds staged by the late John Thackrey, and others whose names I cannot recall, but Thackrey was the king of the Yorkshire, and gems indeed did he put down. Sleek and tight in feather, capital colour, some fed and some natural colour, and for marking I have never seen their equals."

"Yes, I agree with you, we have lost the Evenly-marked Yorkshires, and yet somehow I do not think we have. Years ago many of the so-called Evenly-marked Yorkshires were not so evenly marked as are the Unevenly-marked ones to-day."

"No doubt you are right. For I know that the Evenly-marked Yorkshires of the time of which I speak used to go through a great deal of preparation. It used to be said that it required an artist to show them, as so much had to be taken off, and so much put on."

"There is much in what you say, and this excessive preparation caused a revulsion of feeling to take place concerning these birds, and the excessive technicality of the marking asked for led to the Unevenly-marked birds coming into greater favour."

"Yes, and fanciers have bred these Unevenly-marked birds with their Clears so that the type is greatly improved. The Clear, Ticked, and Unevenly-marked Yorkshires of to-day are far in advance of those of the olden time. They are slimmer in body, more upright in carriage, finer in head and shoulders; in fact, they are superior in every respect except perhaps in fineness of feather, for the birds of the olden days were beautifully silky in feather, even though they were stouter than those we see nowadays."

"What about the Lancashires?"

"Here, I think, ground has been lost."

"You agree, then, with those who speak of the deterioration of the Lancashire?"

"I do indeed. In the years of long ago the Lancashires were very large bodied, coarse-feathered birds; length and substance well to the front. Massive birds indeed they were, and well fitted to be called 'the giants of the Fancy.' To-day they are much finer in quality, the feather is not so long, not so dense, nor so wide, the coppy is much shorter, more daisy crested, and wandering right away from what it used to be in the past."

"What of the other favourite of the Lancashire men—the Lizard?"

"Again I think there is no improvement, and the exhibits of to-day are no better than those of years ago. They may perhaps be a little larger in body, I should say they are, but when you come to spangling and cap, I don't think they are any better at all. In the old days we had birds with abundance of clear, bold spangling, very evenly rowed, large, clear, well-formed, thumb marked caps, and regular fountains of colour."

"You are rather severe on the Lancashire and Lizards, and I am afraid it is because in the olden days you saw more North-country birds than you do now, also that we had one or two good South-country fanciers who were very fond of these breeds, and one could depend upon seeing something good when they were showing."

"Possibly you are right. Few, indeed, are there of either Lancashires or Lizards bred in the South nowadays. Why, it is hard to say, because they are both handsome birds, and have much about them that is pleasing and attractive. When I was in the Midlands I did, as you say, see the Northern birds as well as those of the Southern breeders, but since I came to London I have not seen so much of these varieties, fond as I am of both. It is a great pity that the Northern breeders of Lancashires and Lizards are so conservative. If they were more enterprising, and sent their birds down South more often, I think it would lead to both breeds meeting with more support."

"I agree with you most heartily that the Lancashire breeders would find it to be to their advantage did they show more enterprise, and come South now and then."

"How about the Cinnamons? There is great difference in the birds of your early days and now. Do you favour those of the present day, or do you think the Cinnamons have deteriorated?"

The Old-Time Cinnamon.

"The Cinnamon has always been considered a bird of colour, and in the old days they were much smaller than they are now, very sound and rich in true Cinnamon colour, the jonques especially, which looked like richly burnished old gold in their natural colour; then their feather was beautifully tight, and of a soft silky texture. To-day the Cinnamons are much larger. They are also coarser in feather, and do not possess that richness and depth of colour which made the Cinnamon of the seventies and eighties such a fascinating bird. The essentially valuable properties of the Cinnamon have been lost by crossing with Crest-bred Norwich, and the only property which has been improved is size."

"One of the most popular breeds to-day, even if it is not the most popular, is the Norwich Plainhead. In your early days this, I believe, was your favourite fancy, therefore you will, no doubt, have very decided views as to the breed, and its advance, not only in popular estimation, but also from a breeding and exhibiting point of view."

"Yes, the Norwich were my favourites in the early days, and then, like the Cinnamons, they were small, tight-feathered birds of great quality. They were also of grand type."

"You say they were birds of grand type. Do you mean that the type has altered?"

"No, I don't think the type has altered, but whilst retaining the type and quality, breeders of Norwich Plainheads have improved the size of the birds, and now we see a beautiful combination of quality and substance in the best birds of the day."

"From this I gather that you are of opinion that in respect of quality the Norwich Plainheads of to-day are quite as good as those of thirty years ago?"

"Well, hardly that. The size has been improved considerably, and type is even better than it was, because the increase of size has been brought about without any great increase in length, but quality of feather is not quite so fine as it used to be. It is a well-known fact to breeders of all kinds of birds that immediately you increase size, you lose a certain amount of quality of feather. What I wish to convey is that, although the breeders of Norwich Plainheads have made great strides in the direction of size, they have not neglected or overlooked the fact that quality is an essential property in a good exhibition bird." (To be continued.)

My Experiences with the Norwich Plainhead Canary.

By ALFRED GREY (Morpeth).

A lecture delivered before the Newcastle-upon-Tyne C.B.S., on August 4th. Mr. Grey is one of the most noted breeders and exhibitors of the present day, and is the winner of the Kirkcaldy Cup, the Gateshead Bowl, the Border Counties Norwich and Cinnamon Club Bowl, the Scottish National Cup, and numerous medals and other trophies.

I am here to-night to give my experience on the Norwich Canary. I dare say many of you have already read how I became a fancier, but I may as well start at the beginning for the benefit of those who have recently come to our Fancy.

I had given me by Mr. Pegg, of Morpeth, a very nice variegated Norwich Canary as a wedding present. This bird became a great pet of my wife's, and would perch upon her finger and make a great fuss of her whenever she attended to him. During my wife's illness this bird died, and as I did not wish to distress her I went to Mr. Pegg (then well known as an exhibitor of Norwich) and asked to buy another bird as near the colour as possible of the bird he had given me. Well, the one that most resembled my bird was one he had exhibited with success. He let me have this bird very cheap. I think the price was 18s. After a time we decided that this bird would be very lonely by himself and we thought we would have a mate for him. Mr. Pegg advised me to write to Mr. Eckersley for a yellow hen, and we procured a very nice one for 45s.

My Second Pair.

After this we considered that if we were going to breed Canaries we had far better have two unrelated pairs and then we would be able to cross the young the following season, and in this way build up a strain of our own.

Seeing a yellow cock advertised, that had done a lot of winning, by Mr. Miles, of London (for which he asked £3 10s.), I bought it. This was one of the finest yellow cock birds I ever saw. I also bought a buff hen for 35s. By this you will see that I started off with good stuff, these birds being all well worth the money, and birds that would bring much bigger prices if alive to-day.

I bred several very nice youngsters the first round from these pairs, but one day Mr. Dixon, of Bedlington, was introduced to me and I took him to see my birds. He was well pleased with the young from Mr. Eckersley's and Mr. Pegg's birds, but was not satisfied with those from Mr. Miles' grand big yellow cock bird, and at once offered to lend me a hen to mate with it on condition that I gave him one of the young. This kind offer I accepted and I bred three fine youngsters from this pair—a buff cock, a buff hen, and a yellow hen. The buff cock I sold for 50s., the buff hen I gave as promised to Mr. Dixon, and the yellow hen I kept, and I think all fanciers will know her now as the renowned Queenie.

Well do I remember the first show where I met that genial fancier and judge, Mr. Anthony Brown, of Gateshead, and how proud I was to walk off with the special for best bird in the show, it being one of the young I had bred from my first pair.

My next day out with my birds was at South Shields, where I had my Queenie entered as a hen, but there was such a disturbance that I had to withdraw her from the hen class and put her in amongst the cocks, for no one would believe she was a hen. "Far too good for a hen," everybody said, and the Secretary (Mr. Smith) obliged me by putting her in the cock class, where she won all the same.

You ask me to what do I attribute my success. To strict cleanliness, careful and continuous attention, studying all books and papers upon Norwich (and I have taken CAGE BIRDS ever since I started the Fancy, and would not be without it), and best of all, digesting every noted breeder's experience that I could come across. Every breeder seemed to have something worth trying and considering. But after all, I am convinced that to breed good Norwich the hen is the main factor.

The Type of Hen I Like.

My favourite hen to breed from is a small typical Norwich, that has been bred from good-sized parents—a bird that would have won on the bench but that was a size too small. These are the hens that I have found always breed the champions.

I had a yellow hen of this description bred from Mr. Eckersley's hen which I paired to five different cock birds, and she bred winners with every one of them. This hen was too small for show purposes, and, in fact, I never showed her. I have a similar buff hen this year that has bred my best youngsters, and every year I have found that these smaller and more active tight-feathered little hens have always been the most successful breeders.

They should be very short in wings and tail, very tight in feather, extra good in chest, and have nice round heads free from all browing; in fact, they should be perfect show birds if only large enough for the bench.

The Type of Cock Bird.

I like the cock bird to be as large as possible, with a good round bold head with wide entrance, and capital wing carriage (I can't stand bad wings, and I think them most objectionable). The cock should also have a good chest and be well filled in at back. Such a bird should be had for about 50s.

A pair such as I have described are a very likely pair with which to win in a pair class, for I was only once beaten in a pair class last year. I think such a cock bird is the class of bird most judges are convinced will breed winners. I have found it so myself. I frequently pair two of my largest show specimens together to breed these large stock cocks, and I have always a ready sale for large hens, as there are still many fanciers who believe in them. I may also say that I prefer one of the pair to be variegated, as I think this is the best way to get good colour.

Concerning the Breeding Cage.

I like a double-compartment breeding cage with a wired centre slide, the size of cage to be 36in. by 18in. by 11in., so that when I pair them I give the whole cage, and then when the young leave the nest I put in the partition and leave the parents on one side with the clean nest, and the young on the other side, and in this way the parents are able to feed them through the wire partition until the young are in a position to feed themselves. This also does away with much of the plucking of the youngsters, and it also saves the eggs in the second nest from being pinholed.

During the breeding season I give egg and home-made bread and as much hemp as the birds care to eat. I do not crush it, but give it to them whole. I always use lettuce as a green food. After the hen has been sitting twelve days I put the eggs in my mouth to dampen them.

Whilst the old birds are feeding the young I give mixed seed—6 scoops of best Spanish, 2 of hemp, 2 German rape, and half a scoop of maw seed.

I always keep a few pairs of feeders, for many of my exhibition hens will not feed.

Colour-feeding the Birds.

I use Sandiford's colour-feed, and have got the best of results from it. To one egg and equal part of bread I use 3 teaspoonfuls of feed and 3 of castor sugar. The food I mix in the morning I leave until dinner-time. That which I mix at dinner-time I leave until tea-time, and the food I mix at night I leave until next morning. By this means the colour gets thoroughly soaked into the egg food, and this prevents the birds from picking out the egg and scattering the colour food about the floor. I always leave the seed if they eat the food, but birds that won't eat the food have the seed taken from them until they finish the food.

For the drinking water I put a little saffron in a jug of cold water and let it stand overnight. This I give them two or three times a week. I think this improves the colour, especially of the buff birds. When the young birds are 8 weeks old I begin to colour-feed them, starting with half-a-teaspoonful of feed to one egg, and gradually working it up to full strength.

"Flighting" Off the Young.

I put the young into a large flight when they are seven weeks old. By that time they are cracking the seed. The old cock birds as they finish breeding I put in another flight, and the old hens in yet another. This, I think, stops a lot of plucking and fighting.

I give the bath almost every fine day. This keeps the birds clean and in good condition. I usually put the bath on the cages at 8 a.m. and remove it at 2 p.m. In the flights I leave the bath the whole of the time, giving fresh water in the morning and dinner-time, as I find that if the birds are going to bathe they generally do so as soon as the fresh water is given.

As soon as the birds are three-parts through the moult I remove all promising youngsters and the old exhibition birds from the flights into clean breeding cages, with the partition in, so that each bird has a separate compartment. There I leave them until the end of the show season.

If a bird is looking at all soft from a chill it is best to remove the drinker for a short time and then replace it with a little whisky in the water. For colds of any length of standing a good remedy is equal parts syrup of squills, ipecacuanha wine, and glycerine. For egg-bound hens I mix a little whisky with castor oil, and give 2 or 3 drops in the beak; and with a small fine camel hair brush I work a little pure olive oil into the vent.

Birds bred from high-class stock will always bring from 15s. to £10 each. I have kept a careful account of my expenses, and I find that my birds cost about 4s. each to rear and colour feed, so that those who sell at 5s. each are not making a "fat lot" out of them. There is a ready sale for exhibition stock, that is, birds that are fit to win on the bench in open competition, and I have never had any trouble to dispose of my surplus stock.

Insuring One's Stock.

I advise every fancier to insure his stock. This can be done at the rate of 2s. for the value of stock worth £100, for loss against fire or from the effects of smoke from fire. I think it the duty of every fancier to do this, as 2s. is a small sum per annum compared to the loss of one's stock.

I get my wife to save all the egg shells from the eggs used for cakes and puddings and the shells from the eggs used for the birds. These are baked in the oven and crushed fine with a rolling pin. Then they are thrown into the flights during the moulting season. The birds seem very fond of these and come down immediately to get them.

Wild Bird Life.

The Plumage of Young Birds.

Almost every thicket and hedgerow now has its feathered occupant, for the wild bird population is at its highest in the beginning of August. For the past three months brood after brood has been daily added to the wild bird life of the fields and woods. In some cases the young ones collect in small flocks; in others the brood keep in touch with one another until the autumn, and in a few cases each bird is independent enough to face the world alone. If we stroll quietly along the edge of a wood, or the sheltered side of a hedge, we soon get in touch with young birds of every species. Of course, the common House-Sparrows are numerous everywhere; they are in flocks of various sizes, and when disturbed, hasten to the nearest thicket, where they scramble about the branches, and fill the air with their vulgar cries, until the intruder has passed. While standing still for a few minutes a plaintive call quite near tells of a brood of nestlings just venturing into the world. By gently parting the leaves, we get a good view of a family of young Greenbirds; they have evidently just left the nest, and are waiting fairly patiently for mother's return. In general shape and character they closely resemble their parents, especially about the beak, head and wings, but the general plumage is browner, and upon the throat and breast are brownish-coloured markings. The old bird soon returns, and by her plaintive calling shows her anxiety for her young ones.

Moving on we disturb a couple of Thrushes. They flutter across the road, settling in a hawthorn. By moving quietly we get close under them, and although fine big birds they have a babyish look about them, especially about the beak and eyes, which denotes their age. The eyes are wide open, and appear to be full of wonder. One of these birds is beautifully and very regularly spotted, the spots extending well down the body. Although evidently nest-fellows, there is a considerable difference between them; the second bird is not nearly such a good specimen. Here again we have a marked difference in the plumage of the young compared with that of the adult bird. The youngsters are richer and more golden, especially on the wing coverts, which are quite golden buff. This excess of richness of colouration in the young bird over its parents, is also shared by some of the Warblers. A specimen of the Willow Wren which we picked up alive in the pathway of one of the streets in the village of Carshalton, was exceedingly rich; he was evidently hurt in some way, or very much upset. We were going by train, so could not tend him properly; but we safely deposited him in a thicket along the embankment, and could not find him when we returned, so hope he recovered.

There are two classes- one for any variety Canary, and one for any variety British bird to be in the schoolroom no later than six o'clock prompt, 6d. each exhibit. CHESTER C.B.F.A.

Monthly meeting, held August 9th, at Nag's Head Cocoa House. Mr. Parker presided. It was decided to have a lecture by Mr. Hadwin (Liverpool) at next meeting, Sept. 6th, the subject to be "Preparing and Staging for Exhibition." Members and friends interested are welcome, and it is to be hoped many will avail themselves of this opportunity of hearing Mr. Hadwin, who is a practical lecturer. The secretary will be pleased to hear from any fancier who is desirous of joining. J. SWINDLEY, Hon. Sec.

GATESHEAD & DISTRICT C.B.S.

Monthly meeting, held Aug. 10th, Mr. Almond in the chair. We had a fairly good attendance of members, and an excellent meeting. Show business was taken. As to the alteration of our show dates, to suit patronage of one of our specialist clubs, it had been fairly discussed; it was finally decided to hold our show on the dates as advertised. Members' classes were then gone into. These stand as last year, with just a little alteration in the wording. Some discussion arose as regards novice members, and their transfers to other sections, and this ended in the putting of some restrictions on them.—A. HOLDEN, Asst. Sec.

CUMNOCK AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

At a meeting held in Town Hall, Old Cumnock, 13th Aug., a fairly good turn out of members being present, it was decided that we include Tarbolton parish in our list of parishes, which makes eight parishes in all. We hope all fanciers will take the opportunity of sending in their names to the secretary before the next meeting night. Also it was decided to hold our show on the 5th Nov. next, and we fixed up for 32 good classes. We will give particulars later on. We also enrolled 13 new members, which is very promising. This makes 34 up to date. Our next meeting was fixed for Sept. 10th, to make preparations for forthcoming show. A very pleasant meeting terminated with a hearty vote of thanks to the chairman.—FRED YOUNG, Sec.

SHEFFIELD C.B.A.

Usual monthly meeting, held at Wentworth Cafe, August 4th. Mr. Kelly was elected to the chair, in the absence of our President, Mr. A. Bradshaw. Our secretary read the agenda of the proposed Cage Bird Union meeting, and our delegate was instructed how to vote on the various items. It was announced that we could not get Wycliffe Hall for our October show, which will therefore be held in the Friends School, Leeds Road, Attercliffe. Will the members kindly make a note of this; also, will all members who have tickets or ticket-money from the nest feather show please bring it in at our next meeting? After the usual business we listened to the experiences of members, which proved to be very interesting. Many things spoken about were quite helpful. Our next meeting is for arranging for our open show, and we trust to have a good muster of members. Are you all on your holidays, or what? Now please try and get to the next meeting, which is very important. Will the committee kindly note there is a meeting on August 26th at Wentworth Cafe, for special business? Mr. W. Simmonite was elected a new member. — J. WOOLHOUSE.

SCOTTISH CRESTED C.C.

Committee meeting held in Nelson's Temperance Hotel, Glasgow, on August 6th. In the absence of president, that veteran fancier, Mr. H. Moreland (Falkirk), occupied the chair. Applications for club's patronage medals were considered, and granted to the following: Broughty Ferry, Kilsyth, Hawick, Kilmarnock, Scottish National, and Dunfermline (conditionally). Correspondence was read in reference to club show to be held at Broxburn in conjunction with the Association's open show in December; 13 classes are proposed to be given, including four young bird classes confined to S.C.C.C. Mr. Moreland is appointed judge of the Crested section. With a slight alteration in classification everything was considered satisfactory, pending future arrangements between secretary and Broxburn officials. A letter from Mr. McLay (Kirkintilloch) was read resigning his membership from club. The members regretted the course adopted by Mr. McLay, and the secretary was instructed to write and ask him to reconsider his decision. The following gentlemen were admitted to club membership: Messrs. W. Hamilton (Glasgow), J. and R. Burns, J. Turnbull, M. Gilhooly (Dunbar), M. Fewery (Winchburgh), A. Moir (Alloa), and J. Moreland (Falkirk). All membership fees are now due, and I will feel obliged if intending members will remit as early as possible.—JOHN YOUNG, Sec. and Treas.

YORK C.B.S.

At headquarters, All Saints' Schoolroom, North Street, on Aug. 8th, a very successful and instructive lecture on "Wild Seeds and Berries, which are used for Feeding and Moulting to the best advantage of British Birds," was given. The specimens had been gathered by Messrs. H. Shorney and F. B. Sissons, who must have spent a great deal of time and trouble to collect such a grand list as follows: Dewberry, bramble, privet, mountain ash, barberry, elderberry, spearhead thistle, marsh thistle, summer thistle, milk thistle, meadow sweet, common stinging nettle, dock, chickweed, shepherd's purse, burdock, sorrel, rats' tails (or plantain), groundsel, charlock, teazle, ragworth, and wild oats, all of which were in splendid condition. In the absence of Mr. Shorney, Mr. F. B. Sissons kindly undertook to name their various properties, and told the meeting in a very masterly way how and when to collect stores, and when to use the various seeds to get the best results, and to moult out one's British birds to the best advantage. A long and interesting discussion took place, in which the following fanciers and keepers of British birds took part: Messrs. A. Richardson (chairman), A. Wand (Secretary), D. Hunter (Treasurer), T. Wright, A. Humphries, King, Chitteuden Sen., White, Campling, A. Simeson, Zimmerman, and Oxbury. The lecturer answered all the questions as only an expert could be expected to do. At the close a vote of thanks to Mr. F. B. Sissons was moved by Mr. Hunter. He said he hoped it would not be long before we again had the pleasure of hearing Mr. Sissons. The vote was seconded by Mr. Zimmerman and carried with loud applause. After the lecture the usual business was transacted, and this brought to a close one of the best and most enjoyable meetings held by the society.—A. WARD, Hon. Sec.

KELTY AND BLAIRADAM C.B.A.

Meeting held August 9th, at headquarters, Mr. J. Stenhouse (President) in the chair, the business being the arrangement for club show, Sept. 3rd. It was agreed to give a special for every class, also that all members' subs. be paid before the above date; all who have not paid will not be allowed to compete. Entries to be received up till morning of show. The meeting closed with a hearty vote of thanks to the chairman.

HOUGHTON-LE-SPRING C.B.S.

General meeting, held in the usual clubroom on August 13th, but owing to the poor attendance it was decided to adjourn the meeting until August 20th, when it is hoped that we shall have a good representative meeting, as it is important to all. It was proposed that we reconsider our show date, and there will be a final selection of the judge, and rules to draw up for the cup, etc. The chairman, Mr. M. Dixon, then adjourned the meeting.—R. H. DIXON, Sec.

WEST OF SCOTLAND.

Usual monthly meeting held August 6th in Nelson's Hotel, Glasgow. In the absence of the president, Mr. C. Hunter occupied the chair. It was agreed to have a table show of Mules and Hybrids bred 1910 at next meeting. As the secretary has been instructed to call an extraordinary general meeting, all members who have changed their address are requested to notify the secretary of same on or before the 27th August. New members are still being enrolled; all information from me.—G. SMART, Secretary, Carmyle, Glasgow.

WALLSEND & MID-TYNE C.B.A.

Meeting held in the Station Hotel on August 10th, Mr. Macdonald in the chair. There was a fair muster of members, but there was very little business to transact. The chief item was "The Breeding Experiences of the members," and in the course of debate it was found that there had been more Borders bred than any other variety; then came Yorkshires, Norwich, Crests, Cinnamons, and Lizards in the order named. There have not been so many Mules bred this year as usual, but Mr. McGinn, of Walker, has three very fine Goldfinch-Bullfinch hybrids, which we think fairly makes up for the loss of Mules. Mr. Baker (South Shields) was proposed and made a member; this concluded a very enjoyable evening.—JOHN R. EVANS, Sec.

NORTHERN YORKSHIRE C.C.

Meeting, held Aug 10, Mr. J. Curry in the chair. The following gentlemen were elected members:—Messrs. Petch (Newcastle), G. W. Hall (Ashington). Decided, "that the challenge cup competition be held at Whitehaven"; "that champion and novice medals be given to the following shows: Oct. 21 and 22, Newcastle (judge, Mr. Bailey); Oct. 29, Hartlepools (Mr. Wilcock); Nov. 4 and 5, Blaydon (Mr. J. C. Barnes); Nov. 11 and 12, Whitehaven (Mr. A. Wellings); Dec. 9 and 10, Gateshead (Mr. W. Mundell)"; and "that the secretary try to arrange for another show between the Whitehaven and Gateshead dates." Table show, same date, judge, Mr. Tindale. CL.: 1, 2, vhc, Crawhall; 3, Addison; 4, J. Curry; hc, Tomlinson; c, H. Johnson. TICKS: 1, 4, c, Crawhall; 2, vhc, Bryden; 3, Tomlinson; hc, Addison.—T. C. CRAWHALL, Sec.

BRISTOL C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held at headquarters, City Hotel, August 10th. Mr. W. H. Manley presided over a splendid attendance. The chief business was the classification for the annual show (members only this year). A splendid list was drawn up 30 classes in all, 15 for Canaries, 13 for British, and 3 for Mules, prize money fixed for entries over eight, under on the sliding scale. Mr. J. H. Payne (Gloucester) was elected to judge. Nominations for British bird cup were handed in, and if all birds are staged, will constitute a record. Between 60 and 70 are nominated. Our membership is open to all comers; we have three £5 5s. silver challenge cups (Norwich, Yorkshire, and British), for annual competition. I shall be pleased to hear from intending members.—A. R. A. CARTER, Assist. Sec., 11, Queen's Road, Ashley Down, Bristol.

LEEDS C.B.S.

Monthly meeting held 13th August, Mr. Whiteley in chair. The report of young bird show disclosed up to date a profit of 18/-, with several tickets still to be paid for or returned to secretary. Prize cards were distributed, and a list was handed round showing the scoring for the cups and specials. A circular from Mr. Lythgoe, re the Cage Bird Union, was read to meeting, and it was decided that same be allowed to lay on the table. The secretary informed meeting that we had secured the patronage of the O.N.P.C. and Y.C.B.B., and M.C. for our open show on 15th October, and appealed to members who were interested in these varieties to show their appreciation by joining these clubs. The chairman called upon Mr. R. Halliday, of Shipley, to give his promised lecture on "Yorkshires for Exhibition." Mr. Halliday gave us in his usual homely and straightforward manner one of the best lectures on Yorkshires it has been our pleasure to hear, and the discussion which followed showed that our members were out to learn what they could, and that Mr. Halliday was willing and able to impart the necessary knowledge; in fact, the questions were so many and interesting that 10.30 was reached before we were aware of it. A hearty vote of thanks to Mr. H. closed the meeting.—J. CHAMBERS, hon. sec.

NATIONAL BRITISH BIRD & M.C.

Committee meeting held at headquarters, the Feathers Hotel, Great Chapel-street, Westminster, on July 28th. Present, Messrs. J. Robson (chairman), A. J. Marley, C. T. Maxwell, J. Dewhurst, T. R. Trower, A. Silver, A. C. Askew, G. E. Weston, A. Plumbridge, and J. P. Carr. Minutes of previous meeting read and confirmed. The committee granted the club's patronage to the following shows:—Clapham (gold and silver, and a silver presented by Mr. Maxwell); Battersea (silver and bronze); Newcastle (two silvers); Manchester (two silvers); Hastings (one silver); Swansea (two silvers); Nottingham (one silver); Wimbledon (one silver); Cambridge (silver and bronze); Leicester (gold and silver, and a silver presented by Mr. Weston); Plumstead (one silver). The committee again decided to hold the club show in conjunction with the London C.B.A., and the following medals were allotted: Gold, silver, and bronze in each section, viz., Hardbills, Insectivorous, and Hybrids. Mr. Trower is again offering a silver medal in each section to members gaining most points who have not previously won a medal. The Hybrid Club Show Cup will be for competition at this show. The Hardbill Cup for nominated birds will be offered for competition at all shows where the club patronage is given if Rule 17 is adhered to. Applications were read from Norwich, Liverpool, and Scottish National, and the secretaries were instructed to write to these societies. One of the silver gilt medals offered by the club to shows not electing club judges, on the condition that the winner becomes a member, was granted to Whitehaven Show. A vote of thanks to the chairman concluded the meeting.—PLUMBRIDGE AND CARR, Hon. Secs.

KEIGHLEY AND DISTRICT C.B.S.

At the last meeting held at Black Horse Hotel, Mr. J. Sawley in the chair, a good muster of members turned up to hear a splendid lecture by Mr. F. Armstrong, of Halifax, on "The marking of the Yorkshire Canary." The lecturer pointed out many interesting things, and spoke for well above an hour. He explained every detail. After the lecture questions were asked, and these were very ably answered by the lecturer. A vote of thanks proposed by Mr. J. Greenwood and seconded by Mr. J. Middleton brought a pleasant evening to a close.—J. BINNS, Sec.

GLASGOW (West End) C.B.C.

Usual monthly meeting, held in Clarendon Hall on August 12th. Mr. A. Miller presided over a fair attendance. Mr. R. B. Gibb, who was to have given a lecture, was unable to be present. The committee's recommendation that two members be appointed as a visiting committee to visit members, and report on their stock, was decided on, with the following addition, viz., that each member send a note to the secretary declaring how many birds he has bred, with the markings, etc., of same. The prize cards and specials were also presented to each of the winners at the first feather show. I would like to remind members that subscriptions for the year are now due. Although the meeting was not very large, a most enjoyable evening was spent. WILLIAM PROUDFOOT, Sec. and Treasurer.

LANCASHIRE & LIZARD F.A.

Meeting held at Old Boar's Head Hotel, Manchester, Aug. 13th. Applications for patronage were considered from Rochdale O.S., Rochdale Good Intent, and Scottish National. It was decided to grant our patronage to the two Rochdale societies for Lancashires and Lizards, and to the Scottish National for Lizards only. The applications of Manchester and N.C.O.S., and Nottingham for patronage were confirmed, but the application of London C.B.A. was left over till next meeting, some of our members having pointed out that the L.C.B.A., having withdrawn from the Cage Bird Union, would debar most of our members, who are also members of the C.B.U., from showing there. We are sorry that anything should crop up to prevent out giving our patronage, but under present circumstances it would mean a very heavy loss, especially in the Lancashire Section, although it would also affect the Lizards. The next meeting will be held at Glossop, Sept. 18th, to commence at 3 o'clock. Place of meeting later. In Fancy Press. Will all members kindly forward subs. as early as possible" Mr. G. Fitton was made a member. There is still plenty of room for new members, and I shall be pleased to hear of anyone wishing to become a member. The secretary was instructed to write a letter of condolence to one of our members, Mr. C. Bosworth, of Rushden, who has suffered the loss of his helpmate (Mrs. Bosworth), a helpmate in every sense of the word.—JOHN RUKIN, Hon. Sec.

VAYNOL PARK Port Dinorwic).

Annual show held August 13th in connection with Horticultural, etc., show, marquees being provided for the feathered pets. The weather turned out to be of the very best, and a few hundreds of visitors were to be seen in the park. This show being always well attended, has kept up its reputation this year, being one of the best all round in the circuit. The secretarial reins were in the hands of Mr. R. Hughes, Mr. G. Roddick, and Mr. Weaver, and a few committeemen ably assisted to carry the work out in good time. The cage bird section mustered well for this time of year; the earlier birds are beginning to drop into moult, and the old birds, too, showing signs of same. Among the winners were some very promising youngsters. Norwich held the pride of place this time, although Yorkshires were up to the standard and better in numbers; Borders were few, as also were Light Mules and Hybrids. Dark Mules were very fair, and some good birds were among them. The British as usual were very good. Mr. Winnard, with his well-known yellow Norwich, took special for best bird in show, also two other specials for most points in yellows and buffs; Mr. W. H. Williams took special in A.O.V. Norwich; Mr. J. O. Williams in yellow Yorkshires; Mr. W. Nolan in buff Yorkshires and A.O.V. Mr. W. Donaldson won most points in Mules or Hybrids, light or variegated. Mr. W. A Cowgill (Bradford) made the awards, which were well received.

HAMILTON (Cadzou Oaks) O.S.

Nest Feather Show held Aug. 6, in the Lesser Town Hall, it being the last show in connection with the medal competition, and although the numbers at each of our shows were not great, still we must count them a success when we remember the adverse season and the hard conditions of the competition—namely, that no bird was allowed to compete at more than one show, and only two entries per member per class were allowed at each show. It reflects great credit on the competitors that they loyally abided by the rules, and exhibited fresh birds at each show. The following are the winners of the competition: 1, A. Cant, with 50 points; 2, J. McIntyre, 21; 3, W. Johnstone, 20; 4, G. Marlin, 11; 5, D. Johnston, 10; equal 6th, A. and W. Hamilton (3), A. Malcolmson (9), and J. Kirkwood (9). Mr. R. B. STRATTON AND BUDE.

Our section of the seventh annual show of the Stratton and Bude F.A., held August 1st, was well represented, and the birds much admired. Unfortunately the bad weather had the effect of keeping a large number of people away. The secretaries, Messrs. Bohn and Welch, had worked admirably to have everything in proper working order, and the nice manner in which the birds were shown, and the courtesy they always display, are proof that these gentlemen "know the ropes," and are capable of running a show to the best advantage. Mr. J. Fairchild had charge of the tent in which the birds were staged, and was backed up by a capital committee. The awards were made by Mr. J. Rushmere (Exeter), and his placings appeared to please all.

Mr. E. J. Jones (Talysarn) will, we hear, judge the cage birds at Ardudwy show, Llanbedr on August 20th.

I consider "Our Canaries" will be a splendid work when it is finished, as parts 1 to 4 are excellent.—J. WHITTLE.

All the prize money won at our show held on August 1 last was paid on Thursday, Aug. 11, writes Mr. S. J. Welch, joint hon. sec. of the Stratton, Bude and District F.A.

Mr. J. Gilhespy has been elected to judge at our annual show on November 26, writes Mr. Robt. Blore, the hon. sec. of the Jarrow and Dist. C.B.S.

Record sale for Sandiford's colour feeds this season. Eight tons up to date. Those requiring more order at once, or may be too late. Every noted fancier in the world using them. —(Advt.)

I have from time to time found much very good advice in respect to Canaries in your very valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS.—W. SAUNDERS (Wakefield).

We have secured the services of the following judges for our annual show, writes Mr. A. Cant, hon. sec. of the Hamilton (Cadzou Oaks) O.S.; for Norwich, Mr. G. Marlin; for Borders, Mr. J. Alexander. Other judges are not yet fixed upon.

I am now secretary of the Bangor and Dist. C.B.S., writes Mr. W. A. Pidduck, and my address (to which all communications intended for the Society should in future be sent), is 3, Olgamount, Brynsburn Road, Bangor, co. Down.

Mr. S. Hadwin, of Liverpool, will lecture before the Chester C.B.F.A. on September 6, on the subject of "Preparing and Staging Birds for Exhibition," and fanciers and others interested are invited to attend, writes Mr. J. Swindley, the hon. sec.

It has been decided by the members of the Holywood and Dis. C.B.S. to hold our first annual show in the Town Hall, Holywood, on November 4, open to all in the province of Ulster. Further particulars will be published later in CAGE BIRDS. Mr. Isaac Reid (Dundonald) has been appointed judge.

I should like to meet the members on Aug. 24 at headquarters at 8 o'clock, writes Mr. C. W. Law, hon. sec. of the Highgate and Hampstead C.B.S. There are one or two new names for election to membership. The committee would like members to make any suggestions regarding the annual show. Tea and coffee will be served at 8 o'clock sharp, and there will be some music.

The adjudicators at the Japan-British Exhibition have awarded to Spratt's Patent, Limited, the grand prize for superior excellence of their Dog, Poultry, and Cage Bird Foods, which is doubtless gratifying to that company owing to the fact that their products were in competition with others. This is one of many similar awards obtained by this world-renowned firm at the leading exhibitions.

I was very pleased to see the sketch of my cage front (Illustrated Idea No. 429), writes Mr. A. Sharpe (Islington, London, N.). I just wish to let the readers of CAGE BIRDS know, in making their cage fronts, not to use spirits of salts, but composite candle, which does not make the wires rust, and also leaves them cleaner and better to work with when soldering. I wish CAGE BIRDS every success; also its readers.

A special general meeting is called for the consideration of open show business on Monday next, August 22, at 8 p.m. to 10.30, at the Avondale Hotel, Landor Road, Clapham, writes Mr. A. C. Askew, sec. of the Clapham and Dis. C.B.A. It is a special request I make to the members that all will attend this meeting. The special prizes won at the Young Bird Show will be given. I shall be glad to hear from any lady or gentleman (and to propose same) who would like to join the society; the entrance fee is 1s., and 4s. subscription.

The following societies, Gateshead, Blaydon, Carlisle, Darlington, Alnwick, and Newcastle, writes Mr. J. Bertram, sec. of the Northern British Bird, Mule, and Foreign Bird Club, have been granted the patronage of the club for their annual shows. Any society requiring our patronage should make their application to me at 95, Gainsbro' Grove, Newcastle-on-Tyne, stating classification and judge (radius Northumberland, Durham, Cumberland, and Westmorland); and anyone desirous of becoming a member of the club (sub. 2s. 6d.) should also please communicate with me.

I have removed from Hungerford Road to 7, Crewe Road, Haslington, near Crewe, writes Mr. T. L. Hancocks, hon. sec. of the Crewe O.S. Will secretaries of specialist and other clubs please note, and forward matter to correct address? I wish CAGE BIRDS continued success.

I have been a reader of your journal, CAGE BIRDS, since 1905, and have lately been sending copies of it out to my brother in India, who is staying at present at a place called Howrah, near Calcutta; and this is what he states about "C.B.": "Thank you ever so much for the journal CAGE BIRDS; I must say that it is a very valuable help to beginners in the cage bird industry. I was greatly taken with the two illustrations on the front page showing a Dutch Frill and a Norwich hen." So you will see that your journal is greatly appreciated in that far-off clime.—W. R. EVERETT (London, W.C.).

OBITUARY.

I am indeed sorry to have to tell you, writes Mr. John Rukin, hon. sec. of the Lancashire and Lizard F.A., that Mr. C. Bosworth, of Rushden, has received an awful blow, in the death of his wife, which occurred on August 8, after a very short illness. She has been a very enthusiastic helper to him with his Lizard Canaries. I am sure the sympathy of fanciers in general will go out to our friend in his sad bereavement.

The numerous friends and acquaintances of Mr. Samuel Dean (of Great Horton) will, writes Mr. F. Hammond, learn with regret of his bereavement in the death of his father, on the afternoon of August 16th, after an illness of nearly thirty years. The wide popularity which "Sam" so deservedly enjoys must surely mean a widespread expression of sympathy with him in this darkened hour. The funeral will probably take place this Friday (August 19th), and should the arrangements in the meantime occupy so much of Mr. Dean's time as to interfere with the mass of correspondence to which he is generally accustomed, those concerned will know the reason.

Mr. J. G. LEECH (Dudley).

It is with sincere regret, writes Mr. J. Jones (Dudley), that I have to announce the death of Mr. J. G. Leech, bird dealer, of Dudley, which occurred on August 13, after a long and painful illness. As secretary of the Dudley C.B.S. he was known to all fanciers throughout the Midlands, and his loss will be widely felt and deplored by his many friends in the Fancy, as he was a most keen and ardent fancier. Our sympathy goes to his wife and family in the great loss they have sustained.

Mr. ALEX. BARCLAY (Kelty).

It is with deep regret, writes Mr. F. Ford, sec. of the Kelty and Blairadam C.B.A., that I have to announce the death of Mr. Alex. Barclay, of Kelty, after a short but serious illness. Mr. Barclay was one of the originators of this present society. He has been a keen Norwich fancier for many years, and was looking forward to a successful season. Mr. Barclay was a very prominent figure about the town, taking a great interest in public affairs, and I am sure everybody who knows him will sympathise with his wife and family in their sad bereavement. He leaves five children.

Mr. GEO. ERSKINE (Lochgelly).

It is with deep regret, writes Mr. J. Brown, late secretary of the Lochore and Glencraig F.A., that I have to announce the death, at the age of 77, of Mr. George Erskine, Lochgelly, on August 4th. He was taken ill while returning home after a walk, and died a few minutes later. Mr. Erskine was a keen fancier for the past 40 years, and devoted most of his time to light Mule and Hybrid breeding, having turned out a few good ones in his time. He was a member of the local Cage Bird Society, and I feel sure his absence will be felt very much, especially among the young fanciers, to whom he was always ready to give any advice when they were in difficulties. He was held in high respect throughout the district, having held offices on the School Board, County Council and Co-operative Store; he was an ex-Provost of Lochgelly. The funeral took place on August 7th at Auchterderran Cemetery, there being a large attendance. I am sure all who knew him will extend their heartfelt sympathy to his widow and family in their sad bereavement.

The Tongue of the Wryneck.

The tongue of the Wryneck appears to be of normal size, but it can at will be extended to several inches. This the bird does when feeding.

Notes on the Nuthatch.

Frequenters of the woods may often get a glimpse of the Nuthatch, for he is with us the year round. As he shuffles up the stem of a tree or along the branches, he apparently is not aware of being watched, but he is always keen enough to get away at the first sign of danger. He is certainly one of our most interesting resident birds. His general colour is grey, and he has a chestnut breast.

The Heron's Nest.

The Heron's nest is somewhat like the Rook's, the building of which is an arduous affair, for it must be constructed to withstand the spring gales. It is of a substantial size, and is well put together. These birds choose high and exposed situations for their homes, possibly with the idea of possessing a point of vantage from which they can view the surrounding country, and detect the approach of their chief enemy—man.

MORE RESULTS

WHICH SPEAK FOR THEMSELVES!

Kindly hold my advertisement over, as I am flooded with orders. It is always the same when I advertise in your paper CAGE BIRDS. I generally have to return a lot of P.O.'s, as I am unable to get enough birds to supply all who send in reply.—G. E. SMITH (Highworth).

I have sold many of my Pekins already; CAGE BIRDS is a splendid paper to advertise in. LATER: Please stop the other two advertisements, as I have disposed of all the Bullfinches and Pekins.—MRS. WARREN VERNON (Toddington Manor, Beds.).

I have been kept very busy dispatching orders through my last advertisement in CAGE BIRDS.—ED. JACOBS (Brighton).

Increase of Stock Doves.

It is said that the numbers of Stock Doves are rapidly on the increase in certain localities; but we do not think this is the case near London, as the Wood Pigeon is much the commoner bird.

Song of the Nightingale.

The main reason why the Nightingale has such a high reputation as a songster is that it sings freely when other birds are silent. It sings freely in the day time, but then it is not heard by the majority of people, as they are unable to distinguish it from other performers. Tradition has placed the 'Gale at the head of all our songbirds, and for variety, melody, and volume no bird can surpass it.

More Often Heard than Seen.

The Sedge Warbler is one of those "birds of the summer" more familiar to country dwellers by reason of its chattering song than by a near acquaintance. In company of the Reed Warbler it can be heard from early morning until late at night, and even after dark it is easily started into song. It does not, as its name would imply, confine itself to the sedges, but may be found in other situations, although seldom far from water.

Parties of Tits.

Along the country lanes family parties of Long-tailed Tits may occasionally be met with. When in search of food they fly in single file, and maintain a continuous chirping (in a very small voice), no doubt to keep in touch with one another, for their eyes are fully occupied in searching for food. In summer they feed upon green fly, small caterpillars, etc., but their winter food is best known to themselves, and it is a marvel how such tiny creatures exist.

Choosing a Nesting Site.

The problem "Where to nest" must be a little different to those species that habitually nest in trees and bushes and those that seek holes in trees or other suitably covered sites. To the former there is practically no limit. Trees and bushes are plentiful, and each supply a forked branch suitable to build upon; but nesting holes are limited in numbers. No doubt, this fact is the cause of some curious nesting sites being selected, which are from time to time reported in the Press.

Country Rambles

Heptonstall and District C.B.A.

On Aug. 13 a ramble was organised by the association, and the two other local societies (the Hebden Bridge and Dist. C.B.A. and the Hebden Bridge and Calder Valley O.S.) were invited to take part. About half a dozen members of the latter society turned up, but none of the former, unfortunately, were present. There was a good turn-up of Heptonstall members, including the genial secretary, Mr. Mathers, and the president, Mr. T. Bowe, whose quaint remarks elicited roars of laughter from all. A start was made at 2 p.m. from Lee Mill bridge, and we proceeded up the beautiful Hebden Valley, where many species of birds were seen, including the beautiful Dipper or Water Ousel, several nests of which were also discovered. A great many plants were found, which were useful for cage birds. On getting to the top of the valley, which we reached at about 5.30, we made straight for the Pack Horse Inn at Ridge, where we sat down to a splendid tea, and it was really wonderful the way that Scotch bullock disappeared. After tea a paper was read by Mr. F. Greenwood, of Hebden Bridge, on "British Birds found in this District suitable for Cage Birds." Mr. Greenwood treated his subject in a masterly style, which was much appreciated by all present. After this Mr. Greenwood gave us the names of the plants which we had found, and their uses for birds. After the usual votes of thanks the remainder of the night was given up to conviviality, singing, etc., until 10 p.m., when we wended our ways homewards, enlivening the rather dreary walk by singing. Some of the party arrived home about 2 a.m. on Sunday, we hear. What did the wife say?—Old Tom.

Bathing in Back Cages.
Sent by Mr. H. D. Pocock, 31, Gaywood Street, London Road, S.E.

The enclosed diagrams show how I manage to let my Linnets and Finches bathe from an ordinary small back cage. Fig. 1 shows the front view of cage where water bottle hangs. By taking off water bottle and drilling two small holes over the wires marked A and B, and raising them as shown in Fig. 2, it will be seen that there is ample room for birds to get through. Drill two more holes in the top of cage, as shown in Fig. 1, and place the water bath over, so that the hanging wires fit into holes marked C and D. Care must be taken not to raise the wires too high, so as to allow the birds to escape before you have fixed water bath on. It will only take three minutes to drill the four holes with a piece of red-hot wire, and one bath will do for all cages.—H. D. Pocock.

A Mice Preventive.
Sent by Mr. W. Hitchen, 13, Orrell Road, Orrell, near Wigan.

I have been troubled so much by mice in my birdroom, and I have seen so many instances recorded in Cage Birds of other fanciers being troubled by this pest, that I have invented the following simple plan of avoiding them. I just get some drain pipes, on which I lay a board which takes my bird cages. The number of pipes, of course, depends on the length and thickness of the board. The length of my board is 6ft. 4in., and I have two pipes on which to lay it. The mice cannot climb up the pipes.—W. Hitchen.

* The Goldfinch.

"Goldfinch, pride of woodland glade,
In thy jet and gold arrayed;
Gentle bird that lov'st to feed
On the thistle's downy seed;
Freely frolic, lightly sing.
In the sunbeam spread thy wing!
Spread thy plumage trim and gay,
Glittering in the noontide ray!
As upon the thorn-tree's stem
Perch'd thou sipp'st the dewy gem."

* A Valuable Foster Mother.

My uncle has a hen and a cock Canary which he put together. After a while they had two young. The hen liked them for a while, and then, after a few days, to my uncle's surprise, she neglected them. So my uncle brought them to my father. He immediately put them in a nest of cotton wool with a hen that had had neither eggs nor young, having previously put them in a warm oven. The hen has taken to them, and they are still alive in the nest. They were only three days old when uncle brought them to dad, and they are a week old now. The hen sitting on them feeds them as if they were her own children. Father thinks and hopes the hen will continue to feed and sit on the young, so as to bring them up to be nice birds.—Sent by Winnie Watson (age 10 years), 92, Fircroft Road, Upper Tooting, London, S.W.

 On a Ramble.

While out on a ramble one Saturday with my Sunday School teacher and class through the woods and fields of Battihole, in Lancashire, we were very interested in watching the birds and their habits, and while walking through a thick part of the wood we came across a poor young bird which had fallen out of the nest, and had been killed by some cruel boys; although quite warm, it was dead. So we brought it home and buried it. It was a pretty bird. We also heard the Cuckoo and several other birds, and altogether we had a most enjoyable ramble through lovely country.—Sent by Beatrice Russon (age 10), 2, Bush Street, Burnley.

CANARY QUERIES.

A Fourth Nest.

Ignoramus.—You have made a mistake in allowing the hen to go to nest a fourth time, as you would have known beforehand had you read these replies the last few weeks. Still, as the thing is now done, and the hen sitting, you can only hope for the best. Feed mainly on plain canary, with a pinch of summer rape, every second day, until the eggs are due to hatch, which will probably be the afternoon of the thirteenth day from the laying of the fourth egg. At this time give a small teaspoonful of egg food and continue giving a little egg food at least twice a day—three times is best at this season freshly prepared each time and given in such quantities only as the bird will quite clear up each time. Give a little rape daily. On the third day begin to give green food, also in small quantity, and freshly gathered, if possible, twice a day. When young are eight or ten days old add a supply of cracked hemp each day. Should the hen show signs of flagging in feeding before this time, add a sprinkling of maw to the egg food and give a teaspoonful of rape soaked overnight in cold water, drained, and wiped dry. Also allow her to bathe freely. If the old birds drop into moult and cease attending to the young, there will be nothing for it but to feed and rear them by hand, using the ordinary egg food made into a moist paste as a pabulum.

Dying in Moult.

J B.—Your feeding is at fault for one thing, and I rather suspect you may not keep the birds so free from chills and fluctuations as you might. First see they are in a nice cosy position, quite free from draughts and extremes of heat and cold, and yet well ventilated and free from any impure or foul air. Keep cages as clean as possible and the floor nicely strewn with clean gritty sand. See that all food and water vessels are scrupulously clean, and give a fresh supply of pure water at least once a day. Continue your present staple diet of canary and rape mixed together, and as you are colour-feeding the birds give a small teaspoonful of the egg and colour food each day. Make the egg food of two parts crushed biscuit and bread crumbs to one part egg—not stronger—and add the colour afterwards, allowing the above-named quantity of the final mixture to each bird. Give a pinch of maw every second day, and if the birds are getting well forward in moult, add also a few grams of linseed twice a week. Stop the crushed hemp and glycerine, and bread and milk, and in fact all these extras you have been indulging them with, except what are now advised in this reply. A few leaf rape plantain stalks may be given instead of green food. In the drinking water give twenty drops of whisky, as much Epsom salts as will cover a sixpence, and a few blades of saffron daily for three or four days, after which they should go along all right. When nearing the end of the moult dissolve a crystal of sulphate of iron the size of a spit pea in the water three times a week for the last three or four weeks.

Two Young Unwell.

Ferry Road.—How long have these been "moping"? If it has come on just recently, the probability is they are about dropping into moult, in which case you should have discovered the first few cast off feathers before this appears. If this surmise is correct, you need not trouble much about the unnatural dullness, which is more or less natural to all birds at that time, and is much more pronounced in some than in others. But if they have not commenced to drop feather, remove them to a cage by themselves, keep them in a fairly warm place quite free from draughts, and offer them the bath in warm weather, only, until they get more active. Give a mixture of three part canary to one part summer rape as a staple, give a small piece of bread and milk sprinkled with soft sugar every second day, and on the alternate days a pinch of maw seed. For green food give only half ripe plantain stalks, or green seed heads of shepherd's purse. A pinch of hemp or a few grains of linseed may be given once or twice a week. In the drinking water give six drops of syrup of rhubarb, and as much Epsom salt as will cover a sixpence for two days, and after this give 15 drops of tincture of gentian and four of bromatic sulphuric acid in the water every second day for a week. You may also double the quantity of egg food given to the other two birds, and give it every second day, instead of daily, and once each week substitute a little bread and milk for it, the same as advised for the two above. In other respects, feed these two birds the same as above.

Hen Failing to Hatch Eggs.

Johnson (Cricklewood).—The indisposition of the hen is probably due to the onset of the moult, and, perhaps, a little trouble with egg laying. In either case the ebbs will have been passed, one way or the other, before this appears, and if you find she is dropping into moult, you should at once remove all nesting materials, keep her fairly warm, and if she does not part with her feathers so freely as she ought, add 20 drops of whisky, 10 of glycerine, and 5 of syrup of saffron, to the drinking water for a few days. Feed on a staple of plain canary seed only, and every second day give a half teaspoonful of summer rape, and on the alternate days a similar quantity of egg food, or its equivalent in bread and milk, to either of which add a good pinch of maw seed. Give a little green food daily, and allow her to bathe freely in suitable conditions of weather. You will do right to refuse the bath on wet or chilly days as long as she is in the present condition. You make no mention of her age. If she is a young hen of last season, I think you might well try her again next year, and see that she is kept in a position where she will be quite free from disturbance of any kind, and interfere with her as little as possible after she goes to nest. If she is an older bird, and has acted in the same way before in the matter of sitting, then I would advise you to discard her altogether for breeding. You say you have fed her on canary (unlimited), yet the sample of seed you sent is composed of canary, rape, hemp, inga, maw, and gold of pleasure. The first three are good, the others rather poor in quality. Limit the diet to that given above for a fortnight, after which you may add a small teaspoonful of this mixture twice a week.

Brevities.

Horny Growth on Beak (Omchattan).—These growths generally begin to appear with age, although every aged bird does not necessarily exhibit them. Feed on a plain wholesome diet, with a little egg food, or bread and milk, twice a week, and green food daily, and add a crystal of sulphate of soda to the drinking water two days each week for, say, a month. Paint the growth with tincture of iodine twice a week for a month, using a small feather, such as a wing or tail feather of a bird, for applying it, so as to avoid spreading it where it is not required. Allow the bird to bathe freely.

Green Food During Moult (A.L.N.).—It is not essential to make a liberal use of green food during the moulting period, in the case of young birds, especially those of the last broods, which are still very young when the moult begins, it is much better to restrict the supply of green stuff solely to such things as plantain stalks and seedy stalks of shepherd's purse, and avoid the more succulent and relaxing forms of green food. This is more especially the case when one is using a colour food of a relaxing nature, which is usually the case when it contains crushed linseed, and green stuff then is very apt to set up diarrhœa. The adult stock may be given it rather more liberally than the young ones, but care must be taken to avoid causing undue looseness.

Cause of Death (Stirlus).—Am not sure the nom-de-plume is interpreted correctly. It is perfectly useless trying to guess at the cause of a bird's death without ever having seen the subject. The only opinion worth having is that of the post-mortem examiner (Mr. Yates), after the body has been duly submitted for examination. I very much doubt the correctness of the opinion that death was due to tympanitis—which is what would be meant by the term tympany; this would not appear as a "watery bladder." But as you give no idea whatever as to the size, appearance, or position, of the said bladder, I cannot hazard a guess as to the nature of it. One thing is tolerably certain, viz., you did wrong in giving it flowers of sulphur, which would not have been suitable even if the bird had been merely suffering from a cold, as you suspected. Should another bird go wrong, write at once, and send full particulars, as to symptoms, and how you feed and treat them generally, and where you keep them.

Clear Eggs (Laughton Stock).—If he is a young one, as seems likely, judging by the vigour and singing capacities, I should certainly consider him worth trying again next year. It is not unlikely he was hatched late last season, and may have been slow in developing, so that this breeding season he was still somewhat immature, which, in combination with the generally prevailing conditions throughout the season, might easily account for his failure to fill the eggs. Your general treatment seems very fair. You might drop the bread and milk twice each week, and give in its place a small teaspoonful of egg food, and when the moult is approaching the end, give a few grains of linseed twice a week, and dissolve a crystal of sulphate of iron in the drinking water about twice a week. After the moult keep the bird on a plain, wholesome diet for the winter, and aim at having him in hard condition with no superfluous tissue to begin next season. Then mate him with a young but fully matured hen.

Starting the Moult (G. B.).—Remove all nesting receptacles and materials, so as to give the hens no inducement to want to nest again. Also remove the cocks, if possible, to another room, where the hens will neither see nor hear them. Put them on a staple diet of plain Canary only for a fortnight, with a daily supply of green food, plantain stalks, or marigold blooms; or, in the place of the latter, a small spray of pea mint if available. Give a little egg and weak colour food mixture three times a week, and dust it slightly each time with flowers of sulphur. Dissolve a crystal of sulphate of soda in the drinking water for two days, and after this give 20 drops of whisky, ten of glycerine, and half of syrup of saffron every second day until the birds are well broken in moult. As the moult approaches gradually bring them on to the diet and regular supply of colour food advised to "J.B." Cover cage nightly and keep up a fairly warm equable temperature. Allow them to bathe freely. By these means you should get the birds through the moult in the shortest possible time.

Chill Through Moulting (New Reader).—The best thing, in the first instance, is to remove the cause and take care the bird is not exposed to any cold draughts or extreme fluctuations of temperature. If it had already commenced dropping feathers and has now ceased, and also shrunken up, the case will be much more serious, and you must, beside seeing the above conditions are complied with, keep the bird in a warm place, and add a few blades of saffron and 20 drops of brandy to its drinking water daily for a few days. After this give 20 drops of whisky and 6 each of oxymel of squills, sweet spirits of nitre, and Ipecacuanha wine, for a few days. Feed on a staple of three parts canary to one part summer rape seed. Twice a week give a small teaspoonful of egg food or an equivalent quantity of crushed sponge cake or bread and milk, and a pinch of maw every second day until the moult is nearly at an end, and then substitute a pinch of linseed twice a week until the bird is quite fine in feather. Give a little green food daily. Do not give bath until its present condition is cured.

Clear Eggs (Fairview).—You should have said whether the hen was young or old. There may be many causes for the unfertile eggs for which she is not responsible. You seem to have tried her with more than one cock, with the same result, yet the cocks filled eggs with other hens successfully, which would seem to indicate that incompatibility was not a very likely cause, although this has to be taken into account. The condition of the weather at times of mating, and the general condition of the hen, are also probable causes—the latter, especially if the hen is in a fat overfed condition. In any case, she is worth trying again next season if she remains in apparently good health, but do not allow her to nest again this year. Get her through the moult as quickly as possible when it commences, and then feed on a plain wholesome diet, with but few luxuries, throughout the winter and spring months, in order to have her in a good, hard, and rather spare condition when next breeding season commences. Then put her up with a fresh young cock with plenty of vigour, and see that she is not troubled with any superfluity of loose feather about the flanks.

Choking to Death (May Star).—It certainly is not a common occurrence for cock Canaries to choke the hens whilst feeding them on the nest. On the contrary, I should say it is quite a rarity, as although I have several times seen Canaries and other birds choking, I have never seen a case prove fatal. But, of course, birds are by no means exempt from such fatalities. Both birds were probably putting more zeal than discretion into the performance, with the result that when the cock or hen, whichever was the culprit, dispatched a "course" by the "wrong route," the effect was undeniably effectual. You might have saved the situation by catching the hen, and if the obstruction (which was probably a seed kernel) could be seen at the entrance to the windpipe, removing it with a suitable pair of very fine forceps, or a sudden jerk of the body by holding the base of tail and wing tips securely, and making a feint of flinging the bird on the floor, might have proved effectual in removing the obstacle. Such cases, however, can only be dealt with by prompt and judicious action on the spur of the moment, as they allow no time for searching after remedies or looking up information.

FOREIGN BIRDS.

Answered by WESLEY T. PAGE, F.Z.S., etc.

Newly Purchased Gouldians.

New Subscriber.—You have done about the best you could with these birds, especially as they were in a poor condition. Just a word of warning. Do not mix them with your established stock for a month to come yet, or you may have good cause to rue it. Keep them warm; at the same time they must have light and fresh air without draughts. The cage should be a roomy one. This is an important point in the well-being of Gouldians. Yes, it is quite right to put them in the sun, but each cage should have a sheltered corner to which the birds can retreat at pleasure. In addition to the diet and remedies you name, carry out the following: Keep a small tin of "Paddy" rice in the cage; give several doses of Dinneford's Magnesia—one part magnesia to two parts water—with three days between each dose. If the voidings become at all watery you must lengthen the period between the doses, or stop them, according to the bird's condition. As soon as they recover their vivacity and become more active and fit, they cannot have too much exercise; and a fly round the room, with closed windows and door, of course, will be very beneficial.

Reed Birds, etc.

M. Amsler.—(1) I take it you have a pair of the Yellow-headed Reed Birds, recently advertised. In such case let them have access to the seeds you give to your other Foreigners, Cardinals, etc., also soft food, fruit, and live insects. The Yellow-headed Marsh Birds will take a lot of seed and will do well if they get only a little fruit and liberal supply of live insects in addition, but they will take a little soft food also. They require similar treatment to Cowbirds. (2) I do not care to take the risk of advising you to keep these out-of-doors during the winter, yet I have seen Tanagers and some of the Sugar Birds so kept, but their indoor quarters were exceptional, and I know my Gold-fronted Chloropsis, which had been out all the summer, showed signs of feeling the cold as soon as October was passed, and I promptly removed it to my greenhouse birdroom, where the temperature in severe weather is frequently as low as 35 deg. F. in the early mornings, and it always did well and is a very vigorous specimen. The slighter bird is the female, the one with the blue throat is, I fancy, an adult female C. jerdonii. Hope you have luck with them.

Amazon Parrot Ailing.

J M.—No enclosure reached us, but there is no difficulty in saying that all that can apply to this bird would be under offer No. 4, to which you refer. As regards keeping it, if the bird is really improving and is not losing flesh, there is no reason why you should not, as if you get it. Talk to it and keep at where it will hear plenty of conversation—it will ultimately talk and mimic to a greater or lesser degree. Give the bird several doses of Dinneford's Magnesia—magnesia and water in equal parts with two or three days' interval between each dose. This you must regulate by the condition of the voidings. On the days you are not giving the magnesia, well colour the drinking water with Parrish's Chemical Food. In addition to the boiled Indian corn, supply a seed mixture of canary, white millet, dari, maize, hemp, sunflower seed, in about equal parts, except the two first, of which use double quantity to the other kinds; ripe fruit, plain biscuit, and nuts. Keep a piece of clean cuttlefish hanging in cage. Report progress a week hence, please. Do not give tea, coffee, or milk sops, table scraps, or any kind of animal food whatever.

Budgerigars Weak.

Concerned.—I am afraid it is a case of egg-binding. I would catch the affected bird, anoint the swelling carefully with sweet oil, and give two drops of same from a quill direct to the beak; also steam the vent over hot water for about ten minutes. The above treatment will do good, whatever the nature of the swelling. They are small drinkers, but let their drinking water be made the colour of pale port wine with Parrish's Chemical Food for a month. The bowels must be kept well regulated, not loose, but an occasional dose of Dinneford's Magnesia, 3 drops from a quill direct to the beak. Keep a heap of old mortar rubbish in the cage. Diet: Canary, white and spray millet, a few crushed oats, and unlimited grass in flower (seeding grass), a few small pieces of any make of plain biscuit may also be given, and will certainly assist at this juncture. If the bird dies you had better send the body to our Mr. Yates for post mortem, as it may be it is something contagious, as the second bird has been taken that way. Our booklet, "Budgerigars and Cockatiels," you would find very helpful. See advert.

What Parrots?

Daisy Morris.—They are Ring-necked Parrakeets, and the value is from 15s. to 25s. each, according to condition and talking capacity. To increase the value get them, keep them where they will hear plenty of conversation, and also talk to them and teach them by constant repetition of words and short sentences; this is best done when they are quiet and restful. They have got so far, and will evidently improve in this respect. So long as they agree they will do in the cage together, but as soon as they are tame, they can be let out for a fly round the room, when they can be kept under observation. They are hardy birds, and will live out of doors all the year round in any aviary (constructed on the lines of a fowl house and run) which will give them space for exercise. Diet: A seed mixture consisting of two parts each of canary and white millet seeds and one part each of oats, dari, "paddy" rice, maize, hemp, and sunflower seeds, the whole to be well mixed together. Also supply ripe fruit, nuts, and plain biscuits. Keep a piece of clean cuttle fish hanging in the cage; any position will do for them that is airy and free from draughts.

Brevities.

Aviary Queries (R. R.).—Yes, you could with safety add a pair of Blue-winged Lovebirds (Passerine Parrakeets) to your present stock. The birds will do well in the greenhouse aviary, providing you eliminate damp and draught. Madagascar Lovebirds are shy breeders in captivity, but there is no reason why you should not succeed with them. The same applies equally to the blue-wings. These two species require larger nesting receptacles than the ordinary husk: boxes are better and they need not have concave bottoms, as both these species line their nests with leaves, bark, etc. The best way to supply these is to put in a living branch of any non-poisonous tree or shrub, and leave the birds to strip it for themselves. You have accommodation for pairs of Green and Yellow Budgerigars, Madagascar and Blue-winged Lovebirds.

Black-Cheeked Lovebirds ("Ignoramus").—Providing you establish or acclimatise them in the usual way, these birds can be kept out-of-doors all the year round, and will take no harm, even from such bad weather as we are experiencing this summer. Their demeanour is very variable. With some they interfere with the nesting arrangements of Budgerigars, etc.; with others they are quite amiable. With Finches I cannot advise you to even make the attempt. With the larger Parrakeets they will be all right, as I consider them able to look after themselves in any company, and they cannot interfere with the larger species. If the above is not clear, please give me a list of the birds you would like to keep them with, but do not attempt to keep them with Finches, Waxbills, and the like.

Parrot Weak on Legs (T. E. F.).—You give me absolutely no data to go upon. How long have you had it? How has it been treated and fed? What were the symptoms that preceded its present condition? If it is paralysis, nothing at all can be done; and if there is a local yet, your way, the simplest way is to let him see it. In the meantime I can only advise bathing the legs and feet with hot water (not but enough to cause discomfort), and after drying them with a cloth well paint them with whisky. I should also give a dose or two of Dinneford's Magnesia—magnesia and water in equal parts—at intervals to be regulated by the bird's condition. The voidings must not remain watery loose, and you had better continue your present diet till you get a further reply after supplying above information.

Breeding Budgerigars (Rex).—These birds do best in an outdoor aviary, providing it gives space for flight and has a shelter to which the birds can retire at night or during severe weather; in other words, construct as you would a fowl house and run, with this difference, that the run must be covered with half-inch mesh wire netting, and the roosting place be well lighted, and furnished with twiggy branches and cocoanut husks. If kept in a cage they must be brought into the birdroom for the winter. Birds hatched one year usually breed the next; if they show any inclination to do so earlier it should be prevented by separating the sexes. They are probably brother and sister; in such case it would be better to get another pair from some other source and change them over.

Zebra Finches Not Rearing Young (G. Forres).—Some pairs, like some Canaries, are erratic in the matter of feeding their young; you are supplying an ample diet, and I do not see how it can be added to, save perhaps by supplying all lib. grass in flower (seeding grass). Very small Zebra Finches are reared annually on seed alone. Some pairs will let you meddle with them, and look over their nests without affecting the result, but unless you definitely know the young have been deserted I should leave the nest severely alone. I should also give them plenty of millet sprays; other than this I can only counsel patience, and if they should not rear any this season, then change one of them, the hen preferably. "Foreign Birds for Beginners," 1s., plus postage, from this office, would help you.

BRITISH BIRDS, MULES AND HYBRIDS.

Feeding Linnets for Song.

John Bull. Sorry I overlooked last week your request for method of feeding. I have given this, however, very frequently. I can recommend the "Nutshell" booklet on the Linnet to you (price 2½d., post free); it contains many excellent hints. Let the Linnets' stock mixture be: Canary three pints, teazle two pints, summer rape, chickweed, and linseed one pint each. In the winter (if the birds are in a cold room) about one pint of hemp should be added to the stock mixture. A feed of maw and niger, and a good wild seed mixture can be given frequently (varied), by way of a change. Let them have a little green food, especially rape seedlings, in the winter, and flowering dandelion tops and the young leaves, also seeding shepherd's purse, chickweed, plantain, and groundsel freely in the spring and the summer. To bring them in condition for song and breeding the great "secret" is to give them a daily supply of the best old hemp, and crack it lightly, so that they feed well upon it. Also put in the "tit-bit" drawer every other day, a teaspoonful of the following mixture: Two ounces each of gold of pleasure, niger, plantain, sesame, and thistle, one ounce each of mustard (the golden-yellow seed), dandelion, maw, cornflower, and lettuce. This is a splendid "stimulating" mixture.

Some Plumage Differences.

In Doubt. 1. There is hardly ever any sex difference to be found in the plumage of young birds; this (if any) does not become in evidence until the adult plumage is assumed. Thus, the young cock and hen Redstart are alike. But one can kind of give a good guess at the sex by selecting the boldest, ruddiest-looking youngsters. Last year I picked 5 Redstarts out of a lot of "babies" and they moulted four cocks and one hen. At the autumn moult the young cocks attain the ruddy breast and black throat, but do not attain the full beauty of the male plumage until the spring, when they get the white forehead and the lovely black, red and grey of their nuptial dress. Last year, however, I moulted three young cocks into spring plumage at their first moult; and they won a number of prizes at the winter shows. 2. The adult hen Greater Whitethroat is quite a self-colour (greyish-brown) compared with the cock, which has his colours well-contrasted—white, grey, and brown, with a rosy tinge on the breast. When in winter plumage, however, the colours of the cock bird are much duller. An adult male does not take long to get on song if well fed.

Troubled with Insects.

New Reader.—Glad to hear that you like Cage Birds, and to know that we were recommended to you as "the best" by your seed dealer. I advise you to buy the "Nutshell" booklet dealing with the Skylark (post free, 2½d.). As I have often had occasion to remark, the Skylark is a bird very apt to get infested with insects, unfortunately, and it will not thrive until they have been got rid of. These birds should always have a dust-bath containing a good dash of insect powder (or, better still, Izal disinfectant powder), and be sprayed at least once weekly. The bird may have been affected when you bought it. The insects are the grey bird louse. The bird should be dusted thoroughly with Keating's insect powder (or the Izal disinfectant powder), especially under the wings, at root of tail and round the neck, then wrapped in a piece of flannel for about 15 minutes; then put into a temporary cage. The powder must be worked well amongst the plumage; a small camel-hair "mop" brush is handy to do it with. Keep it out of the eyes of the bird it at all possible. The old cage should be painted all over with turpentine (or paraffin), letting it run into every crack and crevice, whether in front or otherwise; when dry, distemper it out. Perches, seed and water vessels, must also be washed and cleansed. To complete the cure the bird wants skilfully hand-washing with carbolic soap, but it needs a skilled fancier to attempt this. Half measures are no good if one wishes to exterminate lice. See that the tail feathers are thoroughly washed, for it is on them that these lice seem particularly fond (or so my investigations lead me to think) of depositing their eggs.

Colour-feeding Seed-eaters.

Red-Fed. You are quite wrong in saying that I "recommend" the colour-feeding of seed-eaters. I should be just as pleased if colour-feeding could be, and were, done away with. But I think, colour-feeding being permitted, that those who do not colour-feed certain species are handicapped on the show-bench. If they do not mind this, then there is nothing more to be said. Respecting the colour-feeding, it is not always easy, as I have often explained, to get Finches to eat colour food made in the usual way viz., with egg-bread. Some fanciers get over this difficulty by gradually accustoming the birds to eating ground up seeds (canary, linseed, and maw, generally). Then, about the beginning or middle of July, they commence adding a little colour feed, working up the strength by degrees. A certain successful fancier of my acquaintance, with a liking for colour feeding Britishers (especially Bullfinches), uses crushed linseed only as a vehicle for conveying the pepper. You must experiment and find out which way, or ways, best meet your own case—there is no "royal road" as with Canaries, unless it be with hand-reared British birds. Most fanciers use red-feed (tasteless pepper). The quantity of colour food depends on the bird—a rich yellow Greenfinch would naturally need less than a dingy-coloured one. One in four ought to be the outside strength necessary; one in six or seven might suffice. Use your own judgment. In my opinion, an overfed British Finch is spoiled; and some birds, buffs, it is almost waste of time to try to colour-feed. They don't "take it" (the colour). If you keep insectivorous birds I can give you a good "tip" cage one with your Finches. I put a Wagtail in my flight cage with some Finches I am giving a little colour feed. Seeing the Wagtail feed, they soon go down to sample what he is eating, and are not long before they acquire a liking for insectivorous food: the rest is then easy. I put the food on a "feeding board," and mix some crushed seed with it. They pick up quite sufficient colour. A Canary will also do to "show the way" to the Finches. I find many Finches very fond of a little soft food once they have tasted it, and they then eat the colour-food readily.

Brevities.

An Elderberry Tree (A. F. S.).—A ten foot open flight would not by any means be too large for the aviary. You need not do away with the elderberry tree. I never heard of this injuring any bird; as a matter of fact, many British birds are extremely fond of the elder-berries. I take it that you are certain the tree is really an elder (I notice you put the word in inverted commas, as though doubtful). If so, it is sure to provide the inmates of the aviary with very acceptable shelter and good natural perches.

A Young Bird (Constant Reader).—I cannot pretend to identify nestling birds when six or seven days old, without so much as a feather showing. The body sent does not strike me as large enough for that of a Greenfinch-Bullfinch Hybrid of the above age. Still, if the youngster died through the hen neglecting to feed (you do not state cause of death), then the growth would be stunted.

To Ameriea (Americus).—I think you might venture to put the Goldfinches with the Linnets, Brambletinches with Bullfinches, and Siskins with Chaffinches. You must see that they are used to cage life and well on seed, before starting with them, or your losses may be heavy. It is not height that is important in the cage, but floor space, i.e., length and width from front to back. I have enquired of Messrs. Spratt's Patent, Ltd., (who are large exporters of live stock), and they have been good enough to tell me that small birds are not subject to custom duty.

Two Matters (G. Forres).—1. I have had no experience of an ailment which causes a bird's eyes to protrude, and kills quickly. Send a body to our Mr. Yates (note the "post-mortem" column), and he will tell you the cause of the deaths. 2. Could you not put the young Hybrids in cages, and leave the latter in the outdoor aviary? It is not an important point, however (except on the score of expense), because tasteless colour-food will not harm any bird, providing it is absolutely pure and good. I say this unhesitatingly, and I have had a varied and fairly lengthy experience. It will be more costly, of course, to feed the whole aviary of birds.

A Moulting Skylark (J. Harris).—The "covering up" is mentioned because Skylarks are sometimes difficult birds to start off into moult, and this helps to start the shedding of the feathers. Sometimes they will miss a season entirely, but this is not necessarily harmful, for I can call to mind one very noted Lark which won a lot of prizes notwithstanding the fact that it missed its moult. The covering up is quite optional. It is certainly a good plan, however, to move a bird to a darker corner of the room when it is due to drop into the moult. It can be moved back to its old spot when the moult gets well under weigh. There is no need for bird-keepers to fear the moult in the case of normally strong and healthy birds. Many birds get it over as easily as we ourselves do the changing of a suit of clothes; and, anyway, "worry" is a bad companion.

British Bird Querists should purchase our "British Bird Manual," published in two parts, "Hardbills" and "Softbills," price 1/- each, or in cloth cover together, 2/3 post free.

POST MORTEMS.

Mr. G. Yates, M.R.C.V.S., 2, College Road, Harrow, Middlesex, will examine and report upon dead cage birds for a fee of 1s. 6d. each bird; for reply direct, 2s. 6d.; analysis, 21s. Subjects for post mortem examination must be sent packed in a box direct to Mr. Yates, with the fee, this and any accompanying letter being kept from contact with the dead bird. Send by letter-post; it is cheaper and quicker than parcel post. And bodies sent to the office of this paper will be thrown away, and if a fee is enclosed the loss will be the sender's.

L. C. Rogers. There is nothing infectious. Canary died of pneumonia induced by the recent wet and muggy weather. No matter how well housed, with young and susceptible subjects the degree of moisture in the air is quite sufficient to bring about this disease.

P. Humphrey.—No, there are no signs of fever. The lungs were the seat of disease, viz., acute pneumonia. The bird was very thin, and the breast bone prominent. When you use the term "fever," I suppose you mean septic fever. There was no evidence of this. Fever may exist apart from this, for the emaciated condition of your bird is due to febrile disturbance. Pneumonia is always associated with a feverish condition, and I am afraid in your case it is of a contagious type, so that you must ensure precautions to prevent its spread. Early isolate any affected birds. Treatment is almost futile in such acute cases, but as a preventive measure give citrate of iron and quinine in drinking water, using just sufficient to colour the water.

B. Gordon.—Inflammation of the bowels resulting from liver disease is causing the death of your birds, affecting both young and old alike. The disease I refer to is brought about by a germ taken in with the food, whose ultimate sent is the liver; within this organ it sets up disease bringing about necrosis or local death in various parts. When the liver is thus deranged, and its proper action interfered with, its secretions, such as bile secretion, becomes altered or materially lessened. These secretions act as an antiseptic in the intestines; with the loss of these enteritis or inflammation of the bowels results. Remove affected birds to other quarters, for the excreta of these soiling the food of healthy birds, sets up the disease within them and are consequently a source of danger. An occasional dose of glauber salts, given in the drinking water, will act as a preventive.

H. C. Clift.—Bullfinch died of that very fatal disease, broncho-pneumonia, originating in an ordinary attack of bronchitis induced by chill. I presume you attempted early treatment. As a rule, this is amenable to same. Early medicinal treatment is most important in bronchial trouble; otherwise, if allowed to continue, the disease extends to the smaller bronchial tubes and involves the lung tissue. There are many predisposing influences—overheated rooms, inhalation of dust particles, gaseous impurities; but, more commonly, damp, cold weather is to be reckoned with. In the early stages of this disease there is seldom any marked constitutional disturbance with the exception of a little labour in breathing, but when the medium and smaller-sized bronchial tubes become affected then physical signs appear. In ordinary cases bronchitis passes off in a week to ten days with appropriate treatment.

John McDonald. Post-mortem examination showed both lungs badly affected with pneumonia, and the bowels in an inflammatory state, the former causing death, and resulting from the same cause as the latter. There was evidence of diarrhœa, which occurs in many conditions, and the recognition of its causes is important from the point of view of treatment. It indicates irritability of the lining membrane of the bowel, and is caused by the putrefactive processes occurring in the bowel contents, irritants taken in with the food, and, amongst other things, the formation of poisons or toxins inducing ptomaine changes. Such changes are often induced by the too free use of egg food, being often prepared with an unduly large ratio of egg constituents. I have had occasion during the season to investigate several similar occurrences in the near neighbourhood, in which although the egg food was freshly prepared and quite sweet, yet it was given in unnecessarily large proportions, or, I might say, too losses discontinued. I just mention this to indicate that for the production of ptomaine poisoning of bird it is not a necessary factor that the egg food when prepared and given should be noticeably affected, but that within the intestine putrefaction may occur and bring about dire results. If you will reduce your egg diet to minimum proportions, or discontinue its use for little while, I do not think you will have any further trouble. A dose of magnesia given in drinking water two or three times weekly will also be beneficial in bringing about the desired result.

A Rot proof Composition (A. B. Timmis).—We have inserted your letter in the correspondence columns, and no doubt some reader will be able to oblige with the information.

A Suggestion (G. Barker).—We thank you for the suggestion, which we will give our consideration. Your letter shall be forwarded to Mr. St. John.

SOME BREEDING RESULTS OF THE 1910 SEASON.

Notes on the results of the present breeding season, or of any interesting happenings, are invited from the secretaries of societies and others and must be accompanied by the sender's name and address in every case.

Lochore and Glencraig F.A.

The breeding season has almost closed here, and most of our fanciers have had poor results, very few having anything like the number of young birds of former years. The following are some of the results:—Mr. Wm. Wilkie, from four pairs reared 25 youngsters, among them being two promising Yorkies that should be heard of later: he has also 5 nice Goldie Mules. Mr. Geo. Croy has done well, having reared no fewer than 18 youngsters from two pairs of Borders; he had also a clutch of fertile eggs from the Greenie-Canary, but these failed to hatch. Mr. C. Shoolbred has 3 young from 2 pairs of Scotch Fancies, among which is a promising clear buff; he has also a nice dark Linnet Mule. Mr. A. Wilkie, another Scotch Fancy enthusiast, has from 3 pairs reared 6, one of which (a buff pie-bald) should hold its own in strong competition: he also has 9 Borders from two pairs. Mr. J. Ewenson from 6 pairs of Canaries has reared 26 strong birds, mostly of the Norwich-Yorkie cross: and he has had 6 Greenie Mules and two clutches of eggs from the Greenie-Bullie, the Bullie sitting the full time on each clutch, but the eggs, unfortunately, were unfertile. Mr. J. Taylor from 7 pairs of Norwich reared 19, among them being 4 very promising youngsters; one in particular, a buff, is exceptional, having the appearance of a "stormer" (his last year's Linnet Mule, by the way, is looking grand, and will take some stopping, as it has improved greatly since Dunfermline Show, where it stood 2nd). Mr. T. Wildrige is as keen as mustard on the Fancy, but has had a bad season, only managing one youngster from 4 pairs of Norwich, he also had up 3 pairs for muling and 8 pairs for hybridising, but failed to rear a youngster from any of them, although he had plenty of eggs. Mr. W. attributes his failures to being too good to the hens and to having bad feeders, he is anxiously looking forward to the shows, when he means to make up for the bad breeding season. Mr. A. Bogie from 3 pairs of Norwich reared 15, having some promising youngsters among them: and from 4 muling pairs and 3 hybridising pairs he reared 1 Greenie Mule, which has the appearance of making into a good bird. Mr. J. McLeod from 4 pairs of Norwich was only able to rear 3 youngsters some of his birds going into the moult shortly before the season commenced, this being the cause of his failure; he also had 2 pairs for muling and 1 pair for hybrid breeding from which he has had 2 nice Goldie Mules and a Greenie Mule, the former being both variegated. Mr. J. Philp has had a bad season, having from 4 pairs of Norwich only reared 4 youngsters. Mr. P. had the misfortune to lose two of his best birds during the season, which no doubt put him back a bit. He is looking forward to the show season, for although he has not got quantity he has quality, and should do well. Mr J. Adamson, a red-hot enthusiast on Light Mules from 3 pairs reared 10, mostly variegated Goldie Mules. He has among them a grand dark buff, a real "clinker." He had the misfortune to lose an almost clear bird at the age of ten days. He has 10 nice youngsters from his noted strain of Sibs., and hopes to produce a few more like the now well-known "Prince Charlie." Mr. R. Spalding from 2 pairs of Norwich reared 3 youngsters, and from all accounts they are promising birds; he also had 3 pairs for muling and 2 pairs for hybridising, and had plenty of eggs, but failed to rear any. Mr. R. Dow from 6 pairs of Scotch Fancies reared 10 youngsters, some of them very promising. Mr. J. McGregor from 2 pairs of Crests reared 2 very promising youngsters that will be heard of later. Mr. T. W. Peel from 7 pairs of Borders reared 16, amongst which are some very fine youngsters and from 3 muling pairs he had 2 Greenie and 2 Goldie Mules that should do him credit. Mr. J. Sneddon from 6 pairs of Scotch Fancies has 13, 3 of which are very promising, and from 2 pairs of feeders he reared 8 strong birds. Mr. J. Donaldson had 4 pairs of Borders up, but had to remove to a new residence at the beginning of the season, which upset the breeding; and he did not "manage a feather." Better luck next season, Norwich reared 6 nice youngsters, and from 1 pair of Borders 5. Mr. J. Percy has done exceedingly well, this being his first season he has reared no fewer than 21 youngsters from two cocks and three hens (Borders). He is to be congratulated on his success, for the birds are all nice and healthy. There is no doubt Cage Birds is to blame for this, for no matter when you see him, if he has a minute to spare his head is buried in "C.B." or the "Annual." Mr. Jas. Raeburn from 4 pairs of Sibs. reared 4 nice birds, and from 5 pairs for Mule breeding did not get a feather although he had plenty of eggs. Mr. John Raeburn from 2 pairs of Canaries has not had a youngster, and from muling pairs reared one bird. Mr. T. Taylor from 2 pairs of Yorkies reared 4 promising youngsters, and from a Goldie-Bullie a nice hybrid; he has another two fertile eggs from the same pair. Mr. Taylor is also to be congratulated, as he is the only one here who has managed to get them that far advanced although there have been plenty of fertile eggs. Mr. W. Whiteford from 6 pairs of Scotch Fancies and Norwich reared 12 promising youngsters, the most of them being Norwich, and from 5 pairs for muling purposes reared 5 nice birds. Mr. J. McLean from 7 pairs of Crests and Crest-breds reared 6 promising birds, some of which, no doubt, will be heard of later on the bench. Mr. R. Chalmers from 3 pairs of Sibs. only managed to rear 2 youngsters, and from 3 muling pairs reared 1 Linnet Mule; he had a pair of Siskins breeding in a cage, but when the eggs were about due to hatch they were, unfortunately, destroyed. Mr. C. considers this season the worst he has had. I myself, like the majority, have had poor results; from 5 pairs of Borders I reared 7 youngsters, and from 3 muling pairs 8 birds. Three of these latter are Goldie Mules, and the other 5 Siskin Mules. And I had 2 fertile eggs from the Greenie-Bullie and a clutch from the Goldie-Bullie, which I have reasons to believe were fertile, but Mr. Goldie had his share before I got them. Mr. J. Christie from 4 pairs of Borders only got 3 youngsters, "bad feeders" and "dead in the shell" being the causes of his failure; and from 2 muling pairs he did not manage to rear a bird, although he had fertile eggs.—J. Brown, late Sec., Lochore and Glencraig F.A.

The Hoopoe in Egypt.

Every day Hoopoes may be seen near the mud villages or on the river banks of Egypt. They are always fussy and inquisitive looking, peering round every corner and thrusting their long bills into every hole, or dressing their smart feathers on some sun-baked wall. They are very sociable birds, and their "Hoop, hoop, hoop" may be heard along the whole length of the Nile Valley. Hoopoes were at one time sold for food in the market places in Upper Egypt, but this has now been put a stop to. These birds are plentiful and build everywhere—in holes in the ground, in trees and stumps, and cracks in walls. Unlike almost every other wild bird, their nests are very dirty, neither of the birds taking the least pains to keep it tidy, which is most contrary to the usual habit of wild birds, which are most cleanly.

To Preserve a Wooden Aviary Floor.

SIR,—Can any reader kindly tell me of a good rot-proof composition, non-poisonous, for painting the wooden floor of an outdoor flight? Or is there any other way of preserving the wood?

Information Wanted on the Growing of Dandelion.

SIR,—I would be much obliged if some kind fancier would tell me how to grow dandelion. I have gathered a few seeds, and I want to know if they are to be set right away, and how deep in the soil. I gathered some seeds about twelve months ago, and I set them the same day; but they never sprouted up.

The Ring Danger: A Warning and a Question.

SIR,—A bad case came under my notice a few days ago. A friend of mine had a very good Norwich hen, which had a ring on its foot. By some means this ring got caught in the cage wires, about a month ago, and quite unbeknown to him. The bird managed to get itself freed, but the struggle unfortunately broke its leg. This was not noticed for some time, as it was sitting on some eggs almost due to hatch, although no doubt in great pain. It hatched the eggs, and fed the young until they left the nest. It was noticed, of course, that she held up her foot, but nothing was thought seriously the matter, and my friend did not like to disturb her. He well bathed the leg, and then brought the bird to me. On examining it, I found that it had been broken quite close to the claws, and was hanging by a sinew, quite useless. I at once amputated the injured foot, as it could not possibly be set; and then stopped the bleeding. The next day the bird was as lively as a kitten, and appeared quite thankful for the operation. The leg was broken just where the ring was (the ring was one of the opened kind). This is the second case I have had under my care of broken leg through the ring. I hope this letter will serve to make fanciers careful on this score. The hen has not started to build again, but my friend will try to see if she can lay fertile eggs now her foot has been taken off. The experiment is worth the trial as the hen is a very good one, and comes from a champion strain, and it is something to know she is perfectly happy again. Perhaps some of the numerous readers of CAGE BIRDS may have tried to breed with a hen that has only one leg; if so, it would be interesting to know the results.

A LOVER OF CANARIES.

Hints to Keepers of British Birds.

SIR,—I have had some experience in the keeping of the smaller and more delicate softbills. The Softbills are the most delightful of all Britishers. Their food is certainly more expensive and more difficult to obtain than that needed for Finches. The Nightingale should be kept in a large box cage with soft perches. I cover the perches with baize. My cage has a cloth top also. This species should be kept warm in the winter. Feed it on a mixture of grated Osborne biscuits, dried flies and ants' eggs (I moisten mine with raw egg); supply in another vessel gentles, mealworms, and any other live food you can get; also fruit. The male Blackcap it is that has as its name denotes, a black head, the rest of the body being greyish brown. This bird should have plenty of fruit as well as insects. The next three birds—the Chiffchaff, the Wagtails, and the Robins—require much the same treatment. The Chiffchaff is very delicate. I find a lovely albino of this species was exhibited some years ago. The wires of the cages of this and all other small birds should be very close. The Robin is too well known to need description. He is not at all hard to keep, fed as directed above. He makes a nice, friendly little pet, but is savage to other birds. Wagtails should have a tin to paddle in; a biscuit tin lid does very well, but do not leave it in all night. A grass sod is also good. The Yellow Wagtail makes a grand show bird, given a little colour food. The Pipits, especially the Tree Pipit, are very nice pets and show birds, and are not hard to keep. It is a good thing to give a sod fresh every day. The Sedge Warbler is a nice singer, also a good mimicker. One I had could sing like the Thrush, Robin, Goldfinch, Lark and Canary. He would never finish one song, but muddle the notes of all up with his own rather raspy notes. Very delicate indeed are the Wren and the Goldcrest. So much so, that, including as well the Flycatchers, I would advise novices not to have anything to do with them before they have had experience with other birds. But if kept they should be always warm, and free from draughts. Feed them on food before-mentioned, giving all sorts of live food. The Tits are also difficult to keep, the Cole, Blue, and Marsh Tits especially so. So also are the Crested and Bearded Tits. The easiest is the Great Tit; this is a good show bird if steady. Give them sunflower, Canary and hemp seeds in addition to stock food. Swallows and Martins are birds fit only for an aviary. Give them as much insect food as possible. The Dippers (I have a pair) I have in an aviary. These were hand-reared, and have moulted successfully. I think they are splendid birds for an aviary, but hard to cater for. Give tadpoles, various water grubs and insects. I have a stream flowing through my aviary, and it is, of course, a great help. It is just lovely to hear the cock Dipper singing as he perches on one of the stones in the water. I will now give descriptions of good show Finches and Buntings. All exhibition birds should be in excellent health, and have soft, silky feathers, with a bright sheen to finish them off. Goldfinches should be as large as you can get them, with other points good. The blaze should be square cut and of a rich red, between scarlet and crimson, a chestnut back and side, nice sized moons and buttons, rich yellow wing bars, nice jet-black cap, wings, and tail. It should be smart, and carry itself well, but not at all wild, as this ruins a good bird's chance of a prize; it spoils its feathers, and the judge cannot see its good points. The Linnet should have a cone-shaped body. It should also be a large, well-set-up bird, in colour a nutty brown, not running too light beneath; and it should be well and distinctly pencilled all over. The white wing bars should be a good size. In regard to the Bullfinch, I like a big, cobby body, soft shining feathers, a bright, pink breast, a nice blue black, shining jet, a well-formed cap well-defined white bars on well-folded wings, not too long, jetty wings and tail. None of the above birds are much improved by colour feeding, but natural colour food, in the shape of privet, elder and sloe berries, improves the breast hue of the Bullfinch. Greenfinches are best when they are of Norwich type body, have short wings and tail, bright bold eyes, and in colour are a good bright green, running to a rich yellow on breast. The flights and tail should be black, and the wing bar as large and as bright as possible. The Yellow Bunting should have the V-shaped mark on head, and cheek marks black; the rest being bright yellow—as much yellow on breast as possible. The wings and tail should be a bright brown. The Chaffinch should have a bright-red brown breast, a slate-blue cap, olive green back, wings a mixture of black, white and yellow. A good big bird is the best. Plenty of wild seeds, green food, etc., improve the colour and health of Chaffinches. I have found inga seed to improve the blaze of a Goldfinch. Moult your birds in an aviary if you can, but cage them for an hour every day, as this prevents their becoming too wild.

A BRITISH BIRD KEEPER.

Rare-feathered Birds and Hybrid Breeding.

SIR,—I am pleased to see that one of my pet theories, re clear hybrids, has been reduced to practice by a report in CAGE BIRDS recently of two clear Greenfinch Hybrids produced from a cinnamon Greenfinch. Although I have never tried these rare-feathered birds for hybrid breeding, I have always felt that there was something in them. I have heard of several pied and variegated Linnets being put up for breeding, but none have produced fertile eggs. Still, I have always thought that they would breed and produce light or rare-feathered young. Perhaps we shall now hear of others who have these white and rare-feathered birds (which have been shown of late) producing young which are clear, or nearly so. I feel convinced that these rare-feathered birds have been produced by inbreeding in a wild state, and it is the inbreeding which shows itself in the hybrids, the same as the "Sib hens," which are inbred for light mule breeding. The time will come when these birds will be more sought after for breeding purposes, and it is just possible that in the future British birds will be inbred in aviaries for the purpose of producing rare-feathered hybrids. There is yet a lot to be learned in regard to mule and hybrid breeding, notwithstanding so many beautiful mules and hybrids have already been produced. I am still glad to see that there have been instances of mules breeding, and hope that all cases will be reported of such having bred, and I hope the young will be exhibited for experts to examine and comment upon. I shall be pleased to hear of any case where a rare feathered cock Bullie has paired with a hen of any other species.

Two Goldfinches Bred in a Cage.

SIR,—It may be of interest to the many readers of CAGE BIRDS to know that I have bred two young birds from a pair of Goldfinches in a cage. The hen is feeding them by herself. They are now, at the time of writing, leaving the nest.

Another Double Egg Laying Case.

SIR,—Reading the account in your valuable paper, CAGE BIRDS, of an egg within an egg, I will give you the laying result of a green Norwich hen of mine. This season she has laid four clutches—four eggs in each clutch. The third eggs of the first three clutches have been double-yolked ones; this fourth and last round the hen laid a natural egg the first day, missed the second day, and on the third day laid a double egg, the fourth day she laid another natural one. The double egg was joined in the middle like a double nut or plum; one part of the egg was the natural size, and the other a trifle smaller. Each part had a yolk in it. When held on the table it resembled a cottage loaf with the bottom part a trifle larger than the top. The hen is in good health, and none the worse for laying such a curious egg. Has anyone seen such an egg before?

The Plainhead Judges at a coming Glasgow Show.

SIR,—Having while on a holiday come into contact with a number of birdy men, the conversation being mostly of a birdy nature, many topics were touched on. The most important was concerning the Plainhead judges at a coming Glasgow show. All the fanciers I came in contact with were very strong in their views with regard to the judges selected by the Society mentioned. These men favour two distinct types of bird, and I think the best way for all concerned would be for these parties to relinquish their appointments and let the Society select other judges. The said show was a distinct failure financially last year, and I make bold to say that more money will be lost this year. One party assured me that he had exhibited at the show for many years, but this year he would do so very reluctantly. But what can one do? There is too much of the "scratch-my-back-and-I'll-scratch-yours" policy in the Fancy to-day. Let us raise it to a loftier and more healthy ideal.

J. SINCLAIR.

The Smell of Paint: Does it Affect Birds?

SIR,—I agree with Mrs. F. Horlebog's warning against the effect of new paint on birds. I have had Canaries that have died from the effect of new paint on the cages in a bird-room. I put them in the bird-room because there was plenty of room there, and I thought they would be out of the way there. I also lost seven Canaries by buying seed from a chemist's shop where they sold paint, etc. I explained this to my father, who has had over thirty-eight years' experience of Canary breeding; and he said, "I have told you many a time not to buy seed from this sort of shop"; and so he had. I had run short, so I thought I would get a pound from the nearest shop for the week-end. I have lost Canaries by the smell from an oil lamp turned low and burning all night in the bird-room. In regard to Mr. Wardill's statement in last week's CAGE BIRDS, I think he is very lucky not to have lost a bird from the smell of paint. If the smell of paint will put people in bed for two or three days with "painter's colic," etc. (say people who are working in a building that is being painted all through), what will it do to a bird? If anyone were to paint a bedroom green and put as many buckets of water as he liked round it, and then put some birds in the room, I think he would find one or two of them with their toes "cocked up" in a very short time. I have been told that the smell of paint gets into the seed as well as the water, and I quite believe it. I wish CAGE BIRDS every success, and also CAGE BIRDS ANNUAL, which is a very good book for amateurs, etc.

AN AMATEUR.

SIR,—I should like to thank the contributors who have taken so much interest in my heavy loss. Notwithstanding the different opinions expressed, I feel convinced the trouble originated through the paint, and I think it my duty to warn others. The painter who did the work greatly admired my stock of beautiful birds before he started his job, and incidentally stated that he had had a good try at it himself, but never could get a bird to live in his place. Now, after hearing of my loss, he says that his paint-mixer is frequently ill for three days after having mixed the paint. Regarding the sad experience and kindly advice of Mr. R. W. Vanderben, I should have been so grateful if I had known of it before the work was commenced. The reason it lasted three weeks is that the landlord caused a delay in reference to the estimates as to the inside work. When the painters had finished with the outside the deaths appeared to have ended, and as soon as the painting restarted the birds commenced to die very rapidly again. I then sent two birds—an old one and one of this year's—to Mr. Yates for examination, who found that death resulted in each case from pneumonia, as a sequel or complication to infectious septicaemia (blood poisoning by absorption into the circulation of the blood of poisonous or putrid matter). He sent a bottle of medicine, and gave good advice; but all was of no avail, as I think I waited too long before applying to him. Four birds were sold just before the painters started, which, I know, are now in excellent health; hence my conclusion as to the cause.

MRS. F. HORLEBOG.

To Rid an Aviary of Earwigs.

SIR,—I should be glad if one of the many readers of CAGE BIRDS could tell me how to rid my aviary of earwigs. I find about half-a-dozen in each seed box every time I feed. It gives one the "creeps" to go in the place.

T. MORROLL.

The Purley and District Cage Bird Society.

SIR,—The first meeting of this society was held on August 9, at Gardeners Pleasure Resort, Kenley. Mr. G. Harris was elected chairman for the evening. Several fanciers were present, amongst whom were: Dr. Kellett and Mr. Wade (both of Coulsdon), and Mr. F. Botell, of Whyteleafe. The Chairman made a few opening remarks, in which he said he hoped all bird fanciers in the district would become members, and thus help us to make ours a thorough good society, and so get new recruits to our most fascinating and profitable hobby. He also asked members present to bring from time to time any specimens of Canary, British or foreign birds they might have, for the edification of novices. It was then proposed by Mr. Wade, and seconded by Mr. Botell, "That Mr. G. Harris, 3, Bourne Cottages, Little Roke, Kenley, be secretary for 1910," which was carried. All communications should be addressed to him. Our next meeting is to be held at 8 p.m. on Aug. 24th, at the Terminus Dining Rooms, Purley. We trust all fanciers in the district will attend. We wish to elect all the officers and to transact general business. I may say we expect to have some specimens on view that evening. The society will be open to all fanciers residing in Surrey, Sussex, Kent and Middlesex. The annual subscription is 3s.; members joining less than one month before annual show, 4s. We trust fanciers will attend in large numbers, as we are desirous of holding a show this year.

Shows and the Guaranteeing of Prize Money.

SIR,—Owing to my being away on holidays, I was unable to reply to my humorous friend "Charlie" in last week's issue of CAGE BIRDS. I am inclined to think that my friend has not grasped the object of my letter. He says, "Am I to risk 3s. 6d. and a bird for you to try and make a profit?" That's just the thing I'm complaining of. I say, if you send your birds out you do risk it, and I do not see why you should. The best way I can put it to "Charlie" is this: Are all the shows guaranteed in reality that advertise as guaranteed? I can quite understand his saying they would not get any entries unless they said the money was guaranteed, but is it not too late after you've been caught? What I said was: Do not guarantee unless you can pay in the event of failure; and at the same time I gave some reasons in support of the cause of failure. I really must ask "Charlie" to read my letter again. I can assure him that I need no putting "strate," as I have not guaranteed anything. He seems to think that all exhibitors who have sent birds in guarantee classes have got their cash. He is mistaken. As for holding his own money and a bit of somebody else's, that is a good dictum but I, for one, have an idea that everybody else is trying to do the same, and amongst these the guarantors. It is, of course, the simplest matter in the world to guarantee if you've the money behind you, but if you have not, it is practically bordering on insanity to risk the guarantees during such inclement weather. As for guaranteeing, I say, do so by all means, but do let it be worth a little more than the paper it is written upon. The word "guarantee" has become quite a stock word in advertising shows, because it conveys the impression that the "hard" is behind it. The impression it conveys to me is that a great many exhibitors are what are called sports in the truest sense of the word, and though it may be an attribute to the persons concerned, it is bad for the Fancy. They have an idea that they will get the money some day, and I, for one, would be sorry to spoil so beautiful a reverie, but on the material side of the thought they, like "Charlie," won't send any more entries.

IPSO FACTO.

Cardiff Fanciers and the Cardiff Birds.

SIR,—When I wrote you last week I thought this matter was closed, but it has re-opened again from another quarter, namely, by a self styled "Lover of Justice," who wrote to the "Western Mail":

SIR,—I have been greatly interested in reading the correspondence in your columns under the above heading, and also greatly amused at the ignorance the hon. secretary of the Cardiff Naturalists' Society shows of the subject he is discussing, and also of the object of the Cardiff Cage Bird Society in trying to get the order repealed.

In a recent case where a person was prosecuted for having in his possession fresh-caught birds, the magistrate held that although the birds had been caught in an unprotected county, any person having them in his possession in a protected county or area was liable to prosecution and fine. On appeal to a higher court this decision was upheld.

Therefore, although the birds were legally caught, any person living in a protected area could not keep them, although his neighbour, living probably a few doors off, but in another area, could do so. This is absurd.

We in Cardiff are in this predicament. Birds can be caught wholesale in Monmouthshire or Glamorgan, yet the inhabitants of Cardiff render themselves liable to prosecution if they have them in their possession. The object of the Cage Bird Society in trying to get the order rescinded is not so much that they may catch birds, but that they may keep them as pets.

There are very few places in Cardiff where it would be possible to catch birds, and if the order were repealed very little difference would be made to the number of birds owing to what were caught in Cardiff. The birds that would be caught would be taken outside the city boundary, where it is legal at present to take them. What the bird fanciers of Cardiff would gain would be the right to indulge in their hobby without breaking the law.

The hon. secretary also talks about the Divine right of birds to live. I would like to remind him that other creatures besides birds also have that right, and I should like to know how he views the Divine right of that splendid collection of butterflies and moths that he possesses.

A LOVER OF JUSTICE.

This letter received a reply from "the opposition" as follows:—

SIR,—The letter on the above subject, signed "Lover of Justice," in your columns to-day provides a pitiable example of the way in which some people, without possessing the requisite knowledge, rush into print. Your correspondent says "birds can be caught wholesale in Glamorgan." This statement is quite untrue. As a matter of fact, the county of Glamorgan possesses a very up-to-date and comprehensive Wild Bird Protection Order. . . . Again, "Lover of Justice" says "there are very few places in Cardiff where it would be possible to catch birds." What are the facts? The total area of the borough is 8,500 acres (over thirteen square miles), and of this total less than one-half is taken up by building, etc. The borough extends westward to the Ely, eastward to the Rumney River, and includes most of Penylan.

This attempt to get the Wild Bird Order in Cardiff repealed is an attempt on the part of a few interested persons, led on by professional and amateur bird-catchers, to bar the march of progress and civilisation. Nearly all the more progressive cities and towns of the United Kingdom have now Wild Bird Protection Orders in force. Why should Cardiff, having come into line with these, be expected, in the interest of the few, to take a retrograde move? The idea is preposterous.

FAIROAK.

"Fairoak's" letter received this reply from "A Lover of Justice":—

SIR,—Your correspondent "Fairoak" appears to wander rather from the point at issue. I am, I expect, quite as well versed as he regarding the number of birds protected in the different districts, but I should like to point out that there are very few birds, comparatively speaking, that are of any use to the fancier as pets or for show purposes, and several of these birds do not appear in the Glamorgan list.

Your correspondent also appears to be under the impression that birds can be caught on any vacant piece of ground, and because only half of Cardiff is built upon, therefore, it is possible to catch birds on the other half. I should like him to try. I expect he would be tired before the birds.

His remarks about the bird catchers and dealers being behind the movement I deny emphatically, and challenge him to prove it. No body of people strive to put down the malpractices of these worthies more than the Cage Bird Society.

The subject at issue is this: Shall a working man be allowed to keep birds as pets, or shall he not? At present the law says that in Cardiff he shall not, with the exception of a few species that it would be useless for him to try. But if he goes to reside in Monmouthshire he may keep as many as he likes with the exception of two species, and in Glamorgan all but the twenty or thirty species referred to by your correspondent.

No one is more against the wholesale slaughter of birds than myself, but I think it is a shame that anyone is to be deprived of keeping a bird because a few "faddists" have got the impression it is wrong.

LOVER OF JUSTICE.

I think the Naturalists' Society has got on the right side of the "Western Mail" people, judging by editorial notes in the "Western Mail" and "Evening Express." So you see we have the local Press against us, however our application results. I hope we will gain the day.

LLANDRINDOD WELLS.

Considering the unfavourable time of year, quite a nice little show was that got together by the Llandrindod Wells F. and F.A., and held in the Pavilion in the Town Hall Grounds on August 11th. Messrs. P. Muscott and F. Beard acted as secretaries, and associated with them were the following committee: Messrs. E. Hawthorn (chairman), L. J. Solomon (treasurer), J. Heighway, J. C. Bufton, R. P. Bufton, Jas. Bufton, J. Shopland, and J. Davies. The cage birds were nicely staged, and Mr. Muscott, who took especial charge of this section, worked hard to make it a success. He is to be congratulated on his able management, and on his tact and courtesy. A magnificent lot of specials were provided for the cage bird section, and it is to be hoped there will be even more appreciation shown next year. Mr. C. A. House judged.

PENKETH (near Warrington).

Annual Young Bird Show held Aug. 13, in connection with the Horticultural Show, under canvas in the village. Some 60 birds turned up. Amongst these were to be seen some very pretty young Yorkshires and some very fine Norwich and Norwich Greens. The latter made a strong class of 10, and length of body and length of feather had to give way to good colour and more cobby type. Type and colour are great factors to reckon with, and here they were found very strongly in evidence. A nice Canary Hybrid or two were on view, but were showing signs of moult. A Chaffinch led the British bird class, whilst a nice perfectly feathered Blue-fronted Amazon won in the Foreign bird class. A fine lot of specials were given, but these all were allotted for points. Mr. J. Hampson's son (Mr. A. Hampson) was cage bird secretary, and with his father at his elbow he did his work in really good style. There was a grand attendance of fanciers from Warrington, Widnes, Runcorn, and St. Helens, etc. Mr. Chas. Houlton judged, and very little comment was heard.

WOLSINGHAM & WEAR VALLEY

Show held August 10th on same site as the County Show in 1892 and 1906. The day was fine, and the tents were crowded with visitors. Entries came up fairly well considering the time of year, some well-known exhibits being staged. The British bird class was most interesting. The secretarial duties were ably carried out by Mr. T. C. Hume, and he was well backed up by a hard-working committee. Mr. T. J. Ambrose (Bradford) judged, and gave every satisfaction.

ON THE TOP RUNG:

And How I Got There.

(A series of brief illustrated interviews, by Mr. Thos. Aitken, with several prominent fanciers North of the Border. Previous subjects have been Mr. A. M'Farlane (Norwich), Mr. G. G. Henderson (British), Mr. W. M'Clure (Scots Fancy), Mr. A. Chalmers (Norwich, etc.), Mr. R. B. Jarvie (Norwich) Mr. L. J. Arrighi (Foreign and British birds and hybrids), and Mr. James Winter (Norwich).—Editor.)

Mr. John Brown (Edinburgh).

Mr. John Brown is undoubtedly one of Scotland's oldest and foremost British bird exhibitors. He has been keeping birds for about sixty years, and exhibiting them for over forty. Although advanced in years, John is still keen on his birds, and by no means contemplating a time when the cleaning of them and tending to their wants will be too much of an exertion. Let us hope that time is a long way off, and that this straight and warm-hearted Scotsman may be long in the ranks of the British bird Fancy.

Mr. Brown's birds—all British, with a few hybrids—numbering forty-eight, are kept in a room which is devoted entirely to them, adjoining his office. Simply housed in box cages, the birds are as fit and trim as anyone could wish to see them, although not having the advantages of an aviary. Here, too, are kept only the best specimens of Britishers. Three Missel Thrushes—one of which, "The Stormer," has over two hundred first prizes to his name—two Fieldfares, Blackbird, Magpie, three Song Thrushes, Larks, Yellowhammers, Goldfinches, Bullfinches, both British and foreign, Greenfinches, Linnets, etc.

"You prefer box cages for your birds, Mr. Brown?"—"Yes; box cages are best for British birds; in the wire cages they knock about too much and fray their feathers."

"Have you ever bred any British birds in the house?"—"Oh, yes; plenty. I have even bred Thrushes, seven of them, and here now I have a pair of Bullfinches in this long flight cage with eggs in the nest, but whether anything will come of the eggs I can't say. I may say that I hand-rear all my soft-bills."

"What is your favourite food for hand-rearing them?"—"Hens' hearts are the best thing for bringing up young birds."

"My stock food for soft-bills is made up of coarse pea-meal, minced liver, and rind suet, with a little sugar and salt added, and that's the best all-round food ever I've known for British soft-bills. I moisten it with olive oil, and occasionally add a little grated carrot. The salt helps to keep it."

"Just before the moult I mix red-feed with this food, making it stronger as the moult progresses, keeping the colour in throughout. I use cold pepper; no hot. The more red-feed I add the redder the beaks of my Blackbirds get. Mon, I've had some grand Blackies, with beaks like 'sodgers' coats. I keep my birds low down, and they all get a bath at least once a week, and usually oftener."

"How about your hardbills?"—"Oh, aye! I think I have been very successful where Bullies and Goldies are concerned. I moult all my birds in cages by themselves. I feed on a mixture of all kinds of seeds. I give plenty of wild seeds, too. Groundsel is one of the best things for Britishers, and horsenuts (hard-heads); my word! they're the things for colour. There is nothing that improves the colour of Goldies more than horsenuts, with, of course, groundsel and thistles in addition. These are the three principal things if you want colour in your birds."

"It is no use feeding Bullies on too much hemp seed; it soon kills them, and it serves Linnets the same. Give any amount of hemp to Goldies. I have seen some grand Goldies live entirely on hemp."

"And don't you give inga?"—"Inga! They never get any inga (or niger seed, as some call it) from me. I never bother with maw seed either. The Scotch Linnets I may say I consider are the best for exhibition; the red-breasted birds are no good, they're a 'flat' lot."

"By the way, do you know that I intend giving up judging? Yes; I think I am getting too old; also I don't like the way certain people have written to the Fancy Press, saying that they will 'take me up,' just because I spot the paint on their birds when they exhibit."

The Breeding of Foreign Birds in Cages.

The Experiences of an Irish Fancier.

By G. W. DORAN.

To those who, like myself, have not the convenience of a garden aviary for breeding those extremely captivating and very pretty members of the bird world, I trust the following remarks on the selection of suitable birds for cage life, and the management of same, may be valuable, especially to those just starting the hobby. I will confine myself to a few of the commoner species of foreign birds which are both easy to manage and, what is more important, within the reach of the shortest purse.

Zebra Finches.

Zebra Finches being the first foreign birds which I purchased, it is only fair I should give them premier place in what I have to say. These birds are often confounded with the species known as Zebra Waxbills; so in order to prevent this mistake I will give a description of their plumage. The prevailing colours of the cock Zebra Finch are pearl grey above and white beneath; the primaries of the wings and the tail black, the tail being marked with white stripes; the beak and legs are orange red; the throat and sides of neck are marked with black Zebra-like stripes and the cheeks are marked with a chestnut-coloured patch.

In order to ensure success in the breeding operations, each pair must be given a separate cage. The larger it is, the better; but it should not be less than twenty-four inches long and eleven inches wide. A cocoanut husk may be used for the purposes of a nest, but I prefer a nest-box, as Zebras love to make an enormous nest.

Canary and millet seeds, together with greenfood, are all that will be required for keeping these pretty little birds in good health. But should any youngsters put in an appearance, some good soft food must be given.

These birds are very liable to a peculiar disease of the feet, which commences by one of the toes becoming inflamed, a yellow waxy substance showing under the skin. When the disease first appears, the sick bird should be caught, and if it is found that the disease has not extended beyond the first joint, the toe should be amputated with a sharp pair of scissors. The only way to prevent the disease is to keep the cages scrupulously clean, and I warn my readers that unless the cages are so kept, the disease is almost certain to appear. From my experience I am inclined to think this malady a contagious one, so that affected birds should be isolated until they are completely cured. This disease and egg-binding are the only troubles that are likely to mar the happiness of these sprightly little favourites.

Bengalese.

The strange little birds known as Bengalese are produced by a process of selective breeding. They are imported into this country from Japan, and as they are equally entitled to be called cage birds as are Canaries, they have every right to claim a place in this essay. There are three varieties or rather three different colours of Bengalese—the pure white, the brown and white and the black and white. The pure white Bengalese are not so common as the other two.

These birds are extremely tame, and as they appear quite happy, no matter how small the house may be in which they are confined, they are perhaps more suitable for cage life than any of the small foreign Finches. A cocoanut husk makes a very suitable nesting site, but they must be given a supply of nesting material, consisting of soft moss, cow hair, and small feathers. They lay from one to six or eight eggs, and incubation takes about a fortnight.

The difficulty experienced in determining the sexes is the chief drawback to success with these birds. The head and beak of the female are narrower than those of her mate; also the male possesses a peculiar little song something like that produced when a cork is rubbed on a bottle.

These birds may be given the same food as Zebra Finches, but insect-food must be given sparingly, except when young are being reared, as it causes the birds to become too fat, and so leads to egg-binding.

Cut-throats.

The Cut-Throat is somewhat larger than either of the two preceding species. The prevailing colour is light brown. Each feather is tipped with white, which gives the bird the appearance of being covered with scales. The cock bird has a crimson band across the throat, and as the female lacks this mark the sexes are easily distinguished.

These birds are almost as free breeders as Zebra Finches, and may be fed and treated the same. They lay from four to eight eggs, which take between ten and twelve days to hatch. The young birds develop rapidly, and begin to think of setting up a house of their own in about nine months.

Budgerigars.

The Budgerigar is so well known, even to the most ignorant of novices, that I need not give a description of its plumage. Suffice to say, that there are two varieties, the yellow and the green. The former is the more expensive, though the green variety is without doubt the prettier of the two. They should have a roomy cage. If for one pair, it should not be less than two feet long, and about eleven inches wide; if for two pairs it should be about 40 inches long. The birds settle down to breed much more quickly when two or more pairs are kept together.

Take particular notice of the word pairs, for an odd bird, whether a merry bachelor or a cantankerous old maid, will so annoy the happy couples on matrimony intent as to prove utterly destructive to the domestic felicity of all concerned.

A large husk makes a good nest, but I prefer personally to make a wooden nest box, about eight inches high by six wide, and put half a husk inside for the eggs to rest upon. I have seen sawdust recommended for this purpose, but where it is used the eggs often get covered, and consequently do not hatch.

The simplicity of their menu alone should make Budgerigars great favourites. Canary seed, red, white and spray millet seeds and clean water are sufficient to keep these birds in good health. But they are very fond of flowering grass and chickweed, and when they have young they enjoy a stale crust or dry biscuit, and I think this helps to give them size and strength. To distinguish the sexes; it will be found that the "nose" of the cock bird is blue, and that of the hen a brownish-grey.

On the subject of disease I need say very little, as Budgerigars are one of the hardiest species of foreign birds imported. If kept in confined quarters they suffer from over-fatness; but a fly round the room and a mild dose of Epsom salts will soon cure this malady.

If they go to nest in cold weather, the owner should keep a sharp lookout for egg-binding, and act accordingly. One word before I bring my notes to a close: Take in CAGE BIRDS every week, and you will learn more about birds from the pages of this valuable weekly in three months than you would find out by yourself in ten years.

Caged Birds.

By FLORENCE MATHER BURTON.

We have pleasure in publishing, by request, this appeal on behalf of the Fresh Air Fund. This Fund is doing a great and deserving work, and bringing at least one bright day in each year to thousands of the unfortunate children of the slums of the majority of our large cities and towns. Any donations, however small, with which readers of CAGE BIRDS may feel disposed to further the worthy objects of the Fund should be sent direct to the Hon. Secretary, Mr. Ernest Kessell, 24 St. Bride Street, London, E.C.

The flowers are here in profusion in field and garden. The roadside in country lanes is gay with humble blossoms, the river's bank is all aglow. The flowers come as messengers of brightness and hope to weary sufferers in homes and hospitals. And yet we hear of little children who know not flowers, have rarely seen them, or, having seen a daisy once, henceforth call all flowers daisies, so little do they know of fields and gardens, singing birds, and country life. They may have seen a "caged bird," but of those birds that sing and fly they know little or nothing. They are "caged birds" themselves, cooped up in slums and alleys where the sunshine only comes in sideways, and the "fresh" air has no freshness in it.

There are lovers of birds who make pets of their feathered friends, keep them in ornamental cages, tend them with care, feed them regularly and supply them with facilities for bathing and other essentials of bird life in the form of sand, gravel, etc. Such persons love birds genuinely, and the birds minister to their pleasure in cages. But to some bird-lovers the thought of making prisoners of the birds is abhorent to them. They feel it is bordering on cruelty to keep the little creatures "cribbed, cabined and confined," and look upon "caged birds" as sad sights; but they are nothing like so saddening to behold as the little human "City Sparrows" that are confined in dingy back streets, alleys, and mews in our large cities. Of all "caged birds" they most need sympathy and a kind hand that will open the door and let them out.

The Fresh Air Fund is one of the most active and generous hands in setting free thousands of "City Sparrows" every year for a day or a week in the pretty country. It is a big, powerful hand which wants contributions from hands of all sorts and sizes, so that it may set many little captives free, if only for a day.

Watch the birds in the country at the present time; notice them in any park or garden. The fresh air and freedom are their heritage. How joyfully they sun themselves and preen their feathers as they perch on fence or rail; now prying down to seek some scattered grain or hunt for a fat young worm. Life is a joyous thing to them. Truly, they are not idle; they must seek their food, build their nests, rear and tend their young; but they thus fulfil the eternal law of Nature. But they choose the freshest of air and sunniest of skies.

With what freedom they wing themselves from cheerless climes of damp and cold to clear air and warm sunshine! Miles they come and go across moor and ocean. They seem the embodiment of happiness as they flit about from tree to tree; and happy they are, except when boy or man robs their nests or slaughters their young.

How interesting are all birds: even the noisy Rooks with the Caw! Caw! Caw! Their ways are clever and curious. They clean out their old nests and renovate and utilise them for further requirements. What a marvellous instinct they show as to weather. What a fine summer ornament their nests are, fastened to the highest branches of a tall tree; but if it is a wet season the wary Rook will be found to have placed his home on a more protected bough or lower fork of the tree.

Think of the Thrush, with his sweet song in early Spring, and the Missel Thrush, whose notes are stronger and more stirring, if less sweet. Listen to the flute-like whistle of the Blackbird at early morn or setting sun. With what vigorous melody he fills the air!

Oh, that our people could, or would, go back to the land, and obtain a small holding which they would be proud to labour on and enjoy the fruit of their labour.

If but a few of the parents of to-day get this advantage, their children—the parents of to-morrow—may have the opportunity, and may by "Fresh Air Fund" outings learn, to know and love the country and realise that it has joys which town has not. The great open space, the tall trees, the flowers that anyone may pick, the birds and the sunshine are a veritable revelation to little slum-bred children. It all shows them a world fresh and beautiful of which they knew little.

These little "caged birds" revel in the freedom which somebody's money, anybody's money—oh, that I could say everybody's money—has helped to give them. Is it not a well-invested ninepence that takes a child out of dingy slums into the fresh, pure air for a day, and feeds it in rural surroundings?

Under the White Rose.

BRADFORD WEST and Windhill Societies are to engage in a friendly game of cricket to-day, Saturday, the battle ground being at Menston, which is within easy reach of Bradford, and is a lovely place, as all who know Wharfedale will tell you. Those who go are sure to have a good day out. It does not matter, whether members or not: a hearty invitation is extended to all fanciers and friends. The time of departure is 2 p.m. from the Midland Station, Bradford. Visitors are requested to meet there not later than 1.45, so that arrangements can be made. After the match tea will be provided at the Fox and Hounds at a charge of one and ninepence per head. If you are going, be prepared to do justice to the catering, which is first-class.

THE testimonial fund which was opened some time ago by the Yorkshire Canary Club, for their secretary, Mr. John Greaves, in recognition of his valuable services to the club over a very long term of years, will be closed on Monday next. Therefore all who wish to subscribe to the fund and have not been in touch with any of the committee, should do so by forwarding same to the secretary of the fund, Mr. W. Crabtree, 16, Lytton Road, Girlington, who will be pleased to receive any contributions. Mr. Greaves' work in connection with the club dates back long before he undertook the arduous duties of secretaryship, and, as all members know, the club always gives away all it gets, and there was never anything left for any grant—indeed, any proposal for this always met with a curt refusal from Mr. Greaves. This time, however, the club would not take his refusal, but formed a small body of members to arrange for a testimonial to their secretary. He is worthy of it.

WILD bird life is very interesting just now. Some of the migratory birds are preparing for departure, others are gathering into flocks and visiting the feeding grounds in company. During the week end I saw a fairly large flock of Starlings in the same field as a large company of Plovers, and also a few Rooks. The Plovers, when they took to flight, were a fine sight. I tried to count them, but when I had reached 65 the head of the column swung round and joined the tail end; therefore I could not say exactly how many were there. I should say about a hundred; not a bad lot, as we were not so far out in the country.

"STRAIGHT 'UN."

Birds Among the Cherries.

By the numbers of wild birds to be seen on every side one is inclined to think the feathered creatures have had an unusually prolific season. The commoner birds are, no doubt, increasing in numbers annually, so that presently something will have to be done to keep the least desirable within reasonable limits. In every grass field one can see a flock of busy Starlings foraging among the long grass; and while they keep to the open fields and meadow lands they may be counted among our most useful birds. But when they raid one of the large cherry orchards of mid-Kent they are undoubtedly in the wrong place. Very few of the general public are able to realise the immense damage these bird do in quite a short space of time. I saw a tree which gave promise of having a fine crop literally stripped of the ripening fruit early one morning before anyone was about. The stones and half-eaten cherries were strewn thickly upon the grass.

Protection by the owner is almost impossible in large orchards, for so artful do the birds become that one can watch them robbing at one end of the plantation while the care taker is at the other. The melodious Blackbird is another big offender, especially among the softer fruits; being bold and fearless, he is not easily driven away; and then he quickly returns. This is especially the case where the plantations are near woods and gardens, as he can easily retreat to cover. Sometimes one may see the Blackcap and graceful Garden Warbler nibbling daintily at an over ripe fruit, but their appetites are small compared with those of the larger birds; besides which, they are easily tempted by the different insects infesting the trees, and I am, on the whole, inclined to think them more useful than harmful.

The familiar Robin will sometimes help himself to a little fruit, but it appears to be more by way of a change in diet than out of any greedy love for the crop: he does not make a meal of it, as do the larger birds. Quite recently I saw a family of Hawfinches among the old moss grown trees, and although I watched them for some time I did not notice any attempt to interfere with the fruit. They will no doubt visit the plantation later on, when they will feed upon the kernels of the cherry stones upon the ground.

A Working-man's Experiences with the Scotch Fancy Canary.

By ALEX. PURVES (Edinburgh).

A Great Mistake.

The hen will very often lay her second nest before the young ones can pick, when they will be only three weeks old, and sometimes not even that. This is the time a great many young birds die for the want of proper feeding by their parents. I know of many cases where the young have been starved to death by the fancier caging off the young and setting the hen on her second nest, and keeping the cock with her. It is a great mistake to cage off young birds when they are only three weeks old. Some birds may pick at that age, but the majority take four weeks, and some a few days more to be able to thoroughly pick and eat food for themselves.

When the hen has laid the third egg of her second nest, I stop all her soft-food and give her the plain Canary seed again, setting her on her eggs by herself, and taking away the young ones and the cock. Of course, I put them where she can see them, often hanging them on her breeding cage, and when she sees that everything is right with the young, and with the cock, she will settle down on her eggs. The young are three weeks old by this time, but I keep the cock with them till the second nest of young comes out; this makes them five week old. By this time they are both picking and fighting with the cock. But before I take them out of the hen's sight I wait till all her second nest is out; this gives her something new to look after, and helps her to forget her first young ones, and she is more keen on her second brood.

The "Back-bone" of the Young Bird.

When I cage off my young birds I still give them eggs chopped with rice biscuits for another week or two. One thing I never forget is a good supply of German rape seed, boiled for ten minutes and the water well strained off. This forms the backbone, as it were, of a young bird. It builds the young up and keeps their bowels free, without scouring them. A great many fanciers "sprout" the rape seed instead of boiling it. They cover the seed with water and let it stand for two days. The young are very fond of it this way, but I prefer to supply it boiled.

I never give young birds green-food after they leave the cock, as it is the first thing to give them diarrhœa. I give the young ones crushed hemp seed till they can break Canary seed. When I cage them off I put their drinking water inside their cage; this gives them a better chance of obtaining a drink, as some are very "dosy" for their age, and can't put their heads through the wires.

The first nest of young will likely go into the moult first. The moult is feared by many, but I must say that it never gives me much trouble. A sick or weakly bird may suffer, or die; but if the birds have been well fed when young, they will moult, and many of them will sing all through it.

The Exhibition of Scotch Fancies.

I have heard of many different ways and plans for getting the birds ready for the show bench. For instance, it is a common remark amongst fanciers that you should handle them as much as possible, and teach them to travel from perch to perch. This, I think, quite absurd, as far as working men are concerned. The man with means may get birds of this sort—full of nerve; what we would call freaks—but even then it does not do much good.

When I pick out the best of my young—those with size and style—I single them off for two weeks before the show, and I hang them as high as possible above all the others. This keeps them looking down on the rest of the birds, and helps to get the neck into its right position. I keep the perches low in the cage. If the perches are high the bird lands heavily on its feet; which knocks them "away" in the legs. I give them a very short jump from perch to perch, which are nine wires apart. This short jump "knocks" them up and back on their legs, but a long jump "knocks" them forward, making them lie over the perch, which is a very bad fault. I never give them more than two perches, because, if given a lot of perches, Scotch Fancies run over them, lying forwards all the time.

I disturb the birds as little as possible, just giving them seed and water without taking them down. True, they get a bit wild; but when you take them down, they are full of nerve, and "draw" away as soon as you get the cage in your hand. Many think that if the birds are wild, they will fly all over the cage, and hang on to the wires when they are getting judged. But that is not the case. The skilful hand of the judge will soon make them settle on the perch, and "draw" all they have, wild or not.

Sprains and Slipped Claws.

You may have a good young bird with a bad foot, such as a sprain or a slipped claw which can't grip the perch. A Scotch Fancy, remember, can never show what it has if it is unable to grip the perch firmly with both feet. When it is a case of a sprain, the bird will always be seen holding up its foot, which will be much swollen and sore to the touch. This bird should have a very low perch, almost on the bottom of the cage; and this perch should be square and cut out the full length, leaving it hollow inside. When the bird jumps it will grip the edges of the perch, while the sore part (being the sole) will be in the hollow, not touching at all. But for a slipped claw there are many cures, such as tying up the claw, an old cure, which, I think, makes it worse. The claw wants to come down and grip. I neither give the birds perches nor tie up the claw. I let them run on the bottom of the cage. But I make a piece of wood about two inches broad and about ¼ inch thick, and fix it to the bottom of the cage; the bird grips the narrow edge of this, and the slipped claw hangs down the broad side without getting fixed, as it would do on a narrow perch.

I would never now think of hand-washing a Scotch Fancy, although I have done it. I give a good spray, which I can do with my mouth as well as with a ball spray. Running three or four birds into a small cage, I spray them in the bath or sink. This keeps their own cages dry. A spray two or three times a week will make them as clean as they need to be.

You may have a good bird that has a short tail, which will take away a good point from it. You can add to the length of it by plucking it, as young birds do not cast their flight or tail feathers. I just pluck two feathers at a time, and I wait till the bird has started the moult.

If any young fancier wishes to show the Scotch Fancy, I think the best thing he can do is to join a club, when he will get a good run for his money. It will only cost him one shilling to join, and sixpence per month afterwards, and twopence for every hen he has. This, of course, is extra, costing him only seven shillings a season. He can stick in as many young birds as he can get cages for.

When you have shown birds you will have them to sell. If you can't get them away in the selling class, you will do well to advertise them in CAGE BIRDS, which gives you a good all-round-the-world advertisement for the money. I have sent birds thus to England and Ireland, and all over Scotland. After I sell my birds I wash their cages with carbolic soap, which disinfects them, and I give them a coat of varnish, which makes them as fresh as needs be. Having bred, shown, and sold them, I am almost ready to pair my remaining stock birds up again and start breeding.

CAGE BIRDS. 154, Fleet St., London, E.C.

Our Two Commonest Tits

Experiences with Blue and Great Titmice in Captivity.

By F. E. RYDER.

Sometimes Tits suffer from fits, to cure which they should be well "douched" with cold water when attacked. This complaint is caused by overfeeding and want of exercise, and for this reason a Tit's cage should be pretty large, and if it is open on all sides so much the better.

To Prevent Escape from Cage.

It is essential that his home should be made quite strong and safe, and that the wires should be very stiff and close. If this is not the case, he will soon make his escape by bending the wires aside, both with his bill and by pressure with his head, and as soon as he manages to get his head through, the job is as good as finished, for he will soon by his stringglings and wrigglings manage to make his little body follow it.

Tits can be captured in various ways, and one of the best is the following:—If a call-bird is put in a small cage, he will certainly soon attract any of his brethren who may happen to be near by, and as they will always fly upon his cage when they see him, they can be easily caught.

All that I have written about the "Blue Cap" applies equally to the Great Tit, with the exception that I never had any difficulty in getting them to feed and live; in fact, they rather seemed to like captivity, escaping if possible, but very often returning to the trap to be caught again.

The Blue Tit is extremely fond of a bath, more so, I think, than any other bird I know. His first procedure, Winter or Summer, is to wash and clean himself in the fresh water I always make it my first business to give him. And no half-hearted tub has he—no delicate dabbling and playing with the water—but in he goes with a jump vigorously splashing with very evident enjoyment. If meddled with, he makes a most peculiar hissing noise, very similar to the spitting of a cat; and he will also bite very sharply if he gets the opportunity.

The Notes of the Great Tit.

His usual note is a loud "Chi-Chi," similar to the sound produced when sharpening a saw, which has given him the name of "Saw-sharpener." His notes, however, are very varied, and I have often heard him give voice to a musical "Pink, pink," very similar to the call of the Chaffinch. In Spring and Summer he might almost be said to sing, but his voice is then overcome by his more gifted and more powerful competitors. He is the largest bird of his family, being five and a half inches in length.

The call of the Blue Tit is generally a single "tzee," or "pi, pi," very similar to that of the Great Tit; but it is much weaker and his other notes are not nearly so various or strong. They are easily imitated by rubbing a wet cork on a piece of glass, and I have often attracted the birds to within a few yards of me by this device.

Both the Great Tit and the "Blue Cap" are so well known that I do not think it necessary to describe them. The female in both varieties is duller in colour and rather smaller than the male; but no other outward difference is noticeable.

The Nesting Habits, Eggs, Etc.

The nesting habits, eggs, etc., of both are very similar. The breeding season is from early in April to July, and they nest usually in holes in trees, walls, or banks; but I have often heard of their nests being discovered in very queer places, such as bottles, pumps, and letter boxes; in fact, they seem to care very little where they do make their home, so long as it is warm and comfortable. It is composed of the softest materials, such as wool, dry grass, moss, hair and feathers. The eggs number anything from six to twelve, or even more, and are white, spotted with reddish brown, chiefly at the largest end, the Great Tit's being much larger than those of the Blue Tit's. Both Tits can, with patience, be taught many clever tricks.

In conclusion I would advise anyone who wants an amusing and interesting pet to try one of these birds. I know he will not be disappointed.
